Universal Service.

COL. ROOSEVELT is making a tour of Canada, speaking in favor of military conscription and universal military training. In some quarters the attitude of the ex-President seems to be misunderstood, and he is censured for preaching a doctrine that is alleged to be hateful to democracy. But his position in the present instance is unassailable; he is simply preaching a truism that is well understood in the West, if one party is permitted to carry a gun all others must go armed or submit to the domination of the one.

Germany has given an object lesson on the results to be obtained from compulsory military service that the rest of the world will not soon forget. Compulsory service is the open secret of the efficiency of the German troops. America, Great Britain and the British dominions were found in the position of a team that tries to learn inside baseball after the game is started. Something more than patriotism and personal courage are required to win battles. That something cannot be imparted overnight. The gospel of preparedness which Col. Roosevelt is now preaching is based on the democratic principle that all nations must consent to disarmament or all must go armed. He holds society is too cosmopolitan for one people to longer go armed while others discard their weapons. In this is to be found the crux of the present war: either the military machine of the Central Powers must be smashed or the United States and the British Empire must perfect machines as superior to that of the Hun as are their combined fleets to the German navy. There is no other way.

Passing of Russia.

AS A political subdivision Russia no longer exists. The separate provinces of what once composed the Russian Empire are operating under the provincial governments, but the greater portion of them have refused to acknowledge the authority of any central government. The situation is similar to that which would exist in the forty-eight States forming the United States if the Federal government were suddenly to collapse. The greatest confusion would come in finance, just as it has come in Russia, for the reason that the central government issues all money in circulation and exercises a general supervision over bank operations. There would not be absence of government, State and local governments would still exist for preserving interior peace and protecting property, but the function of a federal government would cease; forty-eight governments would be substituted for a single government and none of the forty-eight State governments would have authority over any other.

Gen. Kaledines, hetman of the Cossacks, will have nothing to do with the unstable Bolsheviki rule. The Don Cossacks have declared that they owe allegiance alone to their own leaders and the Lenine government is powerless to subdue them. Finland and Ukraine have established independent governments, as have Caucasia and Trans-Caucasia. Siberia is reported to favor a return to the rule of the Czar.

Students in current history are expressing the opinion that the Russia of the czars has passed forever, that the territory over which the House of Romanoff exercised suzerainty will never again be united. They are of the opinion that only a Cossack of the old school, one who favors a rule of blood and iron, can restore Russia to its former supremacy. But those who have taken actual part in the collapse of the federal government of Russia assert that the Cossack of blood and iron has passed away with other barbarians and that the present Cossack generation is more inclined to be yellow than red. One fact alone is uncontestable, Russia has lost its force; it is no longer either respected or feared. The federal government has collapsed and there is no immediate prospect for a united Russia, either as monarchy or republic.

Classifying the Sammies.

SINCE the United States became an active participant in the present world war there has been an awakened interest among European countries in American history. There is an almost feverish perusal of all works relating to the conduct of the Civil War. So great has this interest become that a number of new Civil War books appear among the holiday book offerings. It is reported that the sale of these publications is three times as heavy in England as in this country.

This renewed interest in the Civil War is but natural. There was not enough fighting in the Spanish-American War to really classify the American soldier, and it is to the Civil War that the strategists must turn to form their estimates. The general verdict of the British critics is favorable to the American soldier. They point out that the loss of life sustained in many of the regiments engaged during the Civil War was greater than anything reported during the present war. There is some unfavorable comment on the number of desertions reported; but this is explained by the more thoughtful critics on the theory that there were times when the armies were left practically without supplies, and that it was during these times, and not when the fighting was hardest, that desertions occurred.

German strategists assert that it was the troops of German birth and training that formed the backbone of the Union fighting force during the war; but the English critics have rejoined by quoting statistics to show that not one Union soldier in eight was of German birth. It is the consensus of opinion that, judged by his Civil War record, the American soldier will prove a resourceful and stubborn fighter.

Ambition Versus Justice.

"PRETEND not to render God the protector of your ambition but the executor of your good desires." This admonition of Fenelon, French author and Archbishop of Cambrai, given more than 200 years ago, is especially applicable to the position of the German Emperor in the present war. He does not hesitate to claim that the God of Battles is fighting with the German arms; but he is utterly unable to give any justification for such a choice on the part of the "Divine Commander."

It is the very essence of Christian faith that God is the exemplification of justice, that the Divine Power fights with right against force and that "One with God is a majority." While there has been no blasting the hordes of the Huns with a breath, there have been a number of times when a divine justice seemed to tip the balances of fate on the side of the Allies. The appeal of Germany is an appeal of ambition, that of the Allies is one for equal justice to all, including the German people themselves. Surely the Allies have nothing to fear in trusting their case to the decision of the God of Justice, who is also the God of Nations.

Having The Hives.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

AMONG other things we are to do to head off a sugar famine and save the country is to keep a bee.

The Department of Agriculture is urging all householders to take up bee culture—even people who have never had the hives. I got word about it from Dave Houston recently and have seen some of the literature sent out by his department governing the subject. If every family had a bee or two there would be honey in the larder and the cry of baby for sugar would not be so clamorous. Furthermore honey is wholesome and desirable refreshment for the human interior and besides being a substitute for sugar may easily take the place of syrup or sauce.

Furthermore bee keeping is an interesting and inexpensive avocation. It is like play time on the farm. It doesn't take a lot of capital to entertain a whole herd of bees. They are lusty foragers and if it comes to a show down they can live off the enemy's country. Even a barbed wire entanglement has no terrors for an enterprising bee—in fact her bite tastes like a bit of barb wire anyhow. Give a bee a home, a patch of sage and somebody to slave for and he'll work his fool head off.

In a general way there are two classes of beekeepers. These are the professionals and the rank amateurs. The professionals have a language, a literature and a religion all their own. Likewise they have Maurice Maeterlinck for a poet. They have their societies and their publications, just the same as people who raise Orpington hens or Toggenburg goats. The government doesn't have to show these folk anything. They are on the spot.

But it is the amateurs the department would encourage. They would put a bee in the bonnet of every housewife. Exactly how a dweller in one of these dinky little flats could play at bee-keeping is hard to figure out. He might have to keep his bee in the icebox and feed it on the carnations in the window seat. The Agricultural Department says that bee-keeping is a perfectly fascinating trade. The bee is the swellest non-union worker in the business. He doesn't care a rap about hours as long as he has plenty of stock to work up. He is abroad with the sun and if trade is good he is willing to stay out till dusk. He is not particular as to accommodations and on occasions is known to find a home in a hollow tree and fill the same with honey.

So it will be seen that in a time of conservation and economy the bee is worthy of encouragement. Start off with a queen and little casino and one may soon have a whole pack. The queen is a valuable card and her subjects stay by her as long as the place will hold them all. The working bees go forth at her bidding and the sweets they bring are really for the sustenance of her royal highness. But man steps in and robs the place and then the bees have to go back to work.

On one or two occasions we have planned a career of bee-keeping out our way, but never had a good start. We have tried to trap the flock when a stray swarm passed through the neighborhood, but were never very successful. As a bee-trapper I am a punk performer. I would put on the red mittens and other regalia of the reception committee and at times have even sung for them, but without avail. They would simply spike me and pass on. Yet it is said that the bees are among the wisest and ablest of our insects. They are almost human in their ways. This is illustrated by the fact that all the stinging is done by the female of the species.

Married men who have been stung will please stand up.

When I learned that the Department of Agriculture wanted more beekeepers in America, I wrote to Dave telling him that if he would send me a polite and refined bee I would give it an affluent home and bring it up as my own. Then I learned that the only individual bees thus dealt in are from the royal family of Italy. Some of these doughty dames are quite valuable and it is not unusual for a man to cough up ten bucks for the companionship of a choice Italian queen.

But possibly it is worth while.

There used to be a lot of German bees in the country, but they are not overly popular just now. They are fussy and quarrelsome and seem to retain a great deal of the disposition of the Kaiser. The German bees work with considerable [illegible] they get mad easy and will [illegible] to sting the hand that feeds [illegible] are German clear to the prickly [illegible] fastened to the backbone.

On the other hand the Italian [illegible] sunny and good natured. They [illegible] in disposition and amiable in [illegible]panionship. Also they are [illegible] capable workers and [illegible] sweets for a sour day. It is [illegible] that they have superseded the [illegible] species in the affection of the [illegible] of America. Sometimes when a [illegible] swell queen he will clip her wings [illegible] she will never care to wander [illegible] own fireside. Possibly this is [illegible]ject leson for mere man.

Occasionally a man will call [illegible] "Honey," but does he mean it?

It doesn't take much money to [illegible] entertain a few families of [illegible] party plans to be a wholesale [illegible] them in a lavish way a whole [illegible] can be spent. A man may keep [illegible] an old soap box or he can [illegible] steam-heated apartment with all [illegible] improvements. The bees will [illegible] about as well in one case of the [illegible] the swell places show up well [illegible]

As an egg producer the queen [illegible] star performer. When she is [illegible] she will out up about 2000 eggs [illegible] she will keep this up for two [illegible] years. If she could be crossed [illegible] Barred Rock hen it would make [illegible] with Hoover.

But if each household is [illegible] its own honey mine it will cause [illegible]barrassment. Lots of folk will [illegible] entertaining their neighbor's [illegible]kins will be telephoning to [illegible] and take his bees out of the [illegible]tunia patch. Mabel will make [illegible] a petulant bee from the colony [illegible] flies over on the front porch and [illegible] lip.

Small boys who like to [illegible]mals will be encouraging [illegible] Italian and German flocks. [illegible] sicking Garibaldi on Von [illegible] the innocent bystander will [illegible] usual.

It is said that although [illegible] quite simple real [illegible] They are the [illegible] acquaintance with the [illegible] with them on equal terms. [illegible] them as carelessly as if [illegible] peanuts. Usually a man [illegible] careful how he handles a [illegible] he picks it up in gentle [illegible] it will jab its toadstabber [illegible] fiendish frenzy. Your [illegible] carry a swarm of bees [illegible] shirt without having a single [illegible]

If we are to have bees, [illegible] come tolerably easy in California. [illegible] nature has spread a bountiful [illegible]der for their refreshment and [illegible] be flavored with everything [illegible] blossoms down. The bees may [illegible] the alfalfa, the wild sage and [illegible] fields and then finish up in the [illegible]cense of the pomelo and lemon [illegible] they may flit abroad most of [illegible] year. They even bring bees [illegible] hills of Utah and Wyoming to [illegible] in the peerless Southland. [illegible] return to the north, either [illegible] emulate the example of the [illegible] and flit away from old [illegible] and comfort in new ones.

When it comes to supplying [illegible] honey California is a great [illegible] the country. The peach bloom [illegible] poppy blooms are more [illegible] grant life of a bad [illegible] eternal.

The bee is worthy of his [illegible] expansion of the sweet [illegible]ing honey may be a valuable [illegible] measure. Poets have sung of [illegible] industry of the bee and he [illegible] up as an example of thrift [illegible] is all right to have such [illegible] ing the nation in times of [illegible]

But if we are to take a bee [illegible] we prefer one with the [illegible]

We were visiting a cemetery, and there in the gloaming of the dying day he pointed out many monuments of distinguished men who had been the Eagle's friends in the days of yore.

The Eagle's mind naturally loves to dwell on these times.

The days of old, the days of gold.

He gets many letters from people he never met who read with delight whatever he says about his friends and their friends, and concerning events in which they are, and he is interested. One such letter came to the Eagle the other day. It was from a railroad man, one who helped to build the Central Pacific and who came to the Coast about the time the Eagle did. He is now a resident of Los Angeles, and in the letter referred to he speaks of the wonderful growth and improvement that have taken place in Southern California since he first came here. He knew the late Collis P. Huntington well, and he says that he wrote a letter to that great man many years ago prophesying the future of the city and the surrounding country, and advising Mr. Huntington to invest all the money he could spare in Los Angeles city lots and lands in the country round about.

This reminds the Eagle of a similar circumstance. As much as thirty years ago the Eagle in talking to the late E. E. Hewitt, then superintendent of the Southern Pacific lines near Los Angeles, learned that Mr. Hewitt made the same representations to all of the Big Four, but that they all turned a deaf ear to him excepting one.

The Big Four consisted of C. P. Huntington, Charles Crocker, Leland Stanford and "Squire" Hopkins. The squire was the only one of the four whom Hewitt could ever impress with the coming importance of Los Angeles and Southern California. Like most old-timers, they committed the grave mistake of thinking that San Francisco was the whole State, and the only place ever destined to become large.

This recalls to the Eagle's mind another conversation had with another associate of the Big Four. This one was very intimate with the great railroad men, and often sat with them around the council board. He says the four men, when any big project was before them, always met to discuss it. Stanford spoke the most and had the least influence. Crocker came next in volubility, and to him they all gave close attention. Huntington said very little, but what he said was right to the point and counted for much in the decision.

Here comes the queer thing in this decision. Squire Hopkins never said a word during the discussion, but when it was ended all three turned to him and asked, "What is your opinion in the matter, Squire?" And invariably, whatever the silent man said the others adopted.

Another letter received by the Eagle the other day is from a man now living in Venice who was one of the three employees of Wells Fargo & Co. in the city of Los Angeles about fifty years ago. That company has grown with the city and the country. The writer of the letter says there are now something like 400 on the pay roll.

The Eagle was unspeakably glad to get this letter, for it told him that William Pridham, agent of the company in those days in Los Angeles, was still living hale and hearty at 80 years of age. Billy Pridham was one of the best friends the Eagle ever had.

So much for the old in the Eagle's mind. What about the new? Your Eagle beloved, can say as Terence said:

Humani nihil a me alienum puto

The Eagle's mind is interested in everything new. He takes an intense interest in the war that is wrecking the world, and rejoices greatly that in the crisis facing the country, the greatest in its history, there is a man at the head of affairs so competent, so just, so wise, as our President. The presence of Mr. Wilson in the White House during these awful days for America confirms once more a theory held for years by the Eagle that God Almighty always had His almighty hand stretched out over America to protect it in all times of danger, to lead our beloved country safe through every crisis.

Now for the borrowed things in the mind of the Eagle. He has shown you those in discussing the old days, for most of his reminiscences are borrowed. So there remains the blue in the garb of the Eagle's mind.

The blue in the Eagle's mind is not that of "blue devils," nor that gloomy blue which oppresses the minds of men on "blue Monday" and other blue episodes in their lives.

The blue in the Eagle's garb is the blue of hope, of confidence, of optimism. It is the blue that overspreads this good earth of ours in the beautiful sky which God has so lovingly stretched over the heads of men. The Eagle feels like the man who wrote the letter about the future of Los Angeles. He has seen this city grow from a little adobe town and the country from a "cow county," to one of the most magnificent cities in America, and you know, beloved, that means in the world. In talking to a friend the other day, a neighbor of the Eagle on beautiful Coronado street, this neighbor said that nearly all the great buildings in the city had been constructed during the last seven years. He pointed out the fact that when he came here seven years ago, very few of the great buildings had been constructed. This is in a measure so, for just seven years ago the Eagle was taking a flight over Europe, and from Geneva in Switzerland he wrote a letter to The Times pointing out how far behind Los Angeles was in apartment-houses and tourist hotels. He came home at the end of the year to find Los Angeles away in advance of that or any other city in Switzerland in the respect in which it had been lacking when the Eagle took flight just twelve months before. The Eagle is not alone in his hope for Los Angels, as is proved by the letter of the railroad man quoted above, who says, "I am now predicting that Los Angeles will be the largest city in the world!" And he signs himself, "Yours for the future prosperity of the Angel City, Billy Welch."

Amen to that sweet prayer, says the Eagle, and it is a prayer that he has no doubt will be answered, so he signs himself, beloved, and it takes less than five minutes of absense for that merry little tag to affix itself to his wheel.

Yours for the Angel City, for Southern California, and for all the great growing Southwest. Long may they prosper.

Yours,

The Eagle

And if one leaves one's motor running while one dashes in to stock up on cigarettes—pinched again.

And of course it is simply scandalous what can happen to a nice humane motorist who bumps into some chuckled-headed pedestrian with suicidal tendencies—he is not only pinched but exposed to all the possible terrors of damages or the penitentiary, to say nothing of a distressful conscience, and there is no end to the discomfort and inconvenience he may be subjected to.

In fact, as any motorist will bear me out, the pedestrian is a far greater menace to the auto owner than the auto owner is to the pedestrian. It is simply shameful how pedestrians clutter up the motor roads, one is never safe from them. The absurd creatures seem forever bent upon getting to the other side of the road. Some people are never satisfied. There they are on a perfectly good safe sidewalk comfortably out of harm's way, but can a pedestrian be persuaded to stay there? Never. Always, always do these agitated, unbalanced pedestrians want to get to the other side. And the police always seem to be on the side of the pedestrian—in a country where all are equal before the law. The most lordly and important of motorists may find himself held up for several seconds at each downtown corner while a stupid group of pedestrians indulge their selfish and capricious desires to cross the road. You can see the thing happen any day. Many a haughty motorist has been late for a dinner engagement on this score and had to bear the reproachful glances of the hostess who is rather afraid of the wrath of her cook.

Comparative Shames.

Another sad thing in the motorist's life is his perpetual shame. If he doesn't own a car at all, he is of course, very apologetically shamed. And when he has acquired a Ford, he is always ashamed because he hasn't acquired a $90 self-starter to avoid that undignified cranking. When he has acquired the self-starter, he is ashamed because his car isn't a Dodge or a Chevrolet—the Ford is so common. Having cast off the shame of the Ford, he has acquired larger shames with the Dodge or the Chevrolet and is forever explaining that one day he will turn it in and get a Buick or a Saxon or a Glide. But even these satisfied ambitions wear off, for alas, your Buick or your Saxon or your Glide are the mere fringe of exclusive automobile society, and there never was an owner yet who, having attained thus far but began to feel stirrings of shame that they were not Hudsons or Pierce-Arrows or Cadillacs. One would suppose that the Hudson or the Pierce-Arrow or the Cadillac would bring the final contentment, the splendid shamelessness, but always there is the haunting superiority of the Rolls-Royce, or the Locomobile, which reek of the superlative dignities and are permeated with the sanctity of arch bishops, prime ministers and international financiers.

And so the dreadful march of eternal shame goes on. It is the same with our servants. When we haven't any we are ashamed of that. When we have one we are ashamed that it isn't two. And when we rise to the superb miseries and responsibilities of six, we are ashamed that it isn't eight or nine. Oh, but life is one long apologetic shame! There is always someone to cap our glories, someone to dim our triumphs. The lady with the $5000 mink cape is happy enough till she meets the lady in the $10,000 sable, and the $10,000 sable cringes with mortification in the presence of the $75,000 chinchilla or ermine.

Cinema Wealth.

There is really nothing quite so buoyantly exhilarating as the financial conversation of the cinema nabobs. They talk glibly in thousands, in millions. I know men who are prepared to assert that there isn't such a thing as a larger salary than $100 a month. They themselves are hovering on the brink of a rise which will bring their income to that dizzy figure and you could not persuade them that life held greater affluence. I remember myself when I would have pooh-poohed the idea that anyone could fail to be wealthy on $200 a month. I still think $5000 a year must be the ultimate culmination of affluent content. Especially after a talk with the editor on my unusual abilities.

But when a film nabob hoves in sight and starts talking with debonnair insouciance about $50,000 a year as though it were a mere bagatelle that quite modest talents can command in that dazzling profession, it certainly has a disturbing effect upon one's amiable content. You see all of us know so well that we are quite as clever if not more so than the persons who are fabled to be receiving these sumptuous sums and when we ourselves have proven through bitter test, that our own valuation is considerably below these figures—well, we just know it can't be true. There isn't that much money in the world, and that's all there is to it.

United States Promotion.

The United States government persists in its resolve to base promotion in the army and navy solely on fitness and merit. It is simply appalling what revolutionary methods can be got away with on the meretricious argument of winning the war. As any of our best conservative families with rights of privilege will tell you, this damned fitness and merit business is an outrage that only a war government in a crisis would dare to perpetrate. It will probably take years, years of the utmost persistence and determination to get the army and navy back to the place where a gentleman can enter it with any assurance of stability and permanence, to that place where he could be positively sure of a generalship or an admiralship in his old age. The government is using this war as a means of alienating the rights and privileges of a large class of our people who had so arduously won and secured the right to promotion by the honest and unequivocal method of simply growing older. It is so obvious that this "fitness and merit" innovation will lead to all sorts of vulgar aspirations, industry, study and ambition on the part of socially inferior young men, whom one would not previously have considered associating with in the times of well-ordered peace.

There is even talk of extending this revolutionary idea to the civil departments of the government. Quite scandalous, nobody will feel safe. The system can occasion nothing but nervous prostration in thousands, positively thousands of amiably incompetent lives, and a most unpatriotic German efficiency is bound to result.

It is commonly supposed that some animals never sleep, but that is because they do not close their eyes. Hares, snakes and fishes are creatures of this sort, but all of them do actually sleep and regularly. Whales and their kin are often spoken of as sleepless creatures, for it is supposed that if they lost consciousness they would promptly drown. The elephant, apparently invariably, and the horse, commonly sleep standing. This is really astonishing. Besides the difficulty of maintaining the balance of the body during long periods of unconsciousness it would seem that there must be some necessity for resting the muscles of the legs. Cattle usually sleep lying down, and during many hours of the day lie down.

THE ARMY OF JAPAN.

By a Member of the Army and Navy Journal Staff.

SHOULD the serious conditions in Russia and Italy demand that Japan send land forces to the battle front in Europe to aid the Allies, that nation would prove a most powerful factor, assuming that its armies could be transported in time. Some military strategists assert that it will be necessary that Japan send an army to Europe now that it is believed that Russia is practically out of the war and that Italy is considered a weak element.

The fighting ability of the Japanese it is none too much to assert is second to no army in the world, while the absolute obedience to every order including even those of the most trivial nature, is unequalled by any other army of the world, according to military observers, and military discipline, the foundations of all armies, is perfect in the Japanese army.

The Japanese have proved themselves to be among the hardiest, bravest and most resourceful soldiers in the world. Their remarkable power of resistance to cold the men displayed during the Russian-Japanese War caused universal surprise. American medical observers with the Japanese army explained that their general vigorous constitution, and their home habits of wearing scant clothing in all seasons, and going barefooted even in winter, of living in thin walled houses, heated, if at all, only by brasiers are the factors in developing their splendid constitution.

As an instance of the Japanese endurance to cold and fatigue, may be noted the famous march of Gen. Kawamura, who landed his army at the mouth of the Yalu River at the close of January, 1905, during the war with Russia, and before the end of February was in position to take an important part in the battle of Mukden, after a march of at least 200 miles, over a roadless country, and in the depth of winter. The physical and mental strength of the Japanese is attributed to their plain frugal diet, the free use of water both for drinking, and for washing themselves, gymnastics and temperate habits. Bean soup and boiled rice is the favorite portion of the ration, and tomatoes, salads and cucumbers are also relished. Tea is enjoyed without milk or sugar.

Since the war with Russia and since the beginning of the war with Germany, the Japanese have been improving their army in every way possible, particularly as regards field artillery. In the war with Russia, the Japanese field artillery was not as powerful as that of the Russian.

Among the improvements after the war with Russia is the adoption of a high-velocity gun and a heavy shrapnel bullet, for its light, quick firing gun. The new equipment is made from their own design. It is a 14.3 pounder and is said to be a great advance over its other guns of this design. They have also increased the weight of their shrapnel bullets. The Japanese field artillery also includes in addition to its heavy ordnance a mountain gun of 7.5 centimeter caliber. This fires a lighter shell than the 14.3 pounder. There are also field howitzer batteries of 4.6 inch and 5.9 inch caliber, firing shells of about 44 pounds and 80 pounds respectively. Guns for heavier field batteries have also been experimented with and have probably been adopted.

The Japanese infantry is armed with the Arisaka rifle, caliber .256. It resembles the German Mauser and weighs with the bayonet 8 pounds 6 ounces. Each soldier in battle carries 250 rounds of cartridges. The rifle is sighted to 2187 yards and has a very high velocity, although it is not considered as powerful a rifle as the Amercan Springfield. The bullet is encased in a copper jacket and is considered one of the most humane bullets ever used in warfare. "The Japanese bullet," said Col. Valery, Harvard Medical Department, United States Army, in an official report, "is hardly ever deformed in the human body, and its smooth, clean jacket is rarely broken or detached from the core. It has been known to pass through all the structures of the body, including heart and brain, without fatal effect."

The Japanese bayonet is a long, sharp and pointed knife, made very strong. It can inflict not only punctured wounds, but incised, contused, and lacerated wounds as well. Wounds from the Japanese bayonet in the abdomen are generally long gashes through which the abdominal cavity is emptied of its contents, causing speedy death.

The Japanese have a large supply of machine guns, and of the Maxim and Hotchkiss type, it is understood, which fire from 450 to 600 rounds per minute. These guns are used by the British and French armies, in addition to the Lewis machine gun. Japan has also, it is understood, made arrangements to secure supplies of the latter gun.

The Japanese War Department issues no public statement regarding the exact peace strength of its army. Approximately it numbers about 250,000 men of all ranks, and in time of war it expands to about 300,000 men in the regular army, 200,000 in the reserve, while it has 1,000,000 men for reinforcements. In addition there is a territorial army of which, however, no estimates can be made.

The field army is composed of 19 divisions, including the guard, 4 independent cavalry brigades, 3 brigades of independent field artillery (each of 12 batteries of 6 guns,) 3 independent divisions of mountain guns, and 6 regiments of heavy field artillery, each of 24 guns.

The war strength of an infantry division is approximately 18,700 officers and men, which is about 6110 men less than that of a United States division. Two infantry regiments form a brigade, and 2 brigades a division. The artillery is composed of a regiment of field artillery (6 batteries of 6 guns) supplemented by heavy or mountain guns as required. A regiment of cavalry is composed of 3 squadrons with 4 machine guns and a battalion of engineers complete the division. Then there are 4 infantry and 4 artillery ammunition columns, 6 field hospitals, 4 supply columns, and one remount depot accompany each division in the field.

An independent brigade of cavalry consists of 2 regiments, each of 4 squadrons, and a battery of 8 machine guns, which aggregates about 1650 men. The strength of an independent artillery brigade composed of 12 batteries totals about 2500 men.

Mr. Johnson smiled. "As time goes on, and the author learns the technique of the moving-picture story, he will make his own working scenario.

As for the cutting, the more I learn about moving-picture stories, the more respect I have for cutters. Cutters are often the cleverest men on the lot."

Just What "Cutters" Are.

Cutters, we'll explain, are the men who take the story in hand when the director turns it in. At that time it is always from four to thirty times too long. The cutters take the mass of film and extract a story. They are sometimes called "the brains of the movies." In some companies, however, cutters are not used; the directors do their own cutting.

Next we talked of Chaplin and his special fun contributions. I suggested that Chaplin is doing new things in quiet comedy these days, and that with each picture he is becoming more the character actor and less the slapstick comedian. In reply Mr. Johnson paid a wonderful tribute to the little comedian.

"Chaplin is undoubtedly the greatest artist on the screen," he said. "He is a character actor, and his work is becoming increasingly fine."

Why the Melo Villain?

Trite, melodramatic situations were discussed. "How do you account," I asked, "for the melodramatic villain who insists on trying (with considerable success sometimes) to tear off the heroine's Georgette crepe blouse? This thing has been happening with alarming frequency lately. One man told me that he hasn't seen a picture for weeks in which it didn't occur. Why is that?"

"Perhaps it was coincidence. Perhaps it was conscious, or unconscious, imitation. In all forms of story-telling that sort of thing is bound to happen. If a man writes a certain type of short story, and it becomes popular, other writers turn out similar stories. The same thing happens on the stage, as in the case of the crook play. I don't know who wrote the first crook play, but you know what happened as a result. Crook plays sprang up everywhere with the same types and the same situations. You could go into almost any New York theater recently and see a police inspector in the act of cross-examining a crook. A foreign critic visiting our American theater might have thought that the only Americans worthy of stage representation were crooks and policemen.

"The crook play put the work of certain stage producers in a rut. In the same way moving-picture producers often get into ruts. We have to fight against it constantly, but in spite of our watchfulness trite situations and 'business' will sometimes creep in. The episode of tearing off the blouse is an example."

At this point our talk drifted to a comparison between the moving pictures of today and those of several years ago.

No less a critic than Rob Wagner of the Saturday Evening Post thinks that the best pictures were made in the early days of the game. He cites the early Biograph pictures made by Mr. Griffith as excellent examples."

"I disagree," answered Mr. Johnson. "I saw some of those old Biograph pictures recently and I thought they were rather sad. I'll admit that there are a great many poor pictures being made nowadays, but, heavens, what can you except, considering the output of today But I also think the best pictures are being made right now."

"For instance?"

"'Panthea' is a very fine picture; 'The Cheat' is another. 'Magda' and 'The Tale of Two Cities' are two splendid pictures. And 'The Bugler of Algiers,' which Mr. H. O. Davis made when he was with Universal, is one of the finest pictures that I have ever seen. All these pictures were made comparatively recently.

"The Bugler of Algiers."

"'The Bugler of Algiers,' in particular, has a simple, moving story that is admirably put over. Did you ever see it? No? Well, the story goes like this: A French bugler demonstrates his heroism and saves the day at a battle in Algiers by sounding a charge when he was ordered by a Moorish commander who has taken him prisoner to sound a retreat. He risks his life to do it. The incident passes apparently unnoticed by his government. Later he becomes separated from his sweetheart and returns to France with another soldier comrade. The two men settle down to live in a French village. Years later the matter of the bugler's heroism is brought before the government and after much red tape he is cited to come to Paris and receive the Legion of Honor. He and his soldier comrade are by that time old men. The old bugler decides that the fitting thing to do is to march to Paris for the honor, and accordingly the two set out. But the journey is hard and the bugler becomes fagged and ill. When they are almost to Paris he dies.

"It then occurs to the friend that he might go on and impersonate the bugler and so receive the honor himself. So he starts out again. But when he arrives at the place in Paris where he is to receive the emblem of the Legion of Honor he finds an old woman, the lost sweetheart of his dead friend. She had read that he was to be honored and had come to meet him again. Together these two old ones return with the Legion of Honor to the place where the dead bugler lies. And they place it on his silent heart. Stories like 'The Bugler,'" he went on, "and the others I have mentioned are making moving-picture history. When our critics judge our work they should take those good pictures into consideration along with the poor ones. That many poor pictures are issued is obvious, but, then, the mass of work in other forms of story-telling is mediocre. The mass of plays, the mass of novels and short stories are poor stuff. The excellent example is rare in any art form."

Made-in-Germany Goods.

When the time comes that merchant ships can again sail the seas in safety, and the several thousand vessels flying the German flag seek foreign shores loaded to the guards with goods of German manufacture—why then should the nations of the world buy the German exports? One surely cannot expect the mothers in England, France, Australia and Canada to buy and wear garments made by the very hands which dropped bombs on the hospital in which lay their wounded sons! To do so would be sacrilege. And why should we in this country, whose women and helpless children went down on the Lusitania, whose sons and brothers and fathers are already near or on the firing line—why should we forget all these things in days to come, and exchange our gold for German-made goods merely because they are offered us for a little less money than the same articles can be manufactured here? And why should the South American countries encourage imports of German goods when by doing so, every dollar serves to strengthen the arms of a nation which would crush them all in its plan of world dominion? Why should India, and Japan, and China, help rebuild an export trade, the rapid growth of which, and whose enormous profits, fed the fires of avarice with the dream of controlling the factories and workshops of the whole world?

The very money which for years has flowed into Germany from France, and England, and Italy, is this very moment going back to them in the form of deadly gases and monster shells, and all the hideous implements of which the Huns are proud. Money which this country exchanged for German goods is being spent on our own soil in a propaganda by which hate, distrust and maliciousness are planted and nurtured. Our own dollars were and still are being spent to foment hate between this country and Japan, and Mexico; it was some of our own money which paid for dishonor of the Bernstorff type; which has blown up our mills and ships and docks; which has made the I.W.W. what it is. Shall we then in time resume the exchange of our money to a foe who will ere long approach us with a smiling face and explain no harm was meant when he stopped at no barrier and recognized no code of faith or morality? Will we be so craven as to forget all this? Or will we demand that Congress pass a law requiring that every article imported into this country shall (under penalty of confiscation) be plainly marked, showing the country of its origin? And then may all good Americans show their loyalty and never hesitate one instant between going without an article or buying one bearing that mark of iniquity "Made in Germany."—[H. H. Windsor, in December Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Device Teaches Aiming.

A new device with which instruction in aiming a rifle can be given, without the use of ammunition, has recently been tried out in teaching recruits the use of firearms. According to the December Popular Mechanics Magazine, in which the device is illustrated, it consists essentially of a wooden rod, sixteen inches long, with a metal end which is slipped on and fastened to the muzzle of the rifle. The outer end carries an arrangement in which miniature celluloid targets are placed. There are also screws for moving the target up or down and to the right or left. On this end, too, is a small dotting apparatus and a place for cards to be dotted by it. In learning to aim, the pupil rests his rifle on the instructor's shoulder and directs the latter to move the target as he, the pupil, deems to accord with proper aim. When the man aiming believes that the sights and bulls eye are in proper alignment he calls out "mark," and the instructor, by means of a finger key, actuates the dotter. The latter makes a mark on the card which serves as a record of the aim.

KING CORN VS. THE KAISER.

World's Greatest Food Crop. By Frank G. Carpenter.

Uncle Sam's Biggest Mine.

WHAT CORN MEANS TO US AND OUR ALLIES—ITS VALUE AS A FOODSTUFF—HOW EVERY FAMILY CAN DO ITS BIT—"CORN MEAL MURPHY" AND HIS EXPERIMENTS WITH THE GERMAN ARMY—HOW THE KAISER TRIED OUT CORN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

OMAHA (Neb.)—"He who would sup with the devil must have a long spoon!"

In the great fight for the food of today the devil is the Kaiser and Uncle Sam has one of the chief seats at the table. He has a score of spoons on each side his plate, and some of them are exceedingly long. In my letters about the great American industries I have shown how many of them surpass those of the Kaiser, and the spoon I write of today is the longest of all. I refer to the corn crop. It is a vital factor in our fight with the Germans. In the shape of grain, flour, money and meat, it is filling our banks, our warehouses and the ships which are crossing the ocean loaded with food for our Allies in Europe. There is nothing like it on the face of the globe. It is the greatest crop of all time and all nations, and upon it today are founded our hopes for the future.

Three Billion Bushels.

Have you any idea what the corn grown in the United States this year will amount to? I have before me the latest estimates of the Agricultural Department. From its statisticians, scattered throughout every corn raising section of the Union, it has figured up the possibilities. It estimates the amount at just about 3,200,000,000 bushels, and you cannot buy a bushel of it anywhere for less than $1.40. The average price November 1 was $1.46 per bushel. The total value of the crop is more than $4,000,000,000. If it were turned into gold eagles, worth $20 each, there would be 200,000,000 of them, so many that if the Wandering Jew, who is supposed to live forever, had sat down before a pile of such gold pieces 100 years before the pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock and counted a gold piece to the minute, from then until now, he would be still on the job.

The sum is so great that before the war began it would have paid our public debt four times over. It is so great that it will pay the interest on any debt we are likely to incur. At 5 per cent. it would equal the dividends on more than $80,000,000,000. The crop this year is equal in value to all the money we had in circulation in 1916. It is equal to more than half the value of all our farm animals, and to more than that of all the manufactures we exported last year.

Looking upon our corn fields as one great gold mine, we shall get out of them in a single year more than sixteen times as much as all the precious metals we have taken from Alaska since we bought that country of the Russians. We shall get forty times as much as all the gold mined in the United States within the past twelve months and thrice as much as all the gold taken out of South Africa since the precious metal was discovered at Johannesburg many years ago. The total is more than eight times as great as all the gold and silver product of the whole earth in any one year since the world began. Moreover, we shall have just as much from the same mine next year, and for every year during the ages to come. This gold mine renews itself. Like the widow's cruse it is always full, and it will feed the United States to the end of time.

Yields a Thousandfold.

And now look again at the magnitude of the crop and consider the mighty mass of foodstuffs of which it is made. A single grain of corn planted in the earth often yields more than a thousand-fold. I have raised many an ear on my farm in Virginia which had more than 900 kernels on the cob, and I have had two or three ears on a single stalk. The volume of the corn crop is beyond comprehension. To say that it measures more than 3,200,000,000 bushels of shelled corn gives no idea of its immensity. To see what the figures mean, let us load the corn upon wagons. We shall put forty bushels, or more than a ton, in each wagon. Such a load would be enough for two horses. We shall try to load the whole crop and shall start the procession eastward, putting the noses of the horses at the tailboards of the wagons in front of them, allotting to each team forty feet on the roadway. How far away do you think the first wagon would be when the last wagon was moving. Suppose we start at the Mississippi River, would it be in Pittsburgh on the other side of Ohio? No. In Boston on the coast of the Atlantic? No. Suppose we could bridge the ocean, would it be where our army is fighting in France? No. The caravan would reach far beyond that. It would extend on and on across Russia. It would reach over Siberia, across the Pacific ocean and come back to the Mississippi Valley, where it started. Even then the train would have hardly begun, and not one-twentieth of the crop would yet have been loaded. The train of wagons would reach more than 600,000 miles, sufficient to make a line of teams, 200 abreast, all the way from Philadelphia to San Francisco. It would fill 200 Lincoln highways with solid corn. If we could bridge the skies and start the crop toward the moon we should have a double row of teams each carrying a ton of shelled corn reaching from the earth to that dead planet and 150,000 miles beyond. If we could load it on cars at 1000 bushels to the car the train would girdle the globe at the equator with many miles to spare.

A CROP THAT WILL BEAT THE KAISER.

And this mass consists entirely of foodstuffs, the most nutritious, the most heating and most energy-producing of any known to man. The crop is big enough, if it were divided equally among us, to support the life of the whole nation and leave some to spare. It would give thirty-two bushels to every man, woman and child in our country, or enough to supply every one of our families with three bushels of meal every week for the whole year to come.

In actual quantity corn is the greatest food crop of the world. This year it will exceed the wheat crop, which comes from the four quarters of the earth, and it will be of enormous value in the war situation. A vast amount of it will be fed at home and a caravan of ships will carry another portion abroad in the shape of meat and corn meal to be used to make war bread of one kind of another.

Indeed, the value of the corn crop as a war asset could be greatly increased, if more were used in the shape of corn meal instead of being manufactured into meat on the farms. As it is now one-fourth of our corn is consumed by horses and mules, another fourth is eaten by hogs and several hundred million bushels are fed to the cows. A vast amount goes to make beef and something like 60,000,000 bushels are annually consumed by our sheep. It is the high price of corn that makes the high price of meat, and I might say also the high prices of other foods which could be replaced by our eating corn meal.

We might grind the corn and ship it to Europe, but the people there have no idea of its value, with the exception, perhaps, as a stock food. The prejudice against it is such that it would be impossible to introduce it except as a mixture with wheat or rye flour, and the best solution of the problem will be for us to eat the corn at home and ship our wheat and wheat flour to Europe.

Can Take Place of Wheat.

Indeed there is no reason why corn should not take the place of wheat in every American family. As it is now we are using a barrel of wheat flour per head every year. A barrel of wheat flour means five bushels of wheat, and at that estimate the total amount of wheat taken to feed us is 500,000,000 bushels per annum. Suppose we should exchange that wheat for corn, the amount of corn consumed will be less than one-sixth of our crop, and we would have 500,000,000 bushels more wheat to feed our Allies in Europe. Suppose we cut down our wheat flour consumption four-fifths, we can send 400,000,000 bushels across the water, and this would largely supply the food demands of our Allies. There is no better way in which every family in the United States can do its bit than in changing its bread diet from wheat to corn in one shape of another.

In the early history of this country we had practically no wheat to speak of. We learned from the Indians how to raise corn, and our colonial ancestors were brought up on it. For decades after the United States became a nation the chief cereal of the people consisted of ground maize and hominy, and the food was such that it made them the strongest of men. The health of the United States would be equally good today if corn meal should take the place of wheat flour.

I have before me a number of estimates as to the value of corn as a foodstuff. They show that it equals, and, as far as the price is concerned, is superior to almost any other. The late Surg.-Gen. Billings, who had to figure on the food of our army, estimated corn meal and wheat flour as of about equal value, pound for pound, in the production of heat and potential energy. Dr. Harvey Wiley, when he was chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture, gave a report saying that corn was about as digestible as wheat, and that it was a most excellent food as a fat producer, muscle producer, bone producer and blood producer. The National Association of White Corn Millers has recently shown that white corn flour can be mixed with wheat flour in the proportion of 15 per cent. in the making of all bread and cakes, and that such a mixture would save $200,000,000 a year in the food bill of the country. This mixture has the approval of the national government, including the Council of National Defense.

Mixed, it Improves White Flour.

The Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture has been experimenting for the past four years in the making of bread containing mixtures of other flours with wheat flour. It is said that their experiments show that 25 per cent. of white corn flour can be mixed with wheat flour and the result will be a better bread from every standpoint. It is claimed that the corn flour contains more food value than the wheat flour. The following is parative analysis of the two:

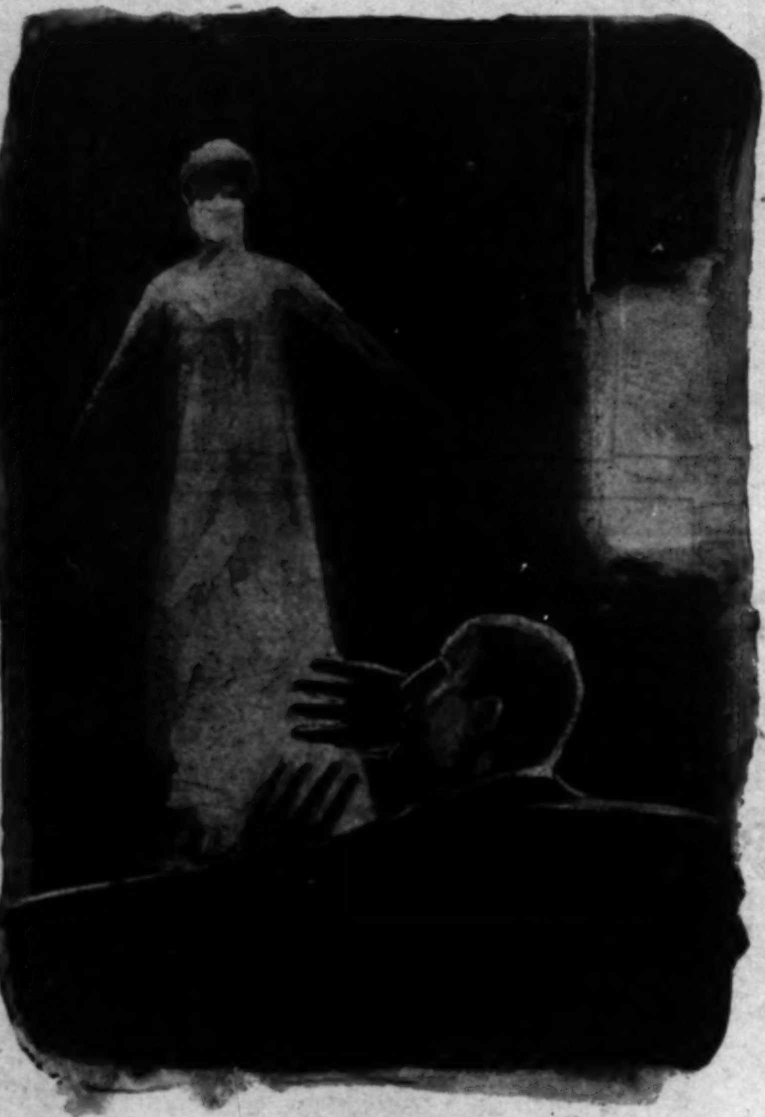
Whoever she is, she has been seen, so she exists! The White Lady of the Old Schloss of Berlin is no vulgar myth. Punctually, she does her mission of warning. She warns the Hohenzollern princes when about to die.

III.

Many princes who beheld the White Lady never told it.



THE WHITE LADY.

In the night, she stood beside their bed, in the castle. In camp, across an evening fog, she showed herself—and the prince fell. These were they of sudden deaths, who never told; or proud men who kept their own counsel. Some merely gasped out: "The White Lady!"

Others who beheld her (simple functionaries, humble valets) dared not ask her any explanation. She glides past such, vaporous, impalpable, saluting with an inclination of her head, concealed in the white shroud, the trembling palace guards or wenches waxing floors at cock-crow. Once, a saucy page perceived her in a corridor close to the Green Hat (it was in the days of Elector Johannes-Sigismund, father-in-law of Gustave Adolphus, the Lion of the North) approached her, flung his arm around her waist, and asked seductively: "Lovely mask, where goest?" The White Lady did not reply, did not seem shocked, but passed across his arm like a fog, and, passing, tapped him on the forehead with a large key which she held—the key with which she opens the 600 doors of the Old Castle.

The Elector Johannes-Sigismund died the next morning at 6:45 o'clock, but the saucy page lived on to tell his adventure a hundred times. Only it began to be noticed that his complexion, previously so ruddy, was becoming white like marble, and his manly features took the beauty of a girl, and grew ethereal, transparent and unworldly, like a girl in a decline, who weakens and must die. He grew willowy and slender, his steps made no noise, and, when maids met him in the twilight, they shrieked: "The White Lady!" and fled from him. One day, he just disappeared. In his bed was found a bag of white human bones.

The first King of Prussia had a false alarm. This is authentic, and shows how firm was his belief in the White Lady. For second he w [illegible] of Nassau; but the match was broken off because he insisted that the train of her wedding gown, at the ceremony, should be carried by her own mother. Finally, he espoused Sophia-Louisa of Mecklenburg, who had no mother, so her train was carried by six countesses. All the same, she was jealous and violent; and one day when she suspected the beautiful young Countess of Wurtemburg of being in the King's study, she suddenly quit the maid who was powdering her hair, and, in thoughtless rage with the sheet round her shoulders, ran down the corridor and smashed in the glass door of the King's study. The King was alone, sleeping in his arm chair. He woke with a start, choked, and fell in a fit before the apparition in the blood-stained powdering sheet—because the lady had cut her hands. The maids cleaned her, while the King was being brought to.

"I've seen the White Lady!" he cried, "I'm a lost man."

He would not believe them, when they told him the true facts. He went down with fever—and he actually died the next day!

IV.

Frederick William, his successor, saw the family specter a spring morning while engaged in drinking a vast bowl of Weiss-beer.

He coughed, set the bowl down, and said simply: "Well, we must be going." He died that night, of alcoholic degeneracy.

The Great Frederick, skeptic friend of Voltaire, laughed at the White Lady. One night he and Voltaire went to hunt her with candles; and just for sport, in a lost corner of the 600 silent rooms, the King disappeared at a turning of the labyrinth, and left the atheistical French philosopher running about and knocking things over in the dark, crazy with fright. Years after, the Great Frederick died, according to official certificate of an indigestion of boiled beef, lobster and crayfish; but a memoir in the secret records of the Iron Closet of Berlin shows him, truly, taken off by fulminating apoplexy, but also staring in indescribable horror at something beyond the drawn bed curtains!

In 1792 King Frederick William II, invading Champagne at the head of his troops, had only to march on demoralized Paris. If, after the cannonade of Valmy, he retreated inexplicably, it was because during a short halt at Verdun, the ghost of this same Great Frederick appeared to him in the wine cellar of a tavern, and threatened him with the intervention of the White Lady if the troops should not immediately re-enter Prussia. "Back!" said the shade, "kill not my grenadiers in this land which is cursed for them. The times are not yet ripe." This particular incident was printed, certified, confirmed and reprinted again, in 1913, only a year before the present war was started.

In the year following, the specter was frequently busy. One of the most authentic cases (he told it himself) was that of Prince Louis of Prussia, before Iena, in the autumn of 1806. Being at the Schloss of Rudolphstadt, the night before, Prince Louis called certain brother officers an said: "Do this and this for me, when I am dead. I have seen the White Lady!" They replied: "How can it be, when the White Lady walks at Berlin only?" He would give no other explanation, saying only: "Oh, she walked there, doubtless." And he descended to the music room where a lovely young girl sat at the piano.

"Play me melodies," Prince Louis begged her.

"How many, Highness? I will play one for each Frenchman," she said, "who falls by your sword tomorrow."

"Oh, tomorrow is my busy day," laughed Louis, wildly, "make it twenty!"

The beautiful girl played music until daybreak. That night the dead body of Prince Louis lay in the Castle of the Coburgs, watched, with funeral honors, by grenadiers of the Imperial Guard. But the strange thing is that, three months later, in Berlin, it was mentioned, investigated and verified that, two nights before the battle of Iena crowds of citizens had seen a white figure passing the dark windows in the Old Schloss. "The White Lady!" they said, "she walks!"

V.

During the ensuing absence of the Court from Berlin, the White Lady was seen on two different occasions by functionaries, flunkeys, palace maids and pasing citizens. From this Napoleonic period, indeed, date the popular certifications, correspondence in Gazettes and newspapers, and the growing conviction of Berlin that simple citizens are as liable to see the White Lady as princes, whenever a Hohenzollern must die. She has shown herself in palace courtyards, on terraces, at windows, and even on the roof. So much so that, whenever a prince of the reigning family is sick or in danger, the Berliners whisper—"Has she been seen?"

In his old days, they say, King William I, conqueror of 1870, become Emperor, dreaded more and more to see the White Lady surge up before him at some unexpected moment. Like a brave man, he went to meet her. One night, with an aide-de-camp, he repeated the famous round of Frederick the Great and Voltaire, going methodically through all the apartments of the old Schloss.

The aged Emperor, fatigued, sat down frequently. He seemed not to notice that the aide-de-camp was white as chalk, and all but speechless. When the trip was over, William I sighed with relief. "Ouf," he said, "all is well that ends well. I gave her a good chance."

Two weeks later, the old Emperor being dead and buried, the aide-de-camp resigned his army rank and devoted his life to good works.

"Our Emperor," said the court with emphasis, "did not see the White Lady."

"No, but I did," said the aide-de-camp, "she was with us in every room on that accursed trip, and she waited in dark corners when the old Kaiser rested!"

MISS MARGARET MACMILLAN, who has been made a commander of the British Empire Order, speaking recently on the subject of co-education, told an amusing anecdote of a certain college conducted on these lines where, however, the rule is that the male students are not permitted to visit the resident lady boarders. One day a male student was caught in the act of doing so and was brought up before the principal, who said: "Well, Mr. Blank, the penalty for the first offense is 50 cents, for the second $1, for the third $1.50, and so on, rising 50 cents each time up to $15."

"'What didn't I hear?' said Mrs. Astorbilt. 'I heard that young Junior Shadd is pleading for exemption on the ground of having dependents, for it seems his millionaire wife depends on him. "'Did I understand you to say, sir, that every glass of beer a man takes shortens his life a week?'

Norah's Consternation.

REFERENCE at a dinner party was made to the servant question, when an appropriate story was related by Congressman John H. Stephens of Texas.

Norah was a new servant girl in the employ of the Browns, and hardly had she been twenty-four hours on the job before she had the misfortune to drop a piece of roast beef on the floor.

Roast beef that has been used as a mop becomes just a little bit gritty to the taste, so Norah thought it the part of wisdom to consign it to the garbage can.

"I think, Norah," remarked Mrs. Brown, rambling into the kitchen later in the day, "that we will have some of that roast beef cut cold for supper."

"Sure, an' Oi'm sorry, ma'am," responded Norah, contritely, "but the cat got it when Oi wasn't lookin'."

"The cat got it!" exclaimed the mistress, with a surprised expression. "What cat?"

"Jay whizz, ma'am!" rejoined Norah, considerably concerned. "Ain't there no cat?"—[Philadelphia Bulletin.

THE conversation at a dinner turned to the beauty of having abundant nerve, when this story was contributed by Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana:

This the waiter did, but when he saw the man take some sandwiches from his pocket, put them on the plates, and pass them around to the kids, he lost no time in notifying the boss.

"What are you trying to pull off here?" indignantly exclaimed the manager, rushing over to the sandwich party. "Don't you know that this isn't a free picnic ground where you bring your own food."

"Is that so?" was the calm rejoinder of the man, as he passed along another sandwich. "May I ask who you are?"

WALKING through the village street one day the widowed Lady Bountiful met old Farmer Stubbs on his way to market. Her greeting went unnoticed.

"Stubbs," said she, indignantly, "you might at least raise your hat to me!"

"I beg your pardon, m'lady," was the reply, "but my poor wife ain't dead more'n two weeks, and I ain't started lookin' at the wimmen yet!"—[Minneapolis Tribune.

LITTLE STORIES OF BIG HEROES.

1917 Medal of Honor Men. By A Special Contributor.

Thomas V. Moakler. Clair B. Baker. Alex. A. Thomas. Ervin C. Cameron. Sergeant Frank A. Dunn. Harry Powley. Stephen J.

THE United States will come out of the World War more of a nation of hero worshipers. There will be songs and stories of heroes who fought under the Stars and Stripes as long as the loved banner floats at the mast of our country's purposes, yet there are men who have not been to wars at home or abroad, men too old and boys too young, who are briefly announced now and then as heroes and then forgotten.

Each year there is issued a list of men and a short account of their exploits which have won the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury through the medium of the United States coast guard service.

For forty-three years, near the end of each calendar year, names of the men whom the government wished to honor with medals for the saving of others from drowning during the previous fiscal year have been reported. Requests for photographs and descriptive letters from these medalists often bring tales that have not been told before, except in the immediate community where the men had spent their lives. A unique case this year was that of little Harry Powley, who lives in Port Jefferson, Long Island, N. Y.

Eleven-year-old Harry Powley.

This boy was given a silver medal on April 3, 1917, and he is only 11 years old. If there is anything in romance in these days of horror, sorrow and World War the ghosts of the gods should not forget this incident, say ten years from now. Youthful Mr. Powley rescued youthful Miss Forbes, a girl about his own age, who had more love for sea-bathing than she had experience. She thought that on a blazing day in August nothing in the world could be so nice as trying one's wings in the water. But she had no real wings, and when she had done her best overstroking it out some distance her small skill departed, and she was only a frightened youngster, too confused to recall any of the things she had been instructed to do in an emergency.

The boy who became a medalist was in the harbor bathing when he heard Miss Forbes scream. Without a thought of himself the lad dived and, swimming on his back, reached her. It took strength to fasten his hold upon the terrified girl, and no small presence of mind, yet he quickly accomplished this, and, with her, swam back toward a wreck lying close to the sands. The grown-ups, standing on dry land, pushed out a big plank to the rescuer, which he grasped while holding tight to the girl with the other. Then, together, they were pulled in, and the owners of a small yacht came up and gave first-aid treatment to both children. It was a neighbor of the boy, Robert Macauley, who felt that here was a case of the "exceptional daring" which the coast guard demands shall be exhibited by medalists, and who set about getting the badge of honor for Port Jefferson's young hero.

What Presence of Mind Did.

Ervin C. Cameron, a coal passer in the navy, is a medalist whose commanding officer, Lieut. J. G. C Gulbranson, was partly instrumental in securing the coveted symbol of bravery. His letter of recommendation, sent to a superior officer, describes the incident meriting the medal: "About 12:15 o'clock a.m., July 4 (1916,) while standing on the landing at Gloucester, Mass., cries of help were heard from the water near an adjoining dock. The Michigan's first sailing launch was tied alongside the landing where I was standing and Cameron, who was in the bow of the boat, informed me that the dock near where the cries of help were coming from could be reached by casting off the sailing launch and putting it alongside a fishing schooner, which was about five feet from the landing, and then jumping to the next and hence to the dock. I ordered the sailing launch cast off, put alongside the first schooner and Cameron immediately jumped on it.

"In doing this, the sailing launch was shoved from the schooner's side, delaying me. When I reached the dock I found Cameron in the water with one arm holding up an apparently drowning man (civilian.) With his other hand he was holding on to the gunwale of a small dory. I jumped into the dory and assisted Cameron and the man into the boat. The night was very dark and Cameron showed great presence of mind in remembering that the dock could be reached as described. When he was pulled out of the water he was fully dressed with oilskins and heavy shoes, showing that when he jumped into the water he did it with apparently no thought for his own safety, his one object being to rescue the man.

"It was two or three minutes after we reached the dock before the others who ran around the landing arrived, showing that the man might easily have drowned in this time if Cameron had not been prompt in remembering the shorter way to the dock and using every effort to get there as soon as possible."

Mr. Cameron has advanced in his rating in the navy and is now a fireman, second class, stationed on the Atlantic Coast at a submarine base.

The hero of heroes among the twenty-two men receiving medals during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, was Stephen J. Murray of No. 615 East Sixteenth street, New York City. Between the years 1897 and 1906, Murray saved eight persons on different occasions from drowning in East River. One night at a fire—in February, 1911—this hero rescued fourteen persons. In 1913 he saved the lives of three girls, pulling them away just in the nick of time from a lighted bomb, which exploded in East Sixteenth street, New York. The act of heroism for which he received the medal from the Treasury March 1, 1917, occurred on April 19, 1916.

A Thrilling Rescue.

This event, too, was most productive of thrills. In his own words, in a letter addressed to the writer, he says: "On April 19, 1916, while I was working on the pier at the foot of Twenty-sixth street, East River, I heard some people shouting 'Man overboard!' I ran to where they were standing and saw the man. The tide was running out at the time and was carrying him away from the pier. I immediately jumped in without removing any of my clothing, but before I reached him he had sunk. I reached him, however, as he came up, and caught hold of him. He struggled with me and tried to break my hold on him until he became exhausted. I finally succeeded in getting him to the pier and sent to Bellevue Hospital."

The fact which at once acts as a source of vivid imagination is one that Mr. Murray failed to mention—that the man rescued was a prisoner who had broken away and jumped into East River while being taken to Blackwells Island.

How could a man, heroic or just ordinary, possibly rescue another by a ladder out of the water? A medalist of last year's list performed this feat. He lives in Niagara Falls, which may account for some of his aquatic accomplishments. In any event, on that afternoon of January 24, 1916, a boy named Erving Sahr, who was skating on an arm of the Niagara River at La Salle, N. Y., broke through the ice in midstream.

In the phrasing of one of the hero's friends: "While on the second floor of the Riverside Inn, La Salle, about 4 o'clock that afternoon, Moakler was looking over the expanse of ice on the upper river, a territory with which he is quite familiar. Some distance from the mainland playing on the ice on Little River, where there is a swift current involving a depth of eighteen feet of water, was young Sahr. Suddenly there was a cracking sound and the boy disappeared through the ice. Losing no time, and, familiar with the lay of the land, Moakler ran to where he could procure an extension ladder, and dragged this to the edge of the river. He thrust the ladder forward to the spot where the boy had gone down, crept rapidly along its rungs and reached the black hole just in time to get a firm hold of the boy, who thought that he was sinking for the last time. He was pulled from the icy waters on to the ladder, hurried to the inn by others who had gathered on the shore and revived in the furnace room there." Mr. Moakler lives at No. 332 Sixth street, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Southern Heroes.

All brave and daring men do not live around New York City or in the neighborhood of Rip Van Winkle's home. There are as many below the Mason and Dixon line. Alex Thomas of Savannah, Ga., on August 16, 1916, was at Tybee Island, Ga., with a party of friends. A fraternal order was holding its national convention at Savannah, and there were thousands of members over at Tybee. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon young Thomas and his friends went in bathing. The tide was very rough, the undercurrent very strong and treacherous, the waves were breaking rapidly and few people were venturing out in over five feet of water. Glancing out to sea, Thomas saw something floating in the water about 200 yards away.

The young Georgian right-about-faced and swam swiftly toward that which he believed to be a man unconscious. When he reached him they were in water no less than twelve feet deep, but Thomas obtained a safe hold on the exhausted man, who proved to be Jacob J. Hauck of Marietta, O., and finally got him ashore, after a battle. Nearly an hour passed before even a physician, who was summoned, could restore the rescued man to consciousness. Representative Edwards of Georgia was principal in securing the medal of honor for Mr Thomas, who is this fall a student in the law department of the University of Georgia and the youngest in his class.

In Lewes, Del., there lives a pilot by the name of John M. Barnes. He has been a pilot and has loved the sea for many a day. During a gale of a certain March night, when the seas ran high and the rivers that ran close by were tossing their half-melted ice blocks, and roaring in unison with the Atlantic, Barnes the pilot was the means of rescuing ten men aboard the sinking yacht Hyacinth. Not one would have been left to tell the tale of the pretty pleasure boat had not John M. Barnes dared turning the big steamer, bound for Philadelphia, straight around, in the worst of the ice-filled river, and, disregarding entirely his own safety, determined to save others, even if he lost his life. A medal was given him January 30 last.

One of the most picturesque [illegible] tunately, one of the stories [illegible] could be obtained the least [illegible] that of the medalist, John J. bells (10:30 o'clock p.m.) and the trimmers have time to look around them and size up the prospects for the remainder of the watch. The two trimmers who are "up top," being better placed than their unfortunate mates, will lose no time in making their way along the deck to the foc's'le, where they will enjoy a drink of coffee or tea, put by from the last meal at four bells.

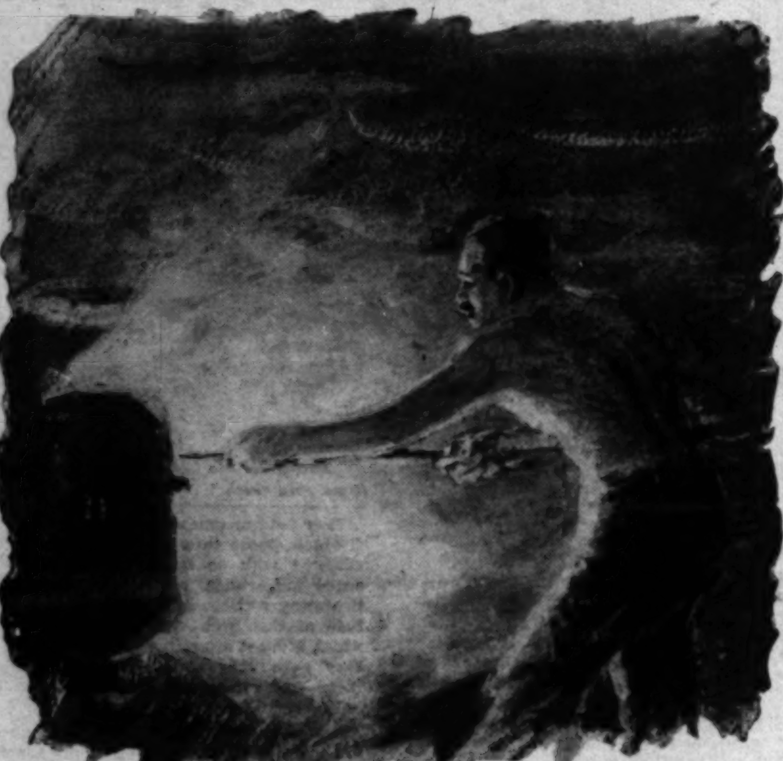
Getting the Black Pan.

Below the "leading hand," having seen that the plates are full, will then order the trimmers to get "cook's coal" up. This is coal supplied by the trimmers to the saloon galley, in return for which they get the celebrated "black pan," for the "dirt birds." This, if the galley is doing the "square" thing, consists of the best that is left over from the saloon dinner, containing everything from soup to nuts. It is given to the watch when they come off shift, and is contained in eight or nine pans.

The "black pan" obtains on all ships that carry a smokestack, though it is at "its best" on mail and passenger boats, the "bill of fare" being responsible for that.



THE FIRST THING THE FIREMEN DO ON COMING DOWN IS TO "PULL" OR "CLEAN" FIRES.

The black pan however, is not the result of any overweaning love on the part of the cooks for the stokers, but is an unwritten contract entered into for the mutual benefit of both.

Why the Trimmer is Treated.

When a trimmer "signs on" among other things he agrees to get cook's coal up to the "fiddley," the "fiddley" being the name applied to the grating immediately over the stokehold on the main deck, but any further attention he may pay to it is a matter for his own discretion. But it came about, that in bygone days, the coal was the source of constant friction, as the cooks rather than "pack" the coal (they wore "whites" too) would drag it along the immaculate decks, leaving evidence which only the "holy stone" plied by the sleepy "four to eight" could wipe out. But the marks on their injured feelings were not so readily erased, with the result—the glorious institution the "black pan."

To return to the Orontes. Cooks coal having been got up, perhaps the trimmers take out their pipes and enjoy a smoke, taking care, however, not to get behind in their "heaps" by taking too long a "spell."

The End of the Day.

.In due course one bell (11:45 o'clock) is struck from the engine-room and immediately all is bustle. Trimmers rush with their barrows into the bunkers to get out the relief of coal which each watch must leave on the plates for the next, the leading hand attends to his steam, and the stokers rake their "burn down" fires—that is those fires that will be "pulled" or "cleaned" by the on-coming watch.

Eight bells goes (12 o'clock midnight) and the tired watch climb the ladders and make their way to the washroom, where they strip and bathe their reeking bodies, after which they don clean gear.

Some will then seek their bunks, though most of them sleep on deck in the tropics. The watch, with the exception of the trimmers (who must return for two hours on this ship to help the relieving watch get up their ashes) is off now until 8 o'clock next morning, each of the three watches having four hours on and eight off. Four hours is long enough to keep any man down in the stokehold, to say nothing of six hours, but the latter period, fortunately, is not the rule on the majority of ships.

Patching up the Victims.

When in the tropics the men sometimes fall down in the stokehold like nine-pins from sheer exhaustion, and they are carried up on deck, dosed with morphine and sent down again. A sympathetic public is horrified by the stitching up of gored and worn out horses so that they may finish their "watch" in the bull ring; but it is a still, small voice that is raised against this patching up of men in order that they may be able to go through an undermanned watch.

But there is a certain doggedness about this class of seamen, and before giving way they would burst their hearts in the endeavor to "do their whack."

They like to be considered tough among their shipmates, irrespective of the fact that they are wearing their bodies away for a thankless and unresponsive company. I have followed many different occupations which called for heart and stamina, and I do not think any other form of labor taxes a man's endurance so much as stoking—the pain, the choking gases and the withering steam from the drenched ashes which are the lot of fireman during the first hour of their watch.

Stoking a Horrible Job.

The Board of Trade's regulations only require fifteen firemen to man the stokehold of the ship of which I write; the company find themselves compelled to employ twenty-four.

While appreciating the good work some bodies are doing in the way of missions for seamen and so on, I think they could do a great deal more good if they bent their energies towards lightening their burden whilst at sea. When the seaman got ashore he would not be so liable then to waste his pay in an effort to drown the memory of the previous trip, and when "broke" would not fall an easy victim to the parasite who hangs around shipping offices (the Board of Trade notwithstanding) to cash at a heavy discount the "advance notes" which entice so many hungry stokers to make another trip.

the "absolutely fit," and the "fit." The men for the first line army called Geneki are selected from the absolutely fit. For the infantry service in the ranks is for two years, and in all the other arms it is three years. After service in the first line four or five years service, in the reserve, known as Yobi, follows and volunteers are permitted to serve in the reserve for one year. After completing seven years and four months duty in the first line, including its reserve the men are next transferred to the second line, called Kobi. The service in the Kobi is for ten years, with two trainings of sixty days each during the entire period. When a man finishes his Kobi service he is in his thrty-sixth year, and he is then placed in the territorial or home defense army which is called Kokumin. He must serve here for two years and eight months and this completes his twenty years' service.

Then there is a replacement reserve for making good the wastage of war and, this reserve is known as Hoju. It is composed of the remainder of the "absolutely fit" recruits who were not needed for the first line army and of as many men of those classed as "fit," as may be needed to make up the aggregate number of men desired. All these men serve in the Hoju for seven years and four months, and during this period they first have a training of ninety days, followed by two trainings of sixty days each.

From the Hoju they are passed to the Kobi for ten years' service, similar to the men who have passed through the first line. They are finally passed to the Kokumin or home defense army for two years and eight months to complete their service with the army.

The Kokumin consists of two "banks," the first of which embraces all men who have passed as noted above, through the first line and landwehr, or through the supplementary reserve and landwehr, and who consequently have only two years and eight months to spend in the Kokumin. The second "band" is the levy en masse of all those physically fit to bear arms. It includes those who though fit, are not required for the Hoju, those who for various reasons are exempt from military service; and young men between 17 and 20 years of age who have not been ordered to the colors. None of these classes receive any military training but they can be ordered to duty in case of national emergency. The partially trained men who have been enrolled in the Kobi from the Hoju are not included in the second line fighting units. They are used to supply the many men required for the transport service on mobilization and for the increase of any other departmental corps. The training of the Japanese soldier includes a thorough course of rifle practice.

For the winter the clothing of the Japanese soldier includes underwear of thick ribbed flannel, with long abdominal band wrapped around. On his feet and legs he wears one or two pairs of ribbed woolen socks or stockings, shoes and a canvas bandage wound around over his trousers to the knee. Sometimes woolen toe caps are also issued to wear over the stockings. He wears on his hands dark thick cloth gloves or mitts. The Japanese ordinary black overcoat of home service is replaced for winter field service by a long sheepskin vest which buttons on the side, and an ample overcoat of drab, thick soft wool with fur collar. Each Japanese soldier is provided with two blankets, and his equipment includes a pocket stove, which is semicylindrical in shape. It is one foot long and four inches in diameter. He is also provided with dust glasses.

For the purpose of recruiting the army in peace and war, the country is divided into twelve divisional districts, which are again subdivided into fifty-two regimental districts, corresponding to the German battalion districts, and some special districts. The infantry of the guards is recruited from the whole country, the other arms of the guards from the first divisional district. As the divisions of the line are all quartered in their recruiting districts, rapid and smooth mobilization is greatly facilitated.

LOST TO THE BIG LIGHTS—ONE FOLLY.

An Episode. By Jack Lait.

"HER name was Bernice and she had three gold teeth—I remember her well," said Leslie Shay.

Leslie was the manager of the world's most successful musical revue, and I was telling him of a chorus girl who had, several seasons back, taken orders from him.

"Her name is Margaret now, and she has two more gold teeth," I answered.

In the course of a sojourn in Little Zion I had met her. Little Zion is in southwestern Utah, down where the real Mormons live; where in the public square is a building labeled "Bishop's Storehouse," before which is a dray scale onto which every hay wagon from every farm drives to be weighed in and checked out, charged with 10 per cent. of the hay as the bishop's tithe; where the golden acres have been torn from the reluctant hand of unbending Nature, converted into fruit orchards and wheat fields and vegetable patches.

Strange folks are these Mormons, and not a bad sort to mix with. They are hospitable. They are patriotic. What they have taken from America they have taken in trade for their sweat and their blood and their pride and their convictions. But they are still willing to give freely of their goods and their sons and their souls' spirit to the nation.

Perhaps the prettiest girls in all the universe live in Little Zion. The sun as it flays the desert seems to reflect a glow of beautitude into the cheeks of the Deseret maids. Many of them have never seen a railroad. In that region between the Salt Lake and Los Angeles road and the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, a strip of partly reclaimed sand about 250 miles deep, there are girls who never will see a railroad. But they have seen the surviving kivas of the cliff dwellers, and they have seen canyon walls sheer miles high, and they have seen natural "faults" interminable to the equestrian traveler, and they have seen lava centuries old and the undisturbed aftermaths of many prehistoric miracles.

They are all descended of Mormon stock. The Mormons thereabouts threaten no one and molest no one. But one who is not of them is seldom asked to remain except on a visit. The visitor may linger and observe and ask questions and wonder in pop-eyed stupidity, and he is made at home. But the settler, unless he be in the church, is not invited to stake a residence, and somehow an invitation seems essential down there.

In the flourishing town of St. George, some 200 miles from a railroad, most of the way by unmarked roads across the American Sahara, I had spent a few days so far from the world that in a fortnight I began to consider whether Chicago and New York were memories or mirages, recollections or raves.

A California friend, a canyon hound and desert lover, had dragged me there. He had argued with me that no vacation acts as such unless one gets where newspapers don't. For years he had been making journeys in quest of distraction to Little Zion. I had never heard of the region, so I could not give him nay, except on the face of picture, which looked sandy and unalluring. I could fancy the whiskered Latter Day Saints and their beefy, putty-faced young—sullen, suspicious, hostile, reticent, semi-savage, amid discomforts for the lack of sanitary plumbing and fresh steaks.

My kind host and friend smiled and pleaded with me to take the chance. When he tickled my gambling nerve I fell. And so we set sail on the railroad, got off at a sand-blown depot in mid-desert, drove for hours and hours past manifestations of nature that varied from sand plains to gulches, mesas, ranches, villages and mountains. In a spurt of sand we turned into St. George and drew up at the inn. By that time, having kept my eyes open at the numerous ranch houses and eating stations where we had halted, I had somewhat edited my preconceptions of Mormons and Little Zion.

That twilight we sat on the grass lawn of the hotel. We had finished a dinner that held oysters and a filet mignon and biscuit Tortoni and coffee as good as Henrici's; we were dragging on Partagas perfectos as fresh and mellow as scientifically nursed Havanas can become and remain, and we were mingling the breath of the rich weed with the cool, sweet air of an evening in Utah, where the evenings are always that sort. And we were talking of this and that. He wasn't rubbing it in. He could see that I was a convert to the Mormon country, but he spared me—he was a gentleman. My surrender had been uncompromising and had lost interest as a current topic.

So we spoke of politics and rum and war, of petticoats and rot and work, of paragraphs and rhyme and wit, of penny ante and rhum and woe. We spoke of all that the walrus and the carpenter had discussed, and we added Von Hindenburg, Service, Heinie Zimmerman and vaudeville. You know how it is when you are out of the world. A week later you have forgotten it. But while it's on, how important to you is the attitude of the one companion who is with you in this wilderness, how eager you are to have his good opinion and to convince him that you are smarter than he is!

Anyway, we were blathering away when the hotelkeeper, an old friend to my friend through repeated visits, having finished his accounting and whatever else a country landlord has to do after the evening meal, came out and made it a threesome. I shuddered. I could hear the regular succession of bromidic queries coming: How'd you like our country?" "How long are you going to stay?" "Have you seen Zion Canyon, or are you taking that road on the way out?" "Do they take much stock in the Conan Doyle and Zane Gray books on Mormons—those rotten lies—up where you live?" "Have you seen the tabernacle? Some building for 'way out here in the desert, huh?" "Where'd you say you lived? Oh, yes—fine city, I hear." "How are the roads up above?" "Did you stop at Anderson's ranch for lunch?" "Did you have any tire trouble coming over?" "Well, when you get back home you can have the laugh on the folks, thinking the Mormons have a lot of wives and murder strangers, can't you?"

But what he said was: "Just got a letter from my son over in France—Ambulance Corps. He says the Sammies own Paris. He hopes to come home on leave soon to see his wife and youngster."

The hotel chap retired after a bit, and then my companion, who had been there often enough to know all the inside tales, not to speak of this one, which was one of the centennial "yellow" episodes of the region, told me of the wife of the son of the boniface.

It seems that a special train bearing the proudest and wildest of the big New York musical shows pulled out of Salt Lake City for Los Angeles one night a few minutes after midnight. On board were sixty-three persons, including the manager, crew, principals and chorus members of the troupe, and three young men who had been allowed on as guests—millionaires from the Wyoming cattle country, who were hosting and toasting the company, who were having the delicious time of their short grass lives. They had come up with the show folks in Ogden, had been taken on and allowed to spend their gold like crazy men, had been taken along for what they were worth and for as long as they would last, had been taken in without promise of reward or clemency.

They paid no attention to any specific individuals, these three husky cavaliers. Bewildered with so much metropolitan pug nosed pulchritude, such an outpouring of Broadway witticisms, such a prodigal plenitude of that arch and brash romanticism which is most attractive to men situated as they were, they had just drunk in all of them—and almost all that the dining car held.

Seated in the same diner of the fast moving train was Wilbert Kelly of the Giant X ranch. Seated on his knee was Bernice with the three gold teeth and the hennaed auburn hair. They were drinking champagne.

"Waiter, another gallon," called Kelly.

"Sorry, sah, but they's nothing left but co'dials an' min'r'l wahtahs," said the darky.

"Aw, gee," said Bernice. "That puts the evening on the fritz."

"Can't we stop somewhere and take some on?" asked Kelly.

"No, sah—'gainst the rules—stric'ly," said the waiter, with incontrovertible decision.

"Well," said Kelly to Bernice, "if we can't have it brought on we can drop off somewhere and get some."

Wine has a way of superinducing ready appreciation of inspirations. So Bernice said it was a great thought and she was for it.

Presently the train stopped. It had halted at a wayside station to take on ice. The porter knew that from the state of the liquor larder that night an overstock of ice would be needed next day. The Pullman door was opened so that he could jump off. He crossed the street of the one-store village to fill his pail. A moment later Kelly landed on the ground, reached up, helped Bernice to alight, took her by the arm, and started with her toward the nearest light. He had no hat on; neither had she.

The light was in the shack of the section track walker. Before they had reached that threshold the porter had iced up and signaled that he was safe aboard; the conductor passed the tidings, the engineer shoved a lever, the train was roaring off, ahead through the wastes and the night.

Kelly and Bernice turned sharply as the first wheel grated. It was too late; no act of theirs could flag the train. There was no operator in the depot, so it couldn't be over taken and backed up, nor could it be reached within any reasonable [illegible] auto could catch it. How now?

"What shall we do?" asked [illegible] grined at the embarrassment he had [illegible] upon the girl.

Kelly and Bernice, sunburned, creaking and stiff, were the dining-room of the bishop's fed on fresh corn, peaches and gingerbread and milk. as you say—we'll drive on."

"As soon as I stow away this chow I'll say so."

But she didn't.

The hotelkeeper's son saw her as she came from the dining-room. I have boasted the prettiest girls in the world for Little Zion, so female charms were no blinding sight to the lad, But——

There is no place in the world, let alone Little Zion, where a New York chorus girl cannot draw attention. In Butte, in Paris, in Honolulu, in Milwaukee, yea, on Broadway, where there seem to be a million of them. The New York chorus girl is as distinctive as the grisette, the geisha or the houri. And her forte is to make men's eyes stop when they rest on her.

And the eyes of the Mormon youth stopped and clung and hung when they fastened on the chunky, natty, tilted-nosed, gold-toothed alien; and he grew dizzy and began to stammer.

The father introduced them.

"This is my son, Joe. This is Miss—Miss—what's the name again?"

"Vanderbilt — Bernice Vanderbilt," she gurgled. Then she looked about her. Through the open door she saw two peaches with cotton stockings and gingham aprons on, walking past; she sniffed and inhaled the air that was wealthy with the breath of tree and field; she saw the ruddy young villager blushing as he stood rooted and drank optically of her bedizening bewilderments. "That's what my programme name is — in the chorus," she added, somehow feeling that she ought to. "My honest-to-John name is Margaret Meyers."

"If you're ready——" offered Kelly.

"Well," said Bernice-Margaret, "they ain't no use to hurry. I guess my engagement is flooey anyway. An' this queer place kind o' fascinates me. I never been in this neck o' the U. S. before. I'd kind o' like to hang aroun'—linger a few. I can wire ol' Leslie Shay, an' if he wants to hold the spot open for me I'll join later—in a few days—or a week—or maybe a couple o' weeks——"

"O, stay a month," said Joe, and then he almost bit his tongue off, fearing he had said too much.

"I would, on'y I ain't got that much in This looks good to me."

"I'll be very glad to stand for the bill," said Kelly. "I owe you something for the way I've sidetracked you."

"Thanks," said she unblushingly. "That'll be awfully good of you. If you'll square me with the hotel here, then you can go along whenever you feel like it. You needn' worry over me. Somebody'll take me to where the tracks is when I get tired o' this."

Kelly did not resent the dismissal. He had not sought to make love to the girl (he came from Wyoming!) and there had been nothing sinister done or intended in the whole mad-cap escapade. Kelly smiled. He drew the landlord aside, explained carefully so the girl's position might not be misunderstood, guaranteed her account, bought a hat across the street, shook hands with his cross desert little friend, cranked up his property, and was lost in a cloud of dry road dust.

It was inevitable that Joe should propose. In Little Zion that was inevitable, for down there (so far from a railroad) a man proposes marriage to a woman when he falls in love with her. What she did was not inevitable. She accepted him.

There was no scandal. No chorus girl had ever been seen in St. George before, in any guise. New Yorkers were mighty infrequent in any form. Gold teeth were not unknown. Slang was not recognized as slang, for Little Zion has vernacular sui generis. So Bernice in that mislaid community drew no more doorknob-eyed staring than she was accustomed to in the subway, and wasn't gossiped about half as much as she had been in the dressing rooms of the Amsterdam Theater.

She had driven in with a man. But in that country women may drive with men and not be ostracized, or demi-goddessed, or demi-monded.

So when Joe took to wife the piquant forcigner no one threw a fit, no one threw a stone. When a Mormon takes a wife she becomes the wife of a Mormon, and therefore one of the family.

There she was now—that pretty little woman trundling the sleeping baby—the one with the white cotton stockings and the gingham apron. I was presented.

the sock—I mean I couldn't pay no month's board bill here. Otherwise I'd stay a year.

"Don't you miss Broadway?" I asked, like a jackass, unable to think of anything less obvious to say.

"What's the matter with Brigham avenue?" she answered. "We got a movie here now, an' ev'ry couple o' weeks we get a fillum; on those nights we stay up till 9. This night life is gonna kill me yet."

"Are you happy here?" I asked incredulously.

"No—I suppose I'm mis'able! I'm the happies' woman on earth whose husban' is in the war. My father-in-law treats me like a duchess. The folks here gimme the glad hand an' the hooray. The bishop talks to me right on the street, though it's been slipped to him that I once stepped in a chorus, an' he's been in Salt Lake City, too, so you can bet he knows jus' what a chorus is. Happy? Say, when my Joe gets back, if he brings back both his legs an' all his arms, I'll let out a whoop that'll scare the coyotes stiff for twenty miles f'm here. Happy! I wouldn' trade one Mormon irrigation farmer f'm this county f'r all the Christian first nighters, all the Methodist Lambs an' Friars, all the Jewish theattical manidgers, all the Johns, all the wine buyers, all the mash note scribblers, an' all the deep sea gamblers in all N'York.

"I was born for this—for jus' this. My inclinations alwus was rureal, anyway, bein' as I was born in Brooklyn. An' when you see Leslie Shay (I had told her he was my friend after she had named the company she had deserted) tell him this for me:

"'I don' never wanna live again in a town where, when they write a show about the Follies of it, that turns out to be the world's greatest drawin' card.'"

So I told Leslie. And he shrugged his shoulders. He couldn't understand. He had never seen Little Zion.

Chinese Houses Anticipated Steel Construction.

An interesting article under the above caption appears in the most recent issue of the Far Eastern Review to hand:

"The ardent student of things Chinese usually contrives to find a Chinese precedent for every new thing that is done or discovered in the West, so it will not surprise anyone to learn that the Chinese anticipated the principles underlying modern steel and concrete construction by 3000 or 4000 years. Until very recently the roof of the occidental building rested on the walls and so did the floors. If the walls fell the house fell. The modern constructor of steel frames puts no faith in walls, but supports his roof and floors with the steel frame. The walls may crack and crumble as they like, they are simply the ornamental shell of a modern building and have nothing to do with its substantiality or length of life. This is comparatively new in the West, but so far as we know the Chinese have never built on any other principle.

"Chinese walls are, for the most part, built of half-baked bricks which are short-lived. As one travels about this land of ruins he sees scores of buildings standing with roof, floors and a massive wooden frame intact while no walls are in sight, the bricks having crumbled away or been stolen to construct newer buildings. If a man wants a new wall to his house he does not trouble to move out. The bricklayer simply tears out the old wall and puts in a new one without disturbing the tenants. Frames are of massive logs and roofs are stacks of lumber and tile which no Chinese wall could possibly support. The major feature of Chinese architecture is the roof, and to protect the more perishable parts of a house in process of construction it is usually built first and all the art and ostentation of the builder is lavished upon it. A half dozen energetic carpenters will put up the heavy frame of a large house in a few days, then they start upon the roof, and when that quintessence of Celestial art is finished the masons will heap up a few incidental walls as an afterthought. The skill which a Chinese bricklayer exhibits in repairing crumbling walls elicits the admiration of European builders in every treaty port. Without injuring the integrity of the whole he will take out hundreds of bricks all over the surface of a massive wall and replace them with new ones. It is no uncommon sight to find Chinese at work digging every scrap of mortar out of the face of a building and stuffing in new mortar as they go, thereby giving the building a new lease on life which a western builder would accomplish by tearing the whole house down and building it up again."

LOVE KNOWS NO CALENDAR.

The Spur. By Glenn Hughes.

THE afternoon sunlight was pouring down with all its southern brilliancy when the Supremus Film Company whirled off the main boulevard and traversed a white, dusty by-road which led toward a solitary group of ranch buildings.

Three automobiles led the way. Behind these straggled a chain of over-worked riding horses, some of them riderless, others with made-up vaqueros astride their backs. Two moving picture cameras protruded from one of the automobiles. There were a few women in the party, but most of the players were men. Nearly all of them were in costume, Spanish and Western American, and they carried into the still, hot air of the country, the strong, sophisticated odor of grease-paint and face powder.

The procession swung into the ranch yard, and from the first machine a man leaped to the ground. It was Walters, the location man. "Here we are, Mac," he announced.

Macpherson, the director, took in the surroundings with a professional sweep of his keen eyes. He noted the effective contour of the low-roofed adobe house, a relic of old, old days, and the sagging stables, with their wide chinks and ragged eaves.

"It'll do," he remarked laconically.

Walters frowned slightly. He had expected more enthusiasm over this location.

"Anyone live here?" asked Macpherson abruptly.

"Yes," replied Walters, "an old Mex bunks here in the house. I fixed it up with him the other day. He said we could use anything we wanted. I'll go in and see him now." So saying, he strode across the bare yard to the doorway of the house. From the knob hung a tiny tarnished bell. This he shook, and at its second tinkle the door opened far enough to disclose the withered, leathern face of the aged inhabitant.

"Hello, Miguel!" said Walters cheerfully.

"Buenos dias, senor!" responded the other, showing his few decayed teeth in a pleasant smile.

"Well, here we are," went on Walters, indicating the company in the yard. "All ready to take pictures. Want to come out and watch?"

Miguel shook his head. "I'll watch from in here," he explained. "Will you come in too, senor, out of the sun?"

Walters accepted readily. He glanced back and saw that Macpherson was already giving directions to his camera men.

Doffing his hat, he entered the main room of the house. The ceiling was low, and had heavy cross-beams. The floor was stone, and gave to the interior a delightful coolness. The furniture was ancient and was covered with once-brilliant rugs. A wide-mouthed fireplace, with smooth-worn hearth, faced the door. Stone jars and baskets stood on the mantel and in the corners. Along the front were a row of latticed windows and near these was a long, rough table. Miguel drew up two wobbly chairs, and then, disappearing into an adjoining room for a minute, returned with a wicker demijohn and a couple of glasses. Motioning Walters to a chair, he said simply, "There! we can rest and see at the same time. No es verdad, senor?"

Walters was entranced. "This is wonderful!" he exclaimed with fervor. "What a fine, quiet life you live here!"

"Quiet, yes," repeated the old man softly. "It was not always this way." Shaking his head reminiscently, he lifted the demijohn and filled the glasses with a rich, glowing wine.

"No, I suppose not. How long have you lived here alone?"

"Ever since my wife died, senor. That is about nine years ago."

Walters nodded understandingly and tasted the wine. "Lord! but that's excellent wine, Miguel!" he cried.

The Mexican smiled. "It is old, senor. Wine is not like men, who are best when they are young."

Before the smile died on his thin lips, he glanced out through the window and his eyes sparkled suddenly. Walters followed his gaze and saw the cause. Astride of one of the best looking horses, a finely-built youth, dressed vaquero costume, was playing a love scene with a bright-eyed, red-lipped senorita.

Walters smiled too. "Pretty stuff, isn't it?" he murmured. "That's Jack Singleton playing opposite Margery Graham. Funny part of it is that they're really dead in love with each other."

Miguel bobbed his head wisely. "You would not need to tell me that, senor," he said slowly. Then he turned back to his wine and a strange, far-off look passed over his features. He fingered the wine-glass meditatively. Walters noticed this, and wondered what it meant.

"Love's a funny business, isn't it, Miguel?" he commented whimsically, squinting through his wine at the stream of flashing sunlight which lay along the table.

"Yes, senor, it is as you say; it is a 'funny business.'" The old man paused, then continued. "Your people out there just now make me remember something which happened a long time ago. And it was on this same rancho, too." He lapsed into sudden silence.

Walters leaned forward in his chair. "Tell me about it, Miguel, will you?" he asked eagerly.

Miguel sipped once at his wine and began.

"It was in the early sixties, one spring, when the rains were about over and everything was fresh and green. The Americanos were not so thick then; Los Angeles was a village, and these other towns no one had dreamed of. All this land, from the Sierra Madre hills down to the sea, was divided into two great ranchos. This was the Rancho Los Cerritos, and the other was the Rancho Los Alamitos. My father was a vaquero on Los Cerritos. Ah, what days those were!

"Don Alvarez, who owned this rancho, was very kind to us all, and every year there were fiestas, when he invited people from everywhere, for miles around, to come and make a merry time of it for several days. There would be horse races and barbecues and music and wine and dancing all night. Dios, senor! it is not easy to forget.

"Don Alvarez had a daughter, Dolores, who, so everyone said, was the most beautiful girl in California. She was slender, and of course very dark, with black hair. But her eyes were what made her wonderful. They were—I can not tell you, senor, what they were like. But when I looked at them they made me think of Our Blessed Lady, and I felt like kneeling down to pray.

"Don Alvarez had decided that Senorita Dolores should marry Garcia Lopez who was to inherit from his uncle the Rancho Los Alamitos. The two ranchos could become one in this way. But during this same spring a stranger, from the City of Mexico, he said, appeared here among us. He was a tall, smooth-skinned hombre, with fiery eyes and slim fingers—like those of a woman. At night, under the stars, here in the patio, he would sing to Senorita Dolores. Her father, afraid she would run away with Carlos—that was the stranger's name—threatened to kill him if he did not leave. But Dolores pleaded with Don Alvarez until he consented to let her lover remain. He made her promise, though, to marry Garcia Lopez at the beginning of summer.

"So things went on. Garcia would ride over to the rancho sometimes, and would always go away wild with rage, because Dolores paid him so little attention. He had a beautiful black horse, which he raced with sometimes, and he always used a single big silver spur. Without this, he said, he could not get the swift spurt at the finish which so often won him the race. He was brave, but he loved to brag.

"It came time for the great fiesta, and work on the rancho stopped. Don Alvarez became good-natured, and drank more wine than usual. One night Dolores declared to him that she had a plan for choosing her husband. Don Alvarez frowned and spoke at once of Garcia, but she stopped his mouth with her hand and said, 'No, padre mio, listen to me. We will have a grand horse race at the fiesta. Carlos and Garcia can both enter. I can say that I will marry the victor. Garcia is sure to win; you know what a horse he has; and it will be a way to get rid of Carlos. It will be his own fault, then, that I do not marry him. Is not that fine?'

"At first Don Alvarez was stubborn, but at last he gave in, sure in his mind that Garcia would win the race, and so marry his daughter anyway.

"The fiesta time arrived. From fifty miles away came men on horses, women and children in buggies. Garcia was there with his prancing black horse and his bragging air; Carlos laughed among the women, and joked among the men. Dolores made known her plan, and there was great excitement over the coming race. Garcia offered wagers on the side, and talked as boldly as though he had already won. Carlos said nothing; he chose the horse which he rode on the range, and seemed not to worry at all.

"It was in the middle of an afternoon, much like this one, senor, with the sun bright and the yellow mustard standing high in the fields. The distance was fixed, and everything was ready for the start. The whole crowd from the fiesta rode out to where the two men sat on their nervous horses. Senorita Dolores stood on a little knoll and waited. She was laughing, but there was something else in her eyes—I could not tell what.

"Then Carlos, with a twinkle in his eyes, and with a graceful bow from the saddle, whirled up before her and said something to her in a low tone. I was standing near, and at this I crept closer. Dolores took a rose from her hair—she had two of them hanging together—and with a pretty gesture tossed it to Carlos. He kissed it, tucked it into his hat-band, and swept away to the starting place.

"Garcia caught sight of this performance, and spurring his horse, he too rode up before Dolores, and demanded a similar favor. Stepping to the side of the black horse, she leaned against his flanks, and bantered with Garcia. Meanwhile she was fumbling with one hand at the other rose in her hair. All the people were watching Carlos at this moment, and I was the only one who saw distinctly the action of the senorita. Would you believe it, senor, with her free hand, Dolores was unbuckling the silver spur that jingled on Garcia's riding boot! She was looking up at him with such passion that he was blind to everything except her eyes, her lips, and the rose that she was untangling for him to wear.

"Before I knew it, Garcia had turned his horse, and gone to join Carlos. The crowd was yelling for the race to start. A gun cracked, a cloud of white dust rose from the horses' heels and they were off. Garcia led, then Carlos began to creep up. Toward the finish, the black slowed up. Once I looked at Dolores. Her face was pale, and yet there was a smile of joy at the edges of her mouth. On the home stretch Garcia beat his horse cruelly, and kicked his heels into the steaming flanks, but there was no spur to give the winning burst of speed, and Carlos rode over the line victor."

Miguel stopped speaking and sipped again at his wine. "As you say, senor, love is a 'funny business'," he added softly a moment later.

Walters smiled. "That's a good story, Miguel," he said appreciatively. "Those must surely have been the days of romance."

The old Mexican shrugged his shoulders. "No more than now, senor," he replied sagely. "How can a few years change a woman's way with a man?"

An hour or so later the Supremus Film Company prepared to depart. The sun was lowering rapidly behind the Palos Verdes, and a light wind came up from the sea.

Margery Graham was standing to one side, rearranging her hair before a small hand mirror. Unconsciously she pursed her full, glowing lips, and widened her sparkling eyes—posing before herself. A voice sounded beside her, and turning suddenly, she discovered Macpherson, who was watching her intently, and with unconcealed admiration.

"Psyche!" he murmured smilingly.

The girl frowned and an impulse to slap him seized her. However, she forced a smile in return and said nothing—he was the director.

"Do you know that you did some marvelous bits of work today, Margery?" he continued in a low voice.

"Did I? Thanks!" she responded politely, still inspecting herself in the mirror.

Macpherson moved closer, glancing back over his shoulder to make certain no one was near enough to hear. "Listen, girlie, we start that five-reel job on Monday. It'll be the biggest thing we've put over yet. It'll make somebody famous. How do you like the idea of that somebody being you?"

The girl turned half-toward him, and her eyes narrowed for an instant. She caught an implied meaning in his words, and yet she don't dare take a chance on . . .

"Sounds good," she said with a show of eagerness. "What terms?"

Macpherson hesitated for a moment. When he spoke it was with great tenseness. "Well, I . . . of course we could boost your salary to double what it is now, and then, oh, damn it Margery, don't y see that I love you and want you?"

The face in the mirror paled sudden Then a peculiar light flickered in startled eyes. The suggestion of a wavered at the corners of the compres lips.

"Why," she began gaining confiden she proceeded. "I'd like awfully to play it for you, Mac . . ." He inter rupted her.

"Then you mean that you . . ." was leaning close to her face.

"We will wait till afterwards to about love," she interposed swiftly. the picture's done."

Macpherson was puzzled for a mo Then he looked searchingly into her What he saw there satisfied any doub may have entertained. She seemed yearning towards him with intoxicating ture playing over her features.

"Hey, Mac!" broke in a loud voice one of the automobiles. "When the we going to get out of here?"

Both the man and the girl started. pherson was annoyed. "Are you going my machine?" he asked quickly.

She shook her head. "Why, I'm sorry, Mac," she replied apologe "but I promised Helen I'd go in with She wants me to take dinner at her Otherwise . . ."

"Oh, all right," put in Macpherson just thought . . ." He looked at hungrily, and she shuddered "Good-by!"

"So long, Mac!" she called sweetly him.

The automobiles got under way. string of riding horses plodded out through the ranch yard and two alone remained in sight. They were ing near the house, and were looking the vanishing procession.

"I had our horses left behind the Margery," said the man.

"This was a nice scheme of mine, you think so, Jack?" Margery tilted head bewitchingly to look up into his for Jack Singleton was tall.

"Wonderful!" he replied joyously. an is only another name for

THE EFFECT OF WAR UPON EDUCATION.

Ella Flagg Young's Opinion. By Special Contributor.

It is recalled that Mrs. Young came prominently before the public in 1909, Chicago astonished the country by her to the office of superintendent city schools. The very idea of a to direct the work of their schools to have suggested itself previously to the boards of education of the big cities, and the election caused surprise. The magnitude of the with its superintendency of more teachers, and nearly 300,000 its supervision of the annual disbursement of more than $50,000,000 and its of a salary of $10,000, the second school superintendent's salary in the States, all sent a thrill of interest those who had at heart the education of the nation's school children. Bold and tenacious as she is in the advocacy of her educational theories, principles and ideals, she is gracious and approachable in manner, and because of the love and veneration she engendered among the teachers of Chicago, the woman principals of the elementary schools of that city named their club the "Ella Flagg Young Club" in her honor.

Effect of War on American Child.

The natural subject for an interview with the distinguished educator, now sojourning in Washington, was the effect of the war upon the education of the American child, and her first statement was characteristic of the author of "Isolation in the School."

MRS. ELLA FLAGG YOUNG.

"Judging by the interest taken by the boys and girls and students in higher schools in the success or failure of those armies in which the people are especially interested, and judging by the influence of the Red Cross and Liberty Loan in the schools, I should say that because of the war the school is going to take on a character nearer to that for which the teachers have long been striving than ever before," she said. "They are now, for the first time, really getting the schools into touch with the life outside; yet not the life which is beyond or foreign to their legitimate realm.

"The work they have been doing during the past summer in the gardens, and the work along the manual lines, especially that taken up by the girls—the cooking, the knitting and the sewing—are all a valuable part of their real education.

"And, by the way, I do not see why our boys do not knit," Mrs. Young looked up to say. "In other countries they are given instruction and opportunity to work in this important branch. I have recently learned of a boy in Toronto, Canada, who has knitted over sixty pairs of socks for his countrymen in the French trenches. All honor to him. Why cannot our boys learn to knit? We are too afraid of making boys effeminate.

"And yet, after all, when it comes to the real issue, it is the men and not the women who have the control of what are generally regarded as the womanly industries—the cooking and the sewing. One goes to a banquet; it is not the women who have planned the bill of fare or cooked the viands; all has been done by men. The clothes they wear, all of them were made by men. Yet we talk of cooking and sewing as strictly women's occupations. Women have not the control of these industries, by any means. The men have the profitable end of it in their hands. The war, and its needs of women's help in every direction in which it may be employed, is directing the attention of educators to giving the young people instruction in those things which will make them of service to the life outside.

What the School Tries to Do.

"The school has tried to prepare the child for a vocation, to give it a technical training in handicraft, yet the teachers know perfectly well that a great deal of it has been wasted effort. Now, however, it is realized that such training is closely connected with the demand just outside the schoolroom, and that it is to the material advantage of the child to gain a thorough knowledge of some practical industry. And the realization of the value of the training of this character must go on after the war. I am not favoring war, and cannot by any means call it a blessing, but to meet such an obstacle as is now before us and to overcome it is something gained.

"The great aim in education during the past fifteen years has been to cut down on subjects, particularly in the public schools. I think that the concentration on school work today and the work which is to follow outside of the school, will make it desirable to teach every subject fully to the children in elementary or grammar schools.

"I would not reduce the subjects to a utilitarian basis, but I would take a blue pencil and cut out much of the detail work now being carried in courses of study. It did not take the war to teach the reduction in the number of subjects, but with the idea of assisting in the war the subject will have a hold and meaning hitherto unappreciated.

"Whatever reduction is made in a course of study, there should be for children over 10 years of age different courses. It is realized in the home long before the age of 10 that John and Tom are entirely unlike in taste and predilection, and that Mary and Julia have abilities and preferences of an entirely dissimilar character. The wise parent places before them different books. But the public school has gone on the principle that all the children, until they go to high school, should have the same course of study."

From this it will be seen that Mrs. Young regards the business of the educator to be the development of personality, and it is a fact that she has allied herself with the most advanced psychological methods along these lines.

Thrift Must be Developed.

"The war has taught us that in our schools we must develop thrift in materials placed in the hands of boys and girls, as well as give instruction along the same line in cooking and eating. Unless we can do that we will miss a great deal out of this situation which environs us," Mrs. Young declared.

"One hears all over the country a good deal of talk in opposition to teaching German in the schools. I cannot see why a language should be punished. If French pronunciation were easier and the language less idiomatic it would assuredly be very desirable to substitute French for German. But as it is, consider the time it takes to teach and to learn such idiomatic phrases."

It has been said of Mrs. Young that she is a hard person to interview. That is hardly the case. If she can give a message that she thinks will benefit mankind she will go to any amount of personal trouble to deliver it. If she is asked to talk of herself she may be difficult to interview, and the austerity which is part of an unusual personality may come to the fore. Otherwise the interviewer has the benefit only of great dignity, with the modesty and the sadness, not to omit the humor, which are so often commingled in the make-up of great men and women.

It has been a matter for comment that the late President Harper of the University of Chicago made an exception of Mrs. Young and asked her to accept a professorship in his aggressive new school, though he had, as all knew, a fixed prejudice against women in positions of authority.

the corn flour as free from oil as rye and fitted it for making the finest of bread and for all sorts of cakes. During my stay in Berlin some of the bakers using such corn meal for cake baking, selling the product as made of wheat government was also experimenting on corn as a food for the cavalry At that time the army horse was more important than now, and had concocted a condensed horse for the cavalry on the march. I am how much corn meal this contained, was a concentrated mixture, which such nutriment that a man could in his pocket a sufficient number of of it to feed a horse for a week, enable it to march that long without food. All such foods were kept and the same is true of the foods used army today. In 1870 the army which France was supplied with a pea which formed a first-class food, and the rest of Europe had not prior to that time.

Europe to Eat Corn.

Col. Murphy's idea to make corn common in Europe as wheat flour flour are now. He wanted to get market for the corn crop, and the same is open today. If the millions of could be taught to eat corn meal it add greatly to the value of American corn, and the crop would be worth hundreds of millions of dollars per year more than it is now. Col. Murphy had prepared a recipe book showing several hundreds ways in which corn could be used as human food in place of wheat and rye, and with these he demonstrated the value of the cereal to the people of Europe. He gave me a copy of the book, which now lies before me. It has directions for making a hundred or more dishes of corn meal. The recipes are from different parts of the Union. Many are from New England and many from the South, which today is the chief corn-eating section of the country. The southern recipes include hoe cakes, ash cakes, corn pones and dodgers. One recipe is headed "Iowa Waffles," another "Illinois Corn Muffins," and a third, "Georgia Corn Dodgers." There are also many recipes for corn bread, corn puddings and cake of various kinds used as desserts. Some of the recipes require only water, salt and corn meal, and some take more or less fats or other ingredients.

The national Department of Agriculture has recently published a cook book as to the use of corn and corn meal. This probably contains some of Col. Murphy's recipes, and it has many others showing the various ways in which our housewives can make appetizing bread, cake, puddings and other dishes without the use of flour. The book should be in the hand of every family, and it will be a material aid to such as wish to help the nation in the saving of wheat at this important time in our history. The cook book is for general distribution, and a letter to the Secretary of Agriculture should bring one to you. The title is "Farmers' Bulletin No. 565."

Or. I, being in the lead, did not hear Archie Ramsden, an exhausted swimmer, call for help, but Salisbury heard and swam to assist the man. At the finish of the race I was so tired I held to a ladder on the side of a boathouse to rest and looked around for Salisbury. Neither Burnett nor I could see him.

"I climbed to the platform of the boathouse, then saw Salisbury rise from the water, calling for help. I jumped in and swam to him, and discovered Archie under the water with a death grip upon Salisbury. I tried to pull them apart, and, failing, struck Archie in the jaw to make him relax his hold. We sank. I was afraid he would grab me, so I dived behind him and waited as long as possible before taking him by the hair. Then swam to the middle of the river. I called for help several times, for I was afraid I would become exhausted. There were about 100 men and boys on the bank, but they would not come to our aid. Finally I made two swimmers understand and they shoved a canoe to me, and we placed Ramsden in the canoe and started to wade upstream to the bank.

"In the meantime, Salisbury, who had had so hard a struggle, became completely exhausted, calling for help, and Burnett went to him, though he could not do any more than keep him afloat. Burnett yelled to me that if I didn't come back he and Salisbury both would drown. I went back, and after an almost losing fight we did make it to the boat, loaded Salisbury on top of Ramsden and pushed the canoe upstream around some cavernous holes made by the government dredge, to the bank. Ramsden was delirious. It was some time before we all got all right.

"Incidentally, two months later, I rescued a child from being run over by four cars and a switch engine. I was yardmaster at Albany, Or., on the Southern Pacific. We were shoving four cars of slabwood ahead of the engine, I standing on top of the first load. We were going around a sharp curve, and the track was slippery from oil on the rails. Just past this curve a trestle spans a canal, and in the middle of the trestle, astride the rail, stood Archie McTimmons 3½ years old. The boy was frantic with fear. I yelled to the crew and gave emergency stop signals. Realizing they could not stop, I jumped to the ground and ran ahead of the cars, grabbed the little fellow and jumped into the canal just as the forward car passed us. As it turned out, we got only a ducking."

The Intolerable Rooster.

The hen is not at all proud-spirited. She differs in that respect from her rooster spouse. Whether her marriage vows bind her to love and obey him and to drudge and lay for him, as in the case of human mortals, I am not ready to state, but it would seem very much that way by the haughty air chanticleer assumes toward her ladyship.

Married roosters are far more selfish than husbands of the human tribe. A man, even though he detests housework, will sometimes condescend to carry a scuttle of coal or turn the wringer on wash day. But you'll never find a rooster willing to interfere with a hen's domestic affairs.—[Zim, in Cartoons Magazine.

WHO IS NUMBER ONE? EIGHTH EPISODE.

Walls of Gas. By Anna Katharine Green.

THE shadow of The Twisted Thread lay dark and heavy on the home of Graham Hale on the morning after the murder of Hugo Wald. Wald, the tutor of Aimee Villon, Graham Hale's ward, had been shot to death the night before—on his sleeve, when his body was found by Tommy Hale and Aimee, was the sinister sign of the mysterious organization that had for weeks been attacking Graham Hale and all who came in touch with him. Instant search had failed to reveal any trace of the murderer; the blow had been dealt, as was invariably the case with the assaults of The Twisted Thread, with a really devilish skill.

The Hales, father and son, and Aimee sat at breakfast. None had any appetite; they toyed with their food as they awaited the arrival of Donovan, the chief of the detective agency upon which Graham Hale leaned most heavily in his efforts to cope with his formidable and mysterious enemy.

"Poor Wald!" said Tommy. "We misjudged him terribly! I'm only glad that we never let him know our suspicions!"

"I didn't know, you'd suspected him at all!" said Aimee. She looked up with a start. "You didn't tell me, Tommy—!"

"Well, there wasn't much to tell," said Tommy, defensively. "But, you see, it's been certain for some time that The Twisted Thread had an agent in the house, here. It's known of things that only someone on the inside could have told. Some of the messages that have come from it couldn't be explained in any other way, either. And it's certain that all the trouble began on the day that Wald arrived—"

"That true," said Aimee.

"So—suspicion did rather point to him! But it's been effectually averted, poor chap! I guess he'd rather be alive, and under suspicion, than dead, as he is—even though his death has cleared him."

Graham Hale stirred. His face was pale and haggard; his eyes were bloodshot.

"These people will accomplish their purpose with me before long!" he said. "I can't stand the strain much longer. They don't want to kill me—they want to drive me mad! Well—a few weeks more of this sort of thing will give them their way!"

"Dad—you've got to brace up! If you talk like that you'll be playing their game for them?" said Tommy.

And Aimee, too, turned to her guardian. "They'll be beaten!" she said, confidently. "They've gone too far—altogether too far. And—don't you think it may be their object really is blackmail, after all—that presently, when they think you're badly enough frightened, they will come into the open and make some specific demand?"

Graham Hale shook his head.

"No," he said. "I'm convinced that they have some mad plan of vengeance—that someone, with a fancied injury to revenge, has marked me down. They sent me their warnings for years—and always they said the day of reckoning would come. Then at last they began this attack. They could have killed me easily. But they've said, expressly, that they don't want to do that. They want to ruin me financially, to discredit me, to drive family and friends away from me by proving that it isn't safe to have anything to do with me—and, ultimately, to drive me mad, so that my life will be a living death!"

"Well, they'll never drive me from you!" said Aimee, going to him and throwing her arms about him. "You took me in to care for me when I was left alone after poor father died—and I'll never forget how good you've been to me."

"But, my dear," said Hale, with a groan, "being with us has meant only that you have been in constant danger and discomfort! They have marked you down, as well as Tommy."

"I can stand it," said Aimee, pluckily. "I've never been the sort of girl to faint and run away from danger or excitement! And they certainly can't frighten me off."

"I guess you needn't worry about being left alone, Dad," said Tommy. "I'll stand by, you know. They've come pretty close to putting me out of the way a couple of times—but I know how far they're prepared to go, now, and I can take care of myself."

"Mr. Donovan to see you, sir," said a servant, coming in and speaking to Graham Hale.

They all rose, with gestures of relief. Donovan, the detective, was well liked by all of them. He had, it was true, been hoodwinked and balked by The Twisted Thread when he had attempted to arrest the woman who was, so far as it was possible to tell, its moving spirit, when she had arrived from England on a steamer. But the Hales had had too good an opportunity to judge the ability of the gang and its leaders to hold that against Donovan; they knew that it would have required superhuman skill and ingenuity for any man to cope with The Twisted Thread successfully in his first encounter with it.

The Sign—through steel and stone!

He was young, cheerful, optimistic. And he had behind him a splendid record of achievement. Police and secret service were glad to work with him and to have his help. He was the favorite resort of men like Graham Hale, millionaires and the heads of great enterprises, when they needed services such as he rendered. And his defeat by The Twisted Thread in his first brush with it had only sharpened his desire and redoubled his determination to conquer it eventually. He and Tommy Hale, in particular, had become excellent friends, and he had a real respect and liking for Graham Hale, who was beginning to show such obvious signs of the strain of the continued attack of The Twisted Thread upon both mind and body.

"I've got the police report of all the circumstances of this case, Mr. Hale," Donovan said, at once. "And the man they sent out from my office had given me his report, too. I'm sorry I couldn't be reached last night—I was out, following up a clew. First, fresh impressions are always the best in a case like this, and I like to get them for myself—not at second hand. But we'll have to do the best we can."

"It's a terrible business," said Hale. Donovan looked at him sharply, and shook his head, soberly, as he noticed Hale's trembling hands and his pale face. "You see—as Tommy told you yesterday, we were growing suspicious of the poor chap. We even thought he might be the mysterious Number One of The Twisted Thread! And now he's murdered by the very organization of which we thought he might be the head!"

"Well, there's no harm done—so far as that goes," said Donovan, soothingly. "He didn't know about our suspicions. And we needn't tell anyone of them now. I'd like to look at the scene of the crime."

That was easily arranged. Donovan, his manner changing as soon as he reached his field of operations, went to work keenly. A chalk outline had been made on the carpet, showing exactly where Wald's body had lain, and how it had been lying when it was found. Donovan measured; examined the French windows through which, it seemed, the shot must have come; went out, using great care, and examined various marks in the soft earth of the garden just outside the windows.

"Here's one thing they left me to find out for myself," he said, dryly. "Whoever was wandering around out here wore Arch-spring shoes—which are too expensive to be common property! That really narrows down the list of possible criminals to some extent!"

One more plea

Graham Hale had started nervously at the detective's mention of the sort of shoes worn by the man who had left such obvious traces of his wandering among the flower beds. Now he looked down at his own feet—and Donovan's eyes followed him.

"That's odd!" said Donovan, with a laugh that had rather a queer quality. "You—"

"I've worn Arch-spring shoes for some years," said Graham Hale, fretfully. "I've had a good deal of trouble with my feet—I am obliged to wear them to get any comfort at all—"

"You have them made to order, I suppose?" said Donovan, in what he was obviously trying to make a chatty, confidential tone.

"Yes!" said Hale, doggedly. "I have several pairs upstairs—"

The subject was dropped—for the mo- ment. Tommy, suddenly catching the [illegible] ble drift of the conversation, looked [illegible] startled and angry; Aimee was [illegible] troubled.

"Look here, Donovan," said Tommy, [illegible] "That business about the shoes and the footprints—? You're surely not thinking of suggesting that my father could have killed Hugo Wald!"

"I'm not suggesting anything yet, [illegible] my," said Donovan, with decision. [illegible] it's my business to run down any [illegible] appears. I can't, even for a [illegible] the possibility that my researches [illegible] me to be unpleasant conclusion, [illegible]

"Of course not! But that's so [illegible] ly absurd and impossible!"

"I'm sorry, Tommy, but it's [illegible] father is in an abnormal condition. [illegible] people did suspect Wald—your father [illegible] have shot him, in the belief that he [illegible] terfering with the execution of [illegible] sign of The Twisted Thread—and [illegible] feel that his proof was not [illegible] that case he would conceal his [illegible]

"But—it wouldn't be like him—"

"He isn't like himself. [illegible] saying that there's any [illegible] have talked about the possibility [illegible] all, if you hadn't brought [illegible]

[illegible] And I certainly don't think for a [illegible], if your father has any knowledge concerning Wald's death, it's what would ordinarily be considered a criminal [illegible]."

"[illegible] here!" said Tommy, suddenly. "[illegible] about the sign of The Twisted [illegible] that was on Wald's coat sleeve? [illegible] that prove that my father knew [illegible] about the shooting?"

"[illegible]," Donovan shrugged his shoulders. "We won't get anywhere by talking [illegible] it now. I want to see the servants. [illegible] still a lot of points I'd like to see [illegible] up."

[illegible] was deeply troubled as Donovan [illegible] to see the servants. He could see, [illegible] enough, how suspicion might point [illegible] Hale; he could see, too, that The [illegible] Thread, with its known and diabolically, might so have contrived matters to cast suspicion upon the man it [illegible]. That, he saw, would be a [illegible] of the sort of torture it was [illegible] its principal weapon against Graham; the knowledge that he was suspected, no matter how absolute his own [illegible] of his innocence might be, [illegible] his curious mental state, be dangerous and destructive in the extreme.

[illegible] coming upon Aimee, found her, [illegible] sympathetic. And, obeying an [illegible] he told her of the new developments.

"[illegible] absurd!" she said, swiftly. "I [illegible] Mr. Donovan had some such idea! [illegible] a trained detective would see [illegible] his idea was impossible. Find [illegible] Tommy, and I'll show him why [illegible]."

[illegible] quick wit had, as a matter of [illegible] upon the fact that shattered Donovan's theory.

"[illegible] at the depth of the footprint made [illegible] Hale!" she said. "And now look at [illegible]! This one is made by a person [illegible] pounds lighter than Mr. Hale. [illegible] is in the same condition this [illegible] it was in last night—and the [illegible] are much lighter than the ones [illegible] has made here this morning."

"[illegible], by Jove!" said Donovan. "[illegible]—you've settled one thing! [illegible] left up in the air!"

[illegible] that might have set him right [illegible] reveal to him. For there was [illegible] him of the jealousy of Marie, [illegible] maid—of the quarrels that had [illegible] between her and Wald because [illegible] devotion to Aimee—of the relations [illegible] them that had been ended [illegible] lifted his eyes to Aimee. [illegible] unknown to any save the [illegible] had been chiefly concerned. And [illegible] did take note, and anxious [illegible] fact that Marie, alone among [illegible] servants, was not to be found when [illegible] questioning them.

[illegible] days Graham Hale had not been [illegible] city. He had been neglecting his [illegible] affairs. They were carried on in [illegible], of course, by competent subordinates [illegible] whom he had implicit confidence. [illegible] the same time, his guiding hand [illegible] was needed. He lacked interest [illegible] his affairs, however; to Tommy, [illegible] his father would be better if [illegible] gave him some distraction, he [illegible] to listen.

"[illegible]!" he said, pettishly. "I can't [illegible] my mind on business or anything except this infernal mystery of [illegible] Thread! I suppose there are [illegible] ought to have my attention—"

[illegible] lunch, after Donovan had gone, [illegible] came up that quickened Graham [illegible] interest. Word came from the [illegible] National Bank, the keystone [illegible] great financial structure that he had [illegible] that a quiet run was in progress. [illegible] him—the bank was his most [illegible] enterprise. He and Tommy made [illegible] run into town—while Aimee took [illegible] car for a shopping tour. At the [illegible] Tommy listened to the conference between his father and the bank officials.

"[illegible] in good shape," said the cashier. "[illegible] there's a steady withdrawal that I [illegible] like. Some accounts that we have had [illegible] long time have been transferred to [illegible] banks in the last week. And people [illegible] enough cash to deplete our reserve rather seriously."

"[illegible] make arrangements to replenish your reserve at once," said Graham Hale. [illegible] He was an extremely rich [illegible] but a great part of his wealth was [illegible], of course, as is always true of [illegible], by assets which, while their value [illegible] unquestionable, were not quickly converted into cash, except at a tremendous [illegible]. And he knew, only too well, how [illegible] the public is to the faintest rumor [illegible] the solvency of any bank.

No bank is in a position to meet the claims of all its depositors, should all demand their money at the same time. The money placed in a bank by depositors is used in various ways. Banks make their money by the difference between the rate of interest they pay to their depositors and the rate they collect for the loans they make; therefore, a great part of the money they hold is always represented by notes, mortgages, securities of various kinds. A cash reserve, carefully calculated to be sufficient to meet all demands, and fixed by law, is always in the vaults. But it is not enough to withstand a formidable run; if that comes the most solvent bank in the world may be compelled to close its doors and undergo the slow process of liquidation of its assets, which is costly and usually fatal to its reopening, even though the depositors who force such action may, after long delay, get their money or most of it.

So Graham Hale, wise and experienced in the ways of banks and of the public, was both annoyed and worried. And he set to work at once, using his personal credit, to arrange for the transfer of as much cash as possible to the vaults of the great bank he controlled. He found conditions difficult for borrowing. Money was scarce and hard to get; the terms were onerous. Moreover, rumors concerning him were obviously afloat. He ground his teeth as he turned to Tommy, after he had talked to several men by telephone.

"I can see the hand of The Twisted Thread in this, Tommy!" he said. "They are spreading these rumors—there must be men highly placed involved in the plot. But we'll come through! They're trying to fight me on my own ground when they come down here to Wall street!"

"That's the way to talk, Dad," said Tommy, delighted. "It's only when you slump and act as if you thought they might beat you that I get worried!"

"Well—I've done all I can!" said Graham Hale, some hours later. "I know these runs. This thing may just flicker along for days as it's been doing—or they may come down here tomorrow morning to find a line stretching around the block, waiting for the doors to open."

"We might as well go home now, though."

"Nothing else to do here! Home it is, by all means."

Word of the new development concerning the bank had been sent promptly to Donovan. He, too, was familiar with banking practice and conditions, and he shared Mr. Hale's concern. He was uneasy—and he decided to take steps to try to trace the origin of a run if one should really develop in the morning. To that end he called two or three of his operatives, and drove down town with them to the financial district.

"I'll want you to watch the bank carefully tonight," he said, "and, in the morning, to mingle with any crowd that may be waiting for the bank to open. Find out where the people come from—try to learn what has led them to decide to take their money out of the bank so quickly. Get all you can, generally speaking."

He stopped his cab a block or more from the bank, which was a low building in one of the dark and narrow streets of the financial district. As he got out he saw a fire hose wagon standing by the curb; firemen in helmets were paying out hose. He stepped up to a policeman, showed his badge, and asked a question

"Fire, officer?" he asked.

A fire department lieutenant came up, heard the question, and relieved the policeman of the need of answering it.

"No, sir," he said. "The chief's trying out a new scheme—that's all. A plan for isolating a fire in case of conflagration. You know—that's one thing keeps us awake nights—the thought of a great fire getting away from us, the way the Baltimore and San Francisco fires got away. This is a new invention—the idea is to throw up a screen of vapor that would starve the fire to death and keep it from spreading."

"Very interesting," said Donovan. "Nasty smelling stuff!"

A wall of vapor was rising already, indeed, from the hose.

"Dangerous stuff, too, sir," was the reply. "It's a poisonous gas that would knock you out in a minute if you weren't protected against it. Our men are using their smoke helmets—d'you see? Better keep back when it begins to rise."

"Thanks—I'll do that," said Donovan. He turned to his men. "Come on—we'd better get along."

They rounded the corner and found that the wall of gas was already of considerable extent. Firemen, in smoke helmets, could be seen on its other side; policemen and one or two curious spectators, late passers-by, even in that section, usually so utterly deserted after dark, were looking on. Suddenly Donovan started, suspiciously.

"The Thirty-fourth National is cut off!" he said. "They have the building isolated with their gas! I—by Jove, I don't like the looks of this!"

Even as he spoke some of the firemen, who could be seen dimly through the barrier of the rising gas, approached the massive entrance of the bank. They bent over and seemed to be busily engaged. Then, in a moment, they scattered and ran back—but only a few yards. They still remained within the zone cut off by the gas. And they gathered, and stood watching the door.

In a moment there was a dull roar and the door was shattered by a violent explosion. The firemen ran forward, and at the same instant the policemen, following the instinct that ruled the minds of every man detailed to this section, the protection of which was so vastly important, charged forward. The gas stopped them; the moment they came into contact with its noxious fumes they went down. They lay about, insensible—and one of Donovan's men, who had joined their reckless forward rush, was also a victim of this strange and terrible vapor.

"My God! They've got everyone shut out—they can loot the bank at their leisure!" cried Donovan. "Here—Smith—get in touch with headquarters! Have enough men sent down to isolate this whole section, so that they can't get away. Jones—telephone to Mr. Graham Hale and tell him what's going on. I'll stay here—but it's suicide to try to go through that wall of gas!"

But desperate though the attempt was, heroic policemen among those who, summoned by whistles and the tapping of night sticks, were coming up every minute, continued to make it. Men dropped like flies; their comrades, risking asphyxiation themselves, dragged them back to a region of clear, clean air.

"There's chlorine in that gas!" said Donovan, with a shudder. "It's the ghastliest weapon, I ever heard of! An army, using that in a battle, could annihilate an enemy that was not prepared with masks or helmets like those those fake firemen are wearing!"

Ambulances came clattering up, with bells ringing; patrol wagons from every nearby precinct poured in. A crowd gathered, as if the news had already begun to spread; a scene of indescribable confusion prevailed. And all the time, beyond the walls of gas, the men of The Twisted Thread were at work, unmolested, safe from any attempt to check their criminal attack upon the vault of Graham Hale's bank.

To Graham Hale and Tommy, seated with Aimee, and playing cards, the news came with shocking suddenness. At once they set out for the scene of the disaster, and Aimee refused, as usual, to be left behind. So great was their concern that they did not seek overhard to persuade her to stay at home in safety—indeed, Tommy was not sure that she would be safer at home than if she were with them.

"They might think that she'd be left at home and make some fresh attempt here," he said to his father. "Let her come!"

And Graham Hale was too shocked and upset to argue.

The long drive through the night was a nerve-racking experience. Long before they reached the district where the extraordinary crime was in process of consummation the din of the ambulances, the fire engines and the patrol wagons, racing toward their destination, aroused them. And when they arrived a scene of amazing and bewildering confusion greeted their shocked and amazed eyes. An assault was being delivered upon the hose wagon, which, as was now plain, contained the tank from which the poison gas was being released through the long hose that had been laid. It was defended by men—three of them, only, there were, against a hundred!—whose sole weapon was a nozzle from which more of the deadly stuff was hurled at any who came too near.

Courage there was, in plenty, among those who sought to reach the hose wagon and turn off the supply of gas. But it needed more than courage to withstand such weapons. Man after man went down, insensible, and had to be dragged back by his comrades. It was Aimee who hit upon the solution at last. She spied the wheel that controlled the flow of gas; saw just where it was. And then, slipping away, she got an oilskin hat from the car—a hat she used in wet weather. When she placed it over her head it protected her from the fumes—but it also blinded her. She waited, however, until she saw that the attention of the defenders was distracted by an attack led by Tommy himself; then, adjusting her improvised gas helmet, she dashed for the wheel. She groped for it—found it—turned, desperately. A man struck her—but she had accomplished her purpose. The flow of gas was cut off—in a swift rush the defenders were overwhelmed.

At once the swiftly rising gas ceased to come from the perforated hose. Everywhere police rushed over into the zone that had been barred by the deadly walls. Graham Hale, leading one rush, exulted.

"They can't get away!" he cried. "I'll pay $1000 for every man captured—dead or alive!"

One of the "firemen," as soon as he saw that the game was up, had rushed through the wrecked entrance of the bank. And now, in a solid phalanx, the looters came out, charging straight into the advancing police. Bullets flew like hail. In the center of the flying wedge made by the gangsters were men who staggered as they ran, so heavily were they burdened by sacks of gold from the looted vaults.

Their plan had been well laid. And it succeeded amazingly. The police were swept aside by that savage rush; the gangsters reached a flock of taxicabs that had been drawn up; the motors went screaming off, with shots flying back at those who tried to pursue. In a minute the great raid was over; only real police and firemen remained.

Graham Hale, staggering from a blow he had received from a slungshot in the course of the melee, leaned on Donovan's shoulder. Tommy, coughing, but recovering slowly from the effects of the gas, came up to him.

"We'd better see just how much damage has been done, dad," he said.

"I guess they've done it, this time," said Graham Hale, with a groan. "News like this—there'll be a run in the morning that no bank could meet! They've probably wiped out my cash reserve!"

But he went in. Tommy, Aimee and Donovan were with him. The interior of the vaults presented a shocking sight. Small bills, securities, bags of silver coin, ripped open and scornfully cast aside, were everywhere. The gold was gone, and the great stacks of large bills.

"Hundreds of thousands of dollars—that's their loot!" said Graham Hale. "It's as bad as I feared—worse—"

He collapsed utterly. But Tommy spied something suddenly. At his feet lay an envelope—a small envelope. He picked it up, curiously. Inside was a key and a scrap of paper, on which was written a single line:

"Open your private vault."

Tense with excitement, Tommy took the key and obeyed. And inside Graham Hale's vault was all the money that had been supposed to be stolen—and another note. It was brief:

"The Twisted Thread will find only wads of paper, with bills outside—and bags full of leaden washers!" it ran.

Almost delirious with joy and excitement, Tommy took the news to his father. Graham Hale was incredulous. But the evidence of the vault, full to overflowing with gold and bills, was insurmountable. Deeper than ever was the mystery.

Who could have obtained Graham Hale's key—who dropped it in the wrecked vaults? Who had written these notes? Who, of the criminals of The Twisted Thread, had betrayed his associates and saved Graham Hale and his bank?

But such speculation was idle—and there was little of it in the flush of delight that came with the realization that disaster had been averted. The physical damage to the bank building was a small matter—with the reserve intact, it would be possible to stave off the imminent run.

It was Aimee who cried out in sudden terror, pointing to Graham Hale's sleeve. Upon it was the sign of The Twisted Thread—the device of threads, in the now familiar form—

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA WILD FLOWERS.

The "Old Men." By Francis M. Fultz.

MANY of the composite flowers ripen into fluffy white balls of fly-away seeds. Children are in the habit of calling such plants "Old Men," seeing in them the semblance of gray beards and snowy heads of hair. This is not only a fancy of children, either, for long ago the botanists—who are supposed to be hard-headed, scientific, matter-of-fact men, with no nonsense about them—grouped a number of such plants in a genus and named it Senecio, which is the Latin for "old man." It sometimes happens that men of science, as well as children, see what things really look like.

We have our full share of these "old men" flowers in Southern California; and the most common and most noticeable among them are also "left-overs," and are to be found lingering along until the spring flowers are in full bloom. One of them is a Senecio too, a number of that "old man" genus which the botanists named so long ago in Europe. We have several Senecios, but this particular one I am talking about is the biggest, as well as the commonest, of them all; and, as far as I know, it is the only one of them found growing down in our valleys which is a left-over. The botanist calls it Senecio Douglasii; children call it "old man;" other persons, "creek Senecio."

This old man Senecio of ours is a shrub some three or four feet tall, with a beautiful, silver gray, fringy foliage and bright yellow flowers an inch-and-a-half or so across. The center of the flower is somewhat darker than the ray-petals, which droop and twist with different degrees of curvature, so that no two have quite the same shape and position. This gives the flowers a rather untidy appearance, and an independent, I-don't-care-how-I-look sort of air. For this reason, they are almost sure to attract your attention, if you happen to pass near them. You may not like them, on account of this "ragged" appearance. I should like them better, myself, if they had a more regular shape.

Our Creek Senecio blooms far into the winter months, but it is just before the rains begin that its crop of "gray hair" is finest and most bountiful. Its "white locks" quickly vanish before wind and rain; but when it is at its best, no other plant has such a shiny, silvery head.

The "old man" that is most plentiful with us, and one of those which the children know best by that name, is the heterotheca. That's a long name. It's much easier to call it "old man," and that's what a great many of us, beside the children, do. It's just a weed to most people; they don't even see that it bears flowers. Nearly everybody knows it—even if they have no name for it—for it grows almost everywhere, and I've seen it in bloom in every month of the year. I can't say that its yellow flowers are very pretty, yet a stalk with fifty or sixty blooms on it at once—as there often are—makes a goodly display of color. When these blooms, with perhaps as many more, making over a hundred in all, turn into tawny-gray balls of fly-away seeds, the stalk becomes really imposing and striking.

The plants are often five or six feet tall; and there may be hundreds of them growing in a troop, making a genuine "graybeard regiment." No one ever thinks of gathering the heterothecas for a bouquet, because the plants have a ragged, untidy appearance, and are not pleasant to handle. So they are not very popular. I can't say that I admire them very much, myself—as flowers—yet I honor them for doing what they can to "make glad the waste places."

"OLD MAN" HETEROTHECA.

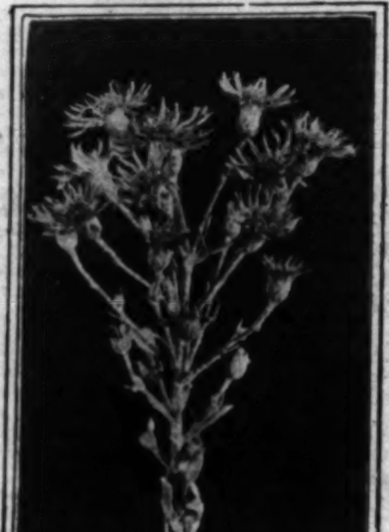
Old Man, growing so tall and straight,
Why are you blooming still, so late?
"Why should I cease to bloom and grow,
Before the frosts shall lay me low?"

Old Man, standing so sturdy there,
Where did you get your snow-white hair?
"Out of my golden flower-frocks
Have come my beautiful silver locks."

Old Man, standing so bravely on,
Where has your crown of silver gone?
"Ask of the winds, for day by day
They have carried my silver locks away."

Another winter-blooming plant of the "old man" sort is the groundsel tree. It is not a tree at all, as its name might seem to indicate, but a bush; and not a very woody one at that. It is often called by its botanical name, Baccharis; and sometimes "mule-fat," because it is said that horses and other animals eat it when other forage is short and that mules are fond of it at all times. It grows along our washes and river bottoms. Many persons take it to be a species of willow. Its foliage and manner of growth are somewhat like those of the willow, but its flowers are not at all the same. Its flowers are of the "family," or composite sort, while those of the willow are of the "kitty-cat" kind.

One of the grayest and most "ancient" looking of all our "old man" plants is the Perezia. This is a tall plant, often reaching five or six feet in height. It is frequently seen growing along the public roads, and I have seen it few times right down on the city streets. It is a late summer bloomer, and bears masses of pink-purple flowers, which do not last very long, but which soon turn into magnificent "gray heads" that often remain on the stalks until the winter storms come. By that time the heads are no longer gray, but are very dirty with the dust of many weeks.



HETEROTHECA IN FLOWER.

The Clematises, of which we have two, are among the most famous of our "old man" flowers. One of them is a spring, and the other a late summer bloomer, but their "gray beards" and "silvery heads" last far into the next season. The clematises are more interesting for another reason, however, which I shall tell you about in a future chapter.

Many of the early blooming flowers which we might place in our "old man" group do not keep their gray heads very long—like the dandelion, for instance—while many others make such a small display of "white hair" that we do not notice that they are of that sort. But the group is a very large one. A number of the "left-overs" which continue to bloom far into the winter are quite likely to escape our notice as belonging to the "old man," because their seeds are not very generously supplied with pappus—the downy hair which makes up the "silvery head"—or because it is dispersed by the slightest breeze, and therefore no mass of it collects on the stalks.

The flowering straw is a "left-over" of this sort. The botanists call it ptiloria, and there are three or four species of it in Southern California. The one that is so plentiful about Los Angeles and Pasadena, and on eastward, is ptiloria pleurocarpa. This flowering straw is a straggly, branching plant, from two to seven or eight feet tall, and with leaves so small and scale-like that you don't notice them at all, but think that the plant hasn't any. It will grow almost anywhere, and whenever a farmer or gardener quits cultivating a lot, it jumps right in and takes possession.

The flowering straw has pretty, little flowers, from half an inch to an inch across, which are sometimes quite pink, but more often white faintly striped with pink. You must go out in the evening or early morning to find these flowers at their best, for they are naturally night-bloomers and are apt to close up when the bright sun strikes them. Very few of them open a second time, and if they do, they are never so pretty as at first. They remain open during foggy weather, and often when the day is cloudy. When they begin blooming, usually in July, the flowers at the end of the branches open first, and we may see a dozen or more of them closely set against the stalk, crowding one another on a twig so slender that they hide it altogether. As these fade, others farther down the stalk open out, and they are fewer in number. They usually occur quite singly and alone—one or two, perhaps, on each of the long branches. The juice from the stalks is very milky and sticky. Any one who tries to gather the flowers soon gets his hands disagreeably dirty. Even brushing against the stalks is quite likely to soil one's clothes.

There is another "left-over" with tall, straggling, almost leafless stalks and branches that are much like those of the flowering straw, although they are not quite so milky and disagreeable. This is the cliff aster, which we find on the rocky cliffs some distance back from the ocean, as in the hills along the Arroyo Seco, or in the Hollywood hills. Its flowers are white, and a little larger and much fuller than those of the flowering straw. As the cooler weather comes on, they take on a tinge of pink, as if their cheeks were being pinched. I'm sure they like the warm weather of September and October better than the rainy days of December; yet they continue to bloom until January, unless they are caught by the frost.

On the cliffs near the ocean, from the Santa Monica Mountains on up through Ventura and Santa Barbara counties, and I don't know how much further, the cliff aster has a bounteous supply of dark green, fringy foliage and beautiful white flowers that are often two inches across and very full. It blooms there, too, all the year round. I have brought in great bunches of it on Christmas Day from the cliffs along the sea near Santa Barbara.

There are a number of plants growing in Southern California which many persons commonly call "old man," but whose "gray heads" are not made up of fly-away seeds—those which I have just been talking about—and which, therefore, do not belong to my "old man" group. But I am going to say something about them, just because so many people know them by that name.

One of them is the white yarrow, or milfoil, as it is often called. I think nearly everybody knows this plant. It is called "old man" everywhere. It has a mat of fine, fringy foliage at the base, from the center of which springs a tall stalk with very little foliage, and topped with a broad, flat umbel of small, white flowers. Sometimes these flower clusters are five or six inches across, and almost perfectly flat. It is one of the few plants which grow all over the northern hemisphere. It is equally well known in Europe, Asia and North America. It is said that its name of "old man" is universal, too, so it must have the patriarchal look, and deserve to be so called. Its botanical name is Achillea millefolium. The generic name was given it, because tradition says that the great warrior Achilles was the first to discover its medicinal value—the healing of wounds and stanching of blood. Its specific name of millefolium means the "thousand leaved." Botanists are inclined to make a separate species of our California plant, under the name of lanulosa, but there seems to be no very good reason for it.

Children are apt to call our everlasting flowers "old man." These flowers are sometimes called "cudweeds," and we have some six or eight species of them. None of them really deserves the name of "old man," even on account of its appearance, unless it might possibly be that which we call the "pearly everlasting." It has a conical head of bright, shiny, satiny flowers, each of which is a cone-shaped head itself. Each little head is almost closed when it is in bloom, but as it ripens its seeds, it [illegible] and becomes a beautiful little [illegible] perfect and as "everlasting" as [illegible] cultivated straw flowers.

The avenue in this section is curved, but on level ground. The heads of the palms are at present the dominating feature as the trunks are not yet sufficiently tall or cleared of leaves as to give a good columnar effect. The mass effect is still further heightened by the thick planting, there being at least twice as many palms as are needed. This whole hot, perhaps a thousand feet in length, is on a curve; curves should be incidental to a straight trunk line, therefore it will be a serious mistake if no more are planted. Those not needed should be moved to a southern extension of the lines or young ones should be used so that the curved portion shall be least in length.

Cocos Palms for Streets.

The most popular palm now used for street and driveway planting is known locally as Cocos plumosa, native to South America. This discussion does not deal with the specific names, though it is believed the form known as C. flexuosa is the hardier and this may again be a form of C. Romanzoffiana, which is less hardy than C. flexuosa, but more hardy than the form we call C. plumosa. Waiving this subject of much controversy, these palms are of the whole family the most attractive and some forms are as beautiful as an ostrich plume. When young they are at times and in some places somewhat insufficient. A poor specimen of small size may be likened to an uncared for stalk of corn; when of large size, having a luxuriant growth of leaves, they are not surpassed in beauty by any member of the whole kingdom of plants. For either streets or private drives they are the most aristocratic, in appearance, of all lines.

The Date of Commerce

In foreign countries there are many avenues planted with the date palm that bears the date of commerce, but in California, and in Florida too, there are no avenues of this palm and they do not seem to be popular for such planting in America. The reason is no doubt the fact that there are other palms quite common that are more valuable and more beautiful than the so-called date of commerce. Nevertheless, it would be worth while, for sake of variety as well as other points, to use the date of commerce palm for roadway alignment. Furthermore, this palm is suited to situations and conditions of which most other palms are intolerant. Some fine specimens of date palm may be found growing close to the sea, where the roots are at all times in ocean water. Others thrive splendidly in alkali flats where scarcely any other vegetation will grow. Across such flats, approaching the ocean front, would prove a fine site for street planting of these palms which, in a few years, would also prove a fine sight. They need much water for rapid growth.

Native Fan Palms.

The palm most used throughout California, in park and garden or planted along streets, is the Washington palm, native to this State and known to science as Washingtonia filifera, variety robusta. In the plant trade and gardening craft the last or varietal name is not used, and, strange to say, is applied to a palm that is much less robust. Ah well; lack-a-day! We will have to stand it, as we will a thousand other inconsistencies in plant names. There are also two other species both of which are imperfectly understood and both are natives of Mexico. One is W. gracilis, the tall slender palm known to nearly all as W. robusta and W. Sonorae, being native to the States of Sonora and Lower California. It does not grow so tall as W. gracilis and the leave-stems, especially near the base, are much darker than in the two other species, and so is the green of the fan. All are much used for street planting but the Californian species, W. filifera is the hardiest of the group and in age the most effective.

A soil covered with gravel cools much more slowly than a sandy soil, so that the heat absorbed during the day is retained farther into the night. This knowledge is taken advantage of in cases where, otherwise, late-fruiting crops would either be caught by frosts or fail to mature through shortness of the high-temperature season. Sod or cover crops prevent warming of the soil.

"Medical Science."

ONE hears much nowadays about the progress of medicine.

I deny that medicine has progressed, but claim that it has retrograded, since the days of Hippocrates, sometimes called the "Father of Medicine," who said: "Nature, not the physician cures." Doctors have multiplied. So have diseases. While the lives of infants have been saved—some of whom might better have died—mortality of those over 40 has increased.

Medical science suppresses symptoms of disease without removing the cause. Then, of course, it breaks out again in some other and usually some more severe form.

All disease is an effort of nature to restore normal conditions. All disease has one cause—the accumulation of waste matter in the blood, due to surplus by-products of food that has not been digested and assimilated. This clogs up the veinlets and interferes with the circulation, also producing accumulation of waste in the colon and autointoxication. Instead of encouraging these efforts of nature, medical science seeks to suppress them, by drugs and serums and by food that cannot be digested in a sick stomach. This is like sitting on the safety valve of a boiler, a dangerous operation.

I saw a striking instance of this fifty years ago when I was at a nature cure establishment in Switzerland. A man came to be treated for catarrh. After a few weeks he developed symptoms of gonorrhoea. This surprised him and then he remembered that seven years before he had been treated for the disease in the regular way, but had been told he was cured. He was not. The disease had been driven back into the blood by drugs. After a few months of wet packs, sun and air baths and eliminative diet, he was really cured.

Disease is not a sudden attack of a malady. It is an attempt of nature to cast forth poison that has been in the blood for years. The rational treatment is by alimentation and elimination—by ceasing to put in more waste, and getting out that which is there through promotion of the working of the eliminative organs—the skin, kidneys, bowels and lungs. Among such methods are sun and air baths, wet packs, steam baths, exercise, deep breathing and a frugal diet of food that does not readily ferment.

Under the regular treatment of drugging and feeding sickness is unduly prolonged. For instance, typhoid fever should never last more than ten days and the patient is then better than he was before, for the impurities in his blood have been burned up. When drugged and fed, the sickness may hang on for months and the patient be left a wreck.

No person whose blood is free of waste, can "catch" disease any more than you can grow wheat on a cement sidewalk. If there are cracks in the cement, and dirt, some wheat will take root and grow.

Or to use another illustration, you cannot set fire to a pile of iron filings. If there are shavings among the filings, they will burn and the more shavings the greater will be the fire. That is why some people have a disease mildly, others severely.

Epidemics of disease occur when atmospheric conditions are favorable to them, just as many get seasick at once when the sea is rough. They do not catch the sickness from one another.

Syphilis is a comparatively simple blood disease to cure, if treated by natural methods in the early stages. I have said before, and I now repeat, that what is known as tertiary syphilis is mainly due to mercurial poisoning. After using this drug for centuries, medical science has now taken up a new arsenical compound, invented by Ehrlich, a German, who died a few years ago. Always putting in one poison to remove another a most illogical proceeding.

The fact is that doctors of the regular school do not understand disease, because they rarely see it uncomplicated by drugs and by food that becomes a poison in a sick stomach. They do not know what nature can do, when given half a chance.

The fresh air cure of tuberculosis is an excellent thing, but it is nullified by the abominable stuffing of food, that would overtax the digestion of a wood-chopper and this in the sick stomach of a consumptive, for a weak digestion always goes with tuberculosis. It begins in the stomach. Fortunately the tuberculosis patient cannot digest this mass of milk and eggs and other food, or he would die. It rots and ferments and prevents his recovery. I have seen many recoveries from tuberculosis, where, in addition to fresh air and gentle exercise, the patient has fasted, until his digestion gradually enabled him to eat sparingly of simple food. Several who were in advanced stages of tuberculosis and followed this plan, are now in good health.

After relying on drugs for hundreds of years, medical science has taken up the fad of injecting diseased animal matter into the blood in the shape of serums. This is based on the fallacious theory that germs, or bacteria, are the cause of disease. They are not. They are merely incidental to disease—beneficent scavengers. They are no more the cause of disease than maggots are the cause of rotting meat. Disease comes from within, not from without. Bacteria do not appear until after the disease is established. In tuberculosis they are not found until several weeks after the disease has made itself manifest.

Do not think that I am alone in this opinion. Many eminent M.D.'s have expressed the same view. I will quote only one. He should be an "authority," as he has enough titles. Dr. Alexander M. Ross, Fellow of the Royal Society of England, member of the Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons of Quebec and Ontario, Professor of Hygiene and Sanitation at the St. Louis Hygienic College of Physicians and Surgeons, Vice-President of the Association of Hygienists of America, Member of the Ninth Session of the International Medical Congress, Member of the British, French and American Association for the Advancement of Science etc., etc. says:

"I charge that they have encouraged superstition and humbug by the germ theory of disease. I do not question the existence of infinitesimal micro-organisms; but they are the result not the cause of disease. They are the scavengers; their legitimate work is to clean out the sewers of our bodies. Wherever there is decay, pus or decomposing matter, these little life-savers are doing their work of neutralization, sanitation and purification. They feast upon effete and decaying animal matter. They are beneficial helpers to an important end."

Smallpox, typhus, cholera and the black plague are filth diseases that decimated Europe when living conditions were incredibly vile. They disappear or diminish, with the growth of inner and outer cleanliness. Cowpox is more nearly allied to syphilis than to smallpox.

The percentage of deaths from diphtheria is as large as it ever was. Figures have been juggled, so that what was formerly called diphtheretic sore throat is now recorded as diphtheria, thus apparently lessening the percentage of fatalities. Deaths from anti-toxin are not uncommon. I recently had a letter from a San Francisco man, telling of the death of his child half an hour after an injection of anti-toxin. The child had been perfectly healthy. The injection was ordered by a health officer.

The great increase in cancer is attributed by some medical men to the general use of serums.

Surgeon Gen. Gorgas recently reported 2000 cases of measles and pneumonia and eighty deaths in eighteen days, at Camp Wheeler, Georgia. At Camp Funston men were forbidden to attend theaters and churches, on account of diseases prevalent in camp At Camp Lewis there was a quarantine against an epidemic of measles.

Why should there be thousands of cases of measles, pneumonia, tonsilitis, tuberculosis, scarlet fever and mumps and eighty deaths, at one southern camp only, among picked, healthy young men, the flower of American manhood, declared by examining boards to be physically sound? May it not, in part, at least, be due to the fact that their blood has been poisoned with injections of diseased animal matter—sometimes a dozen injections? Why should great hospitals be needed to accommodate young men living a healthy open-air life? Would it not be a legitimate form of "medical research" to establish one camp, where the men are not serumized and to compare their health with that of others? In the English army serumizing is optional. The matter will be brought to the attention of Congress.

If my readers could see how these serums are prepared and what they contain it would surprise them.

Surgery, a mechanical form of medicine, like electricity, has made wonderful progress. The things that are done in repairing broken down men are wonderful and admirable. That is constructive surgery. On the other hand the lure of this skillful work—and to some extent, the large fees it brings—has led to a perfect orgy of surgical operations, so that unnecessary surgical operations have become a menace, that should be controlled by law. That is destructive surgery. The two are as different as socialism and anarchy.

Many medical men have begun to raise a voice of warning against this practice. Necessary organs are cut out of the body with as little compunction as a tooth is pulled. There are no unnecessary organs. Nature knew her job.

The tonsils are guardians of the throat. When they are enlarged it is a sign of a catarrhal condition of the body, due to the accumulation of waste and that due to wrong diet. This condition cannot be cured by cutting them out. After an operation the patient falls an easy prey to throat diseases.

Last week a woman called on me who had had both her ovaries taken out and half the thyroid gland and was then about to be sent to a hospital to have her appendix removed. She was a nervous wreck and no wonder.

The appendix is a necessary organ. It lubricates the lower bowel. Its removal is followed by constipation, varied occasionally by diarrhoea. What is now called appendicitis was formerly known as inflammation of the bowel. In a great many cases, the appendix is not involved at all. In Colorado a law has been passed making it compulsory for a surgeon who operates for appendicitis to produce the diseased appendix. Sometimes, what is called appendicitis is simply impacted feces. All that is necessary is to place the patient in bed, withdraw all food, thoroughly cleanse the colon and to relieve pain apply iced or warm applications on the bowel as the patient may prefer. Even if the suppuration is so far advanced that it bursts, it will discharge through the natural channel.

Medical science continues to operate for cancer, saying that it is the only way. Yet, medical writers admit that less than one per cent. of operations for cancer cure and that after an operation the disease always returns in more virulent form. At a recent meeting of the American Medical Association, in San Francisco, Dr. Mayo, the president, said that diet was the principal factor in the formation of cancer and that it was largely due to the excessive consumption of meat. He is right.

The mania for operations is largely fomented by the practice of fee-splitting between family physicians and surgeons. This offers a great temptation to the impecunious physician to recommend an operation when he is not altogether convinced that it is necessary. So great has this evil become, that five States have already passed laws against it, and others will follow. Medical journals say that the custom is more prevalent in California than in any other State.

After an operation a patient thinks he is better for a time. Suggestion has much to do with this. Soon, however, his old troubles return.

As to the important question of building the body by food, it is not to be expected that physicians of the regular school should be able to tell us much about that, because they are not taught it in college. A few years ago I obtained the curricula of twelve medical colleges. The time devoted to the subject of diet varied from nothing to four hours, in a four years' course. So, naturally, most physicians tell you to "eat what you please," or "eat what seems to agree with you." The diet fed to sick people and convalescents, at many hospitals, is such that I am not surprised at slow recoveries. I am rather astonished that patients ever get well.

All this would not be so bad were it not for the fact that a clique of political doctors, known as the American Medical Association, to which only a minority of the M.D.'s belong, seeks, by every means, to enforce its power through political channels and to persecute and prosecute those who do not agree with it as to the cause and cure of disease.

We have religious freedom in this country. Before long the people will demand medical freedom also—the right of every man to choose his own physician, as he chooses his own priest—or goes without one.

Mince Pie.

Los Angeles restaurants are said to be puzzled over the question whether mince pie can be served on meatless days. Why? Mince pie, served at restaurants nowadays, rarely contains meat. You can buy meatless mince meat in packages. By adding a little ground nuts, not one person in a hundred would know the difference.

Meat does not belong in mince pie any more than it does in plum pudding.

Necessary Conveniences.

Los Angeles like many other American cities is awfully lacking in what are politely termed "comfort stations," a fact that surprises visiting Europeans. Now that the saloons are to go, the need of these conveniences will become pressing. Men have resorted to a saloon, or hotel, women to a department store, but it should not be necessary to do that.

Delay in answering a call of nature frequently lays the foundation of a chronic ailment.

If we cannot have statues and drinking fountains for man and beast, and small breathing places with plenty of benches, at least let us have a few more of these necessary conveniences. We might even sacrifice shrivelled palms in boxes and discourages roses on wire netting.

Insanity and Crime.

Plain insanity was formerly urged in defense of criminals. Now the lawyers, working in harmony with medical "alienists," have improved on that. "Temporary emotional insanity" is the latest. That is to say, a murderer was perfectly sane five minutes before he committed the crime and again five minutes after, but was insane when he did the killing. A woman in New York was recently acquitted of murdering her divorced husband on a plea of "temporary loss of accountability."

Not one man in a thousand is perfectly sane when he takes the life of a fellow creature, unless he has been accustomed to killing men or animals. Even in the legitimate killing of war, they usually give the men a "tot" of alcohol, before they go "over the top."

Under this new plan if you want to kill a man and escape the consequences, all you have to do is to work yourself up into an excited frame of mind, either by means of a few drinks of whisky or by nursing the embers of your hate into a flame—or both—and then, if you have the price, secure the services of a first class criminal lawyer and an eminent "alienist." Or better still, half a dozen of each. Legal quibbles, aided by "medical science," will pull you through.

Yet, some people continue to wonder why there is not more respect for the learned professions of law and medicine.

A Smokeless Day.

Dr. Howard Anna Shaw's suggestion of a smokeless day does not seem to have been received with much enthusiasm by smokers. That is quite another thing from giving up meat for a day when you have the choice of fish, flesh and fowl, besides eggs and cheese and milk and beans and nuts and grains and a few score of vegetables and fruits.

No habit gets a harder grip on a man than smoking. A confirmed smoker eats merely to get the foundation for a smoke.

To abstain from smoking one day a week would be a good exercise in self-denial and a wholesome rest for the nerves—although you might not think so, from your sensations.

Precocious Children.

An eastern magazine recently told of a 10½-year-old boy of Hollywood, Cal., who is now in the high school, with good records in English, Spanish, chemistry and history.

A local paper described a 9-year-old boy of Los Angeles who challenges anybody of any age to outdo him in knowledge of history or geography. The newspaper says his teachers regard him as the most learned boy of his age, in history and geography. In history he can go back 500 years B. C., and give dates of all important events.

In San Francisco a 4-year-old child can write, read, spell, tell the capital of every State in the Union, name each of the fifty-eight counties of California and their county seats, play the piano, discuss Abraham Lincoln and the "Merchant of Venice." According to his teacher, this boy is "perfectly natural and sane." It may be, but I doubt it, although it is added that he has never overeaten, which gives him an extra chance.

Little is heard in after life of "infant prodigies." They should be kept back mentally and pushed forward physically.

A Dangerous Practice.

Occasionally you may see a woman alight from a street car carrying in her arms an infant or a bundle of packages and having with her an older child. As she gets off the steps of the car you may frequently see her yank the child to the ground by one arm, a most foolish and dangerous practice.

Los Angeles street car conductors are notably polite and accommodating as eastern visitors often remark with surprise, and are almost always willing to help a woman thus incumbered.

Diet and Drudgery.

One of the evils of our present illogical system of eating—or rather overeating—a lot of complicated food, and so injuring our health, is that it throws much additional labor on the overworked housewife, a serious question in this country, where so large a number of people of moderate means are unable to afford domestic help. Some women really enjoy cooking, but how many will you find that are in love with the labor of dish washing, which in the average American household has to be performed three times a day?

Food reform will not only greatly increase the health of the people and their efficiency, but it will lift a lot of labor from the women of the household and give them more time for relaxation and study.

Remember, however, once more, that the mere dropping of flesh from the dietary is, as frequently stated here, not always a step forward from a hygienic point of view, but sometimes rather a backward step. Also, it is not by any means always a labor-saving change, for the many messed and mussed up dishes recommended by some vegetarian publications involve more unnecessary work than the cooking of a beef steak, with fried potatoes.

What we want is intelligent food reform, not merely a change from flesh poisoning to starch and sugar poisoning.

Of all kinds of diet, there is none more illogical or harmful than the "mixed diet." which we are told so often by "authorities" is the best.

Observing the animal creation, we find that all living creatures may be divided broadly, in regard to diet, into four classes: first, herbivorous; second, grammivorous; third, carnivorous; fourth, frugivorous. Besides man, the hog is the only animal that habitually lives on a mixed diet and then only after he has been "cultivated"—or rather corrupted—by man. Also, it may be noted that the hog is more liable to disease than any other animal, except man.

INDOOR LIFE MAKES FAT

Try Fresh Air and Harmless Oil of Korein to Reduce Superfluous Weight.

Those who are deprived of fresh, invigorating air and exercise must take precaution to guard against overstoutness, as fat acquired by indoor life is unhealthy and a danger to the vital organs of the body.

If you are above normal weight you are daily drawing on your reserve strength and are constantly lowering your vitality by carrying this excess burden. If you are too stout you should go to a good druggist and get a box of oil of korein capsules, take one after each meal and one just before retiring at night, and follow the other simple directions that come with the box. This method is guaranteed.

Even a few days' treatment has been reported to show a noticeable reduction in weight, improved digestion and a return of the old energy. A buoyant feeling replaces sluggishness, the step becomes lighter, the flesh firm and the skin smooth, as superfluous fat disappears.

Oil of korein is easy to use, cannot injure, and helps the digestion. Any person who wants to reduce ten to sixty pounds is advised to give this guaranteed treatment a trial.

EVERY HOUSEKEEPER SHOULD KNOW.

What She Can Buy For Fifty Cents. By Retta Badger.

[All feasible suggestions for this page will be very much appreciated. Any pictures of attractive corners of the home or practical things will be very acceptable. How to keep house with little labor is the slogan of today and we would like the ideas of readers on the subject. Any information regarding anything published or illustrated on this page very gladly given by the editor of it.]

HAVE you any idea how many charming things can be bought for the small sum of 50 cents? Some of the things on this page today come below that nominal sum in price. It is not necessary to expend a big amount of money to impress upon your friends that you are still there. An inexpensive gift gotten up in a dainty way is just as acceptable—but the daintiness is almost imperative. A beautiful thing can be presented in such a clumsy package as to almost spoil its reception and the most simple gift can be made into such a fascinating little bundle that it is a pure joy to open it. Most all the things this year in the stores are packed in the most artistic way. They are in lovely boxes and have dainty little decorated cards that carry a Christmas message all worded appropriately for the gift.

Some Things I Have Seen for 50 Cents.

The Dainty Bud Vase.

A charmingly graceful vase of mahogany with a rose and butterfly all included in the price.

To Keep the Doilies Smooth.

This cretonne-covered doily roll is something that is both useful and artistic. Doilies are hard to keep smooth and this roll that holds them all in its snug embrace and releases them quite fresh for use the next time is a blessing.

Sachet Lingerie Clasps.

This is a dainty combination of sachet and real usefulness in case anyone thought that sachet was not strictly a practical thing to give. They are three dear little hand-painted ribbon flower sachets fastened to tiny safety pins for lingerie service.

Sterling and gold filled clasps are to be had for this price too.

The Hot Roll Basket.

This is something for which all your housekeeping and tea serving friends will bless you all the days of their serving. It is a dear little light basket of palm, in a unique shape that seems to hold the hot rolls or biscuits so snug and warm and allows for the napkin to be placed so daintily about them. This is one of the big 50 cent things I saw.

The Lovely Narcissus.

There is nothing that adds to the charm of a room more than a bit of flower brightness somewhere in it, so buy one of the beautifully gotten up boxes of bulbs that are for sale among the gift things. The box contains a dear little piece of pottery in one of those good looking shapes that are so much in vogue and three Holland bulbs just waiting for the bowl to be filled with water to make them grow.

For the All-alone Knitter.

There is the holder for yarn that is shown in the illustration. It is of beaver board and turns about on a central pivot for the benefit of anyone who wishes her yarn held for winding or even for knitting. It folds up into a neat little package.

That Dainty Japanese Shade.

Just right for the dressing table lamp or for the candles on the dinner table.

A Real Christmas Greeting.

How would you like to be able to look in on all your family that are far away from you this Christmas and say "Merry Christmas?" If it is impossible why not send the Christmas Greeting phonograph record to say it for you? It comes all ready to carry your message.

Stockings.

A good grade of lisle stockings can be bought for 50 cents.

An All-ready Luncheon Set.

This is a splendid gift. It contains a large center piece and six doilies of tonne all button-holed around the edge ready for immediate use.

Pictures.

There are many good prints, copies of masters, that can be bought at this all framed in colonial frames in tones of browns, grays and old gold.

The Little Jap Baby.

You can buy a paper weight fascinating little Jap baby that you already acquainted with.

Filipino Basket Trays.

These are fetching. They are useful serving or for cards or for holding bowl of flowers or may be used in a decorative capacity.

Sweet Grass Baskets.

These can be bought in the smaller for thread or small sewing baskets or receivers.

Book Plates.

For those whose friends are good "book keepers" these little distinguishing with their names on are just the thing paste in their books. They come a box.

Cluny Doilies.

Linen plate size doilies with edge can be bought for 50 cents.

What You Can Buy for Thirty Forty-five Cents.

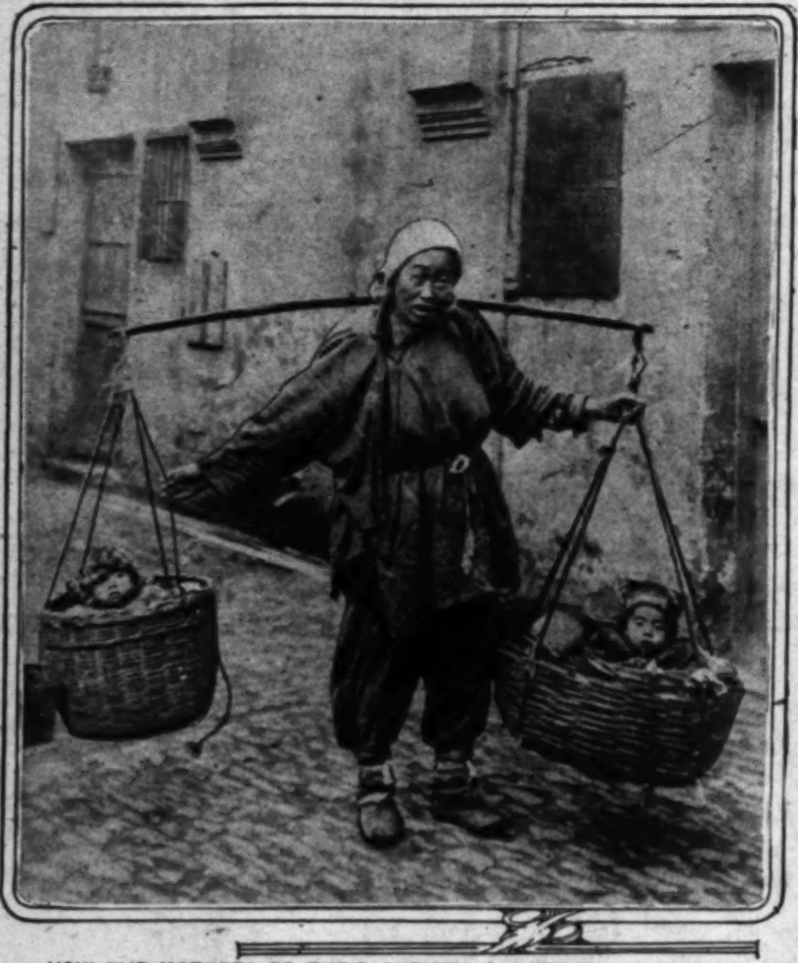
I will myself and I believe a number friends will be glad to get such and wreaths. I am going into to spend Sunday and I will inquire among my friends and let you know Monday at school. You want to raise some Christmas funds, I suppose?"

She smiled at them with so much interest that it was all impetuous Janet could do to keep from telling her all about it, but Jack interposed quickly, "It's a secret, Miss Ashely—we are anxious to raise some money for something special, but we can't tell anybody about it yet. We'll get the nicest decorations we can find for you and your friends."

"And we'll sell 'em cheap," put in Janet, hopping first on one foot and then the other. . . .

"Let's go on up the canyon now and look for greens," suggested Jack.



HOW THE MOTHERS DO THEIR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING IN CHINA.

"But it's too early to pick them now," objected Janet, "and we don't know yet how many we want."

"Yes, I know, but we can look around and spot the best places," said her brother, and they turned off the road into the narrow trail which led up the canyon. The day was clear and cool, and the children enjoyed their climb, as they stopped now and then to mark the place where some unusually brilliant berries or thick vines were growing.

"Wouldn't it be fun if we found a gold mine up here?" queried Janet, as they paused to rest at Table Rock, the big flat stone which was their favorite picnicking spot, and marked the limit prescribed by their mother.

"There's no gold up here," answered Jack, taking out his knife and scraping idly at the rock, "or else prospectors would have found it long ago."

"Well, a silver mine then," said Janet. "That would be about as good."

"It would be fine, all right," conceded Jack, "and we need it. I don't see how we are ever going to raise that much money in the short time left us. If we could only find that dollar now . . . maybe we will. But we can't charge much for the greens—there are too many people who can get them themselves. Even if five or six of Miss Ashely's friends want 'em, that won't be but about 60 cents."

Janet did not answer. She was so unusually quiet that her brother finally looked up from his scraping. Janet was staring intently down at the ground at her feet. He leaned over and looked too. There, half under a big withered leaf which evidently had been pushed aside by her feet, something gleamed and glittered in the sunlight. Janet slid down the rock and picked it up. She held it in her hand and stared at it.

DON'T YOU?

"Found your gold mine?" asked Jack with a grin, as he leaned down to see.

"No—yes—I don't know," answered Janet breathlessly, holding it up to him. It was a beautiful little watch, set with jewels which twinkled in the sunlight, and which, even to their inexperienced eyes, was evidently worth a great deal. The twins stared at each other. Now, how had it come to be hidden under the leaves at Table Rock? To whom did it belong?

Dear Editor—

I am so glad to know we are going to have a letter box on the children's page and hope we will have letters from boys and girls in other towns.

I am 12 years old and attend St. Vincent's School. I take piano lessons and on Saturday mornings have swimming lessons which are lots of fun. I take dancing Saturday afternoon so you see I am pretty busy. Just now I am embroidering some Christmas gifts.

Hoping all your boys and girls will enjoy the coming holidays.

THIS IS FOR PA'S CHRISTMAS PRESENT

Dear Eddie
Smithy's ma says she dont believe it is more blessed to give than to receive. she says every time she picks out something expensive to salve somebody with she gets a little old dinky hat brush or something She is going to stick to the old plan of waiting until after Christmas to see what she gets and then send 'em something that cost the same price and say it was late. She says she hates Xmas because she's never happy. You can see why—

THE CHILDREN FOUND VANITY IS A DANGEROUS THING

1—In a great forest there lived a beautiful white fox, who liked to sit and admire his image as it was reflected in a small lake that was clear and still. Many a time other foxes found him thus reveling in his own good looks.

2—The fox with the cross on his back and the gray fox disliked the white fox very much. When they came to the lake to get a drink of water the white fox was angered by their intrusion and said:—"Why do you come here to my mirror? If I had an ugly gray or spotted coat, as you have, I would hide even from my own eyes. But I am as white as the drifted snow!" he boasted.

3—"But our coats cannot be seen at so great a distance by the huntsmen or their dogs, nor do they soil as easily as yours," was the answer. But even as they spoke they looked into the mirror and hated their own practical coats. Next day they stayed in their burrows. They were trying to forget that their coats were not "as white as the drifted snow," and they did not go near the lake, for they did not wish to be reminded that gray fox or cross fox does not bring the highest market prices.

4—When again the cross fox and the gray fox were forced by thirst to revisit the lake the white fox was nowhere to be seen

5—Soon after that Mother invited Son Bud and Sis to drive through the woods with her. They were delighted. She looked unusually beautiful in her new white furs, and the children felt very proud.

6—When the big car had whizzed past, the gray fox stuck his head out of a hollow tree and shouted, "Did you see that?" Then the cross fox stuck his head out of a neighboring tree and replied:—

"The white fox? Yes, it happened this way. When the white fox was admiring his beauty in the lake he was so interested that he forgot to keep a lookout for the huntsmen, and they came up quietly and caught him."

"Practical clothes are the best after all," said the gray fox. "I should say," answered the cross fox, "that vanity is a dangerous thing."

After that the two foxes were contented with the colors that nature had given them.

1—The cow, which had become separated from Mr. Twee Deedle, Dickie, Dolly and the others, sat down upon the bank of the marsh to await their return. It was while she sat there, that the wicked Marsh King came up from his castle below the waters and talked to himself.

2—The cow did not notice him until she heard him say:—"I will change the three men into wicked women and change the two children into mean old men, so that no one will ever recognize them. They will have to go through life doing mean, wicked things to others!" "Well!" thought the kind hearted cow, "this will never do!"

3—So she gathered her skirts up and, taking a good running start, she butted the wicked Marsh King far out into the middle of the marsh. "Now, take that!" she cried, as he disappeared under the water and mud. The kindly cow wiped the tears from her eyes, for it made her feel sad to hurt another, even if he was a wicked Marsh King.

4—Of course, the cow had no way of knowing how much she was really helping her friends who were being held prisoner down under the marsh by the wicked king. When she butted him out into the marsh he fell down through the roof of his castle with such force that he landed with a bump right in front of his prisoners.

5—Now, everybody knows that sometimes a hard spanking will knock all the naughtiness out of a bad child, and the bump the wicked king received had the same effect. It completely knocked all the evil and wickedness out of his head and he forgot to be angry or ill humored.

6—The Marsh King laughed when he saw our friends, and took off his magic cloak and shook hands with all of them. Then he waved his hands and each of our friends found himself in possession of an ice cream cone. The King brought out his fiddle and played a rollicking sea tune and the fat sailor and Cousin Jim danced the Fisherman's Hornpipe. The King invited them to spend the night with him and promised to show them something interesting the next morning.

Dec. 15.—After an all yesterday on the Italian but the enemy reached the War Office an Nightfall stopped the fighting. The Italian troops held firmly on positions a little to the rear of Col Caprille.

The text reads:

"During yesterday the battle between the Brenta and the Piave continued fiercely, the artillery struggle, which had been repeated at intervals in the night, becoming violent again at down and continued without interruption. Early in the afternoon the enemy launched his masses of infantry to attack.

"In the Col della Beretta region, although a counter offensive on our part, aiming at lightening the enemy pressure, succeeded twice in reaching the summit of Monte Pertica and attracting large enemy forces to that point, the enemy thrust was most violent on Col Caprille and to the south of Col della Beretta.

"The assault was sustained by our troops and completely repulsed in a counter-attack which inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

"The enemy, who had never diminished his intense bombardment of our positions, began his artillery preparation again, renewed his force and repeated the attack, succeeding in reaching the Col Caprille. Our troops held firm to the positions a little to the rear and nightfall stopped the fighting.

"At the head of the Monte Solarolo salient the enemy attacked in force at 12:30 a.m. This was supported by a secondary action directed against Col del 'Orso and sustained by a most intense artillery fire which swept our line. This attack was repulsed and the enemy suffered heavy losses in a counter-attack. He again attacked at 4 p.m. but another counter-attack on our

AMERICAN COLLIER SAVES SIXTY-FOUR SAILORS FROM DROWNING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Dec. 15.—The sixty-four members of the crew of the British steamship Knight of the Thistle were brought here late today by an American naval collier which rescued them shortly before their storm-battered steamer foundered on Monday 200 miles southeast of Cape Race. Twenty-three of the men are English and the remainder are Chinese.

The steamer left an Atlantic port November 25 for England, encountering rough weather almost from the outset. On Thanksgiving Day her rudder was smashed, making her unmanageable.

On December 7, while the crew was engaged in throwing out a sea anchor to steady the ship, a mountainous wave crashed over the starboard side, doing great damage and severely injuring two Chinese members of the crew.

Late that day the collier arrived in answer to the S.O.S. calls and stood by for two days. Twenty of the steamer's crew were rescued by a life raft, but were nearly drowned before they were pulled aboard the naval vessel. Others decided it was too hazardous to try to leave and they remained on board the wreck until December 10, when it became apparent that the ship was going down. Putting off in lifeboats, they reached the collier after a desperate struggle.

FORMER OFFICER IN TEUTON NAVY IS ARRESTED AT SAN FRANCISCO.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—Curt R. Mulschinck, alleged former officer of the German navy, was arrested as a dangerous alien on a Presidential warrant today by Federal authorities, who said he had been the first person apprehended here under the regulations imposed by President Wilson's proclamation of November 16, restricting the movements of Germans in this country.

Mulschinck was arrested while working on an ocean liner in dock here, despite the fact that the President's proclamation provided that German aliens must remain outside a radius of 100 yards from docks, railroad stations and other specific places.

Papers and documents, supposed to contain information valuable to the enemies of the United States, were seized in Mulschinck's rooms, Federal authorities admitted. His identity as a former naval officer of Germany had been established beyond doubt, they said.

SAYS U-BOAT WAR IS MAKING PROGRESS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Dec. 15.—Real progress is being made against the German submarine campaign, Georges Leygues, Minister of Marine, declares in an interview in the Petit Parisien today. He warns, however, against too optimistic conclusions being drawn from the reassuring developments.

"We are ceaselessly working to counter the effects of the submarine war and have made genuine progress," said the Minister. "We have observed that the German crews are less efficient and less enterprising than at the beginning, and that their ammunition is of an inferior quality.

"Still, however, reassuring these observations may be, too optimistic conclusions should not be drawn from them."

WAR COUNCIL FORMED BY SECRETARY BAKER.

Picked Military Men are to Co-ordinate Efforts to Supply Troops Abroad.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Organization of a war council of the War Department to co-ordinate all matters of supplies for the armies at home and overseas and the military relations between the armies in the field and the department, was announced tonight by Secretary Baker.

Composing the council are the Secretary and assistant Secretary of War, the Chief of Staff and Maj.-Gen. Henry G. Sharpe, Quartermaster-General; Maj.-Gen. Erastus M. Weaver, chief of Coast Artillery; Maj.-Gen. William Crozier, Chief of Ordnance, and Maj.-Gen. Enoch H. Crowder, Provost-Marshal-General.

Mr. Baker's announcement said that when Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, Chief of Staff, who participated in the inter-Allied war conference, returns from Europe he will bring knowledge of conditions which affect all branches of the service and that from time to time members will be ordered to the front to make observations for the information of the council.

The secretary said the council will act through the Chief of Staff of the army and will not take over the specialized duties of the General Staff or the War College. It is intended, he added, to bring to the larger problems of the department not only the experience, but the general training of the officers most mature, both in years and service experience.

Reorganization.

MORE STAFF OFFICERS NEEDED, DECLARES SCOTT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Reorganization of the War Department on a sound General Staff basis and adoption of universal military service as a national policy, are recommended in the last annual report of Maj.-Gen. Hugh L. Scott, Chief of Staff.

The document is devoted almost wholly to a discussion of the staff question, Gen. Scott explaining that his long absence in Russia and his "impending departure for France" gave him little time to prepare an adequate account of the army's preparations for the war.

After referring to what has been accomplished in the way of preparation, Gen. Scott deplores the paucity of General Staff officers and ascribes this shortage to the act of Congress in 1916, which limited the total number of such officers to fifty-five, only half of whom could be held on duty in Washington at any one time. The staff did not reach a strength of forty-seven officers until Congress increased that body in May, 1917, the report says, and adds that had this number of officers been available in February and the months following "preparations for our entrance into the war would have been improved and hastened."

SCOTT'S RECOMMENDATIONS.

Gen. Scott asks that Congress examine the question of staff control of the army in a spirit "freed from every touch of personal interest or prejudice" and recommends that the Chief of Staff be made the secretary's one and only organ for command of the army in all that pertains to "discipline, recruiting, instruction, intelligence, training, arming, equipping, mobilization, transportation, education, moving of troops, the appointment, promotion, detail and selection of officers" with authority to secure co-operation of the entire military establishment.

Creation of chiefs of cavalry, infantry and field artillery under the Chief of Staff and staff sections to deal with recruiting, movement of troops and promotion and detailing of officers, is also recommended.

The annual reports of the adjutant-general and inspector-general were also made public tonight but they add little information as to the present military situation or the condition of the army as they deal mainly with the period prior to June 30 last.

ARMY EQUIPMENT READY, SAYS SHARPE.

QUARTERMASTER - GENERAL AVERS THERE ARE AMPLE SUPPLIES FOR DELIVERY.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Quartermaster-General Sharpe in a statement today gives figures on army contracts to show that adequate supplies of clothing for all men in the service now are available and that proper deliveries and uninterrupted transportation will assure supplies for the future. Deliveries have been delayed from 6 to 48 per cent. because of delays in material and transportation.

Gen. Sharpe's statement shows that there already has been delivered to the troops practically 6,000,000 blankets, more than 2,000,000 overcoats, more than 12,000,000 winter undershirts, 4,000,000 pairs of drawers, nearly 3,000,000 pairs of breeches, more than 2,000,000 coats, more than 5,000,000 wollen shirts, more than 8,000,000 pairs of shoes and more than 3,000,000 hats.

In the aggregate about half the supplies ordered have been delivered.

"DONE WITH THE WAR; DOWN WITH KAISER."

Uprising of Masses Indicated by Circular Distributed to People—Revolt of Workmen Foreshadowed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 15.—Evidence that German workmen are threatening to emulate the Russian revolutionaries in an effort to crush Kaiserism is contained in a clandestine circular distributed in Germany, a copy of which has been obtained by the United States government.

"Done with war" and "down with the government," is the cry sounded by the advocates of a workman's revolution. A strike of the masses is urged and workmen are appealed to to quit workshops and factories.

MILITARY PEACE.

A peace according to terms of German rulers is opposed as one "in the interest of militarism and imperialism," and contrary to the interests of the German people.

The original copy of the circular, distribution of which is forbidden in Germany, though it has been reprinted in Switzerland, has been deposited in the Library of Congress. It is a single sheet of foolscap size, printed on both sides, and is decorated by a coarsely executed wood cut representing a soldier in arms; a workman in blouse and a woman shoving a rock off a precipice beneath which is seen the head and bust of the Emperor, crowned and sceptered and mustached, looking up in terror at the fate impending.

EXTRACTS.

The circular in part is as follows:

"Fight on to a finish.

"The foes of the people are growing ever bolder, ever more shameless. War-waste, war-instigators, war-profiteers, those to whom the misery of the people brings power and gain, such wish no peace.

"Disfranchisement of the masses, misery of the masses, state of siege, slaughter of the people—this is what this government has brought upon us.

"Must we stand idle and see our wives and children pine away, our strength to labor—our only means of subsistence—grow less and less?

"They promise extra rations to save themselves from the wrath of the people, from a revolution like that in Russia.

"But no extra rations can be given without consuming the seed potatoes and the breeding cattle. Should the government decide upon this course millions of the German proletariat, German women and children must face hunger and starvation in the coming winter.

"For the government is in no position to fufill its promises except under conditions which in the near future we shall have to face with fear and trembling. For there are not enough potatoes or cattle in Germany to assure the promised allowance for any length of time. If it were now possible to raise the ration of the labor people more plentifully it would have been a crime without parallel to let them starve. But as a matter of fact the instigators of the war are hiding the truth from the people.

"It is their harvest of blood which is crushing Germany, and their aims are for themselves alone.

"But the immediate negotiation of peace is the only rescue from the abyss into which the government is hurling the country.

"But the government proceeds to plunder the land. It wants no peace which would be acceptable to the so-called ENEMY countries. And if it should fashion peace on terms according to its own liking, and if it could bring about a peace according to those terms, they would always be—as we know only too well—in the interest of a militarism and imperialism, of the Junker and capitalist castes, and contrary to the vital interests of the German proletariat.

"Such an ending of the war touches each one of us.

"Thus the most urgent task of German labor is to force peace—just as our Russian brothers are now doing—and to fashion its terms according to the interests of the international proletariat, that we have our own peace and not that of the imperialists.

"There is only one means to this end, the strike of the masses. This strike of the masses must swell in the cry of a million voices for peace, and that cry will serve for a kindling spark in the barracks and in the trenches; it will make men fight as sturdily to the end, it will bring about an organization of the masses which shall force peace and freedom.

"Victory will be won by fighting and by a strike of the masses."

AUSTRIAN DEMANDS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 15.—Austria-Hungary does not desire the annexation of Balkan territory or an influence in the formation of the Rumanian and Serbian governments, but only wishes security for obtaining grain and cattle "from the abundance of these countries," says the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, according to a Vienna telegram today.

On the other hand says the newspaper, Austria will not permit the extension of the territory of Rumania or Serbia. She expects, it is added, to reach an agreement on this basis with Nikolai Lenine, the Bolsheviki Premier, at Petrograd.

DENIES SUGGESTING PEACE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 15.—With reference to the German government's statement that it had received through a neutral government last September an inquiry in regard to its war aims under circumstances indicating that the inquiry was made with the sanction of the British government, the Daily Chronicle prints a statement from Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, branding the whole thing as untrue.

No such inquiry was ever made with the knowledge and sanction of the British government, Lord Robert Cecil's statement declares, and adds that no secret approaches of any sort were ever made relating to German war aims.

PERSHING DETERMINED TO BREAK TEUTON LINE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The American army in France has no misgivings regarding the ultimate victory of the Entente Allies, was the message sent by Gen. Pershing to the people at home, through Charles W. Whitehair, secretary of the Cornell Y.M.C.A., who has just returned from the French and other European battle fronts.

Mr. Whitehair, who was the principal speaker today at the luncheon of the Life Underwriters' Association of New York, said that just before leaving France, Gen. Pershing asked him to preach one doctrine when he got back to America. That was that the Entente Allies, including the American soldiers, were a unit in the belief that they would eventually "break through" the German lines in France. Here is the message Gen. Pershing asked Mr. Whitehair to deliver:

"You must go back home and dispose of that doctrine that we can't break through the German lines. We can break through them with a human wedge and we will. Tell everybody you meet of our determination to win."

JOHN BULL IS VICTOR AS THE CASE STANDS.

History Repeating Itself in the Present War—Significance of Capture of Bagdad and Jerusalem.

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS,
Author of "The World War" and "Thou Shalt not Pass."
[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 15.—The other day a laconic British official statement announced the completion of the campaign in German East Africa. Its significance was little appreciated by a world whose attention was fixed upon Cambrai and the Russian revolution, and yet it marks the passing of one of the great colonial empires of modern times. When the war broke out, German colonies occupied more than 1,000,000 square miles of African territory, an empire in area larger than that lost by France under the old monarchy in the wars with Britain, which preceded the Napoleonic era.

Bagdad, Jerusalem, German Africa—these are measures of the present struggle between the Briton and the German. We are entering the fourth winter of the war—a war which German statesmen and German scholars, quite as much as German soldiers, proclaimed was to be a contest between a modern Rome and a contemporary Carthage, a contest in which the German should play the Roman role. And after four campaigns no German ship sails the seas; every German colony is in British hands, save for those portions occupied by Britain's French and Japanese allies; Germany's Turkish ally has lost Mesopotamia and the Holy Land; British armies occupy the roads to Suez and the Persian Gulf, and no single foot of British territory has now a German master.

If one could preserve a historical perspective in the midst of the crowded incidents of the present time it would be perceived that history is strangely repeating itself. Britain is doing to Germany now what she did to Spain, to Holland, to France. Challenged by an ambitious rival, she has swept that rival from the seas, she has destroyed the colonial edifice of the new foe, and her armies are joined to those of half the civilized world in a fight upon German armies on the European continent.

WAR MAP PEACE.

Not so many months ago Bethmann-Hollweg, then German Chancellor, announced that Germany would make peace on the basis of the war map, but peace with Britain on the basis of the war map of today would leave Germany not alone confined to Europe and Asiatic Turkey, but with the doorways of Asiatic Turkey closed, with the sea gates of the Turkish empire in British hands, while now and for the future, as in the past, British sea power would still dominate the German exits from the North Sea to the Atlantic, from the Mediterranean both to the Red Sea and to the western ocean. Measuring the war by the feet and inches of the European scale, it still remains a doubtful and terrific struggle. Measured by the map of the world, Britain has already repeated the achievements of the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and the war, so far as Britain is concerned, still remains to be completed.

More than this—when the war began, England had only a fleet. The English expeditionary army of less than 200,000 men represented the maximum of her strength upon land. Today she has 5,000,000 men under arms, her guns outweigh the German, her military machine is as powerful as the German, and not yet has her man power been weakened by the tremendous sacrifices which have been the price of German victory so far as she has achieved victory against the French, the Italians and the Russians.

Jerusalem has a significance for a world public far beyond its military value. Even Bagdad is a name before it is a thing of military importance; and yet these cities, with their wealth of historic suggestion, represent a fresh renaissance of British power. Louis XIV and Napoleon's little venture into Egypt, while British armies, then as now, played their part on the continent and British ships of war and British forces swept the world.

COMPARISON.

If the war were to end today Britain would possess a fleet and an army, the one overwhelmingly superior and the other at least equal to the German.

Again Britain in colonial territory would be the victor; no German merchant ship could sail from Hamburg to the far east save as Britain permitted it to touch at her coaling stations; British colonies and British naval ports would be closed to German commercial ships, and German warships, and despite the ravages of the submarines in British shipping, the German commercial fleet has suffered far greater losses incident to the seizure in foreign ports of the vessels that, to escape British sea power, took refuge in August, 1914.

We are fixing our eyes upon Europe precisely as our ancestors fixed their eyes upon the campaign in Flanders and Artois in the eighteenth and nineteenth century wars, and yet, the British empire was built beyond Europe at the time when Europe was contesting provinces and cities between the Somme and the Meuse, between the Rhine and the Danube.

When these wars were over an exhausted France fell back upon itself, while an invigorated Britain went forward to the work of empire building.

Tomorrow we may see a free Palestine guaranteed by Allied armies; we may see an Arab State created in Syria with a similar guarantee. We shall see German colonies in the Pacific permanently assigned to Japan and to Australia. We shall see German West Africa annexed by British South Africa, and may see the ultimate obliteration of all German colonial power. But no man can expect now to see German-led armies arrive at Suez or on the Persian Gulf. India and Egypt are to remain British. South Africa has denied all German claims and borne arms against the German, not the Briton. German commercial establishments in the Far East have been permanently destroyed; German commercial edifices in South America and in the United States are gone or are crumbling.

Whether as master of Mittel-Europa, or as master only of the Germany of 1870, the Teuton at the end of this war will have to begin as he began on the morrow of the Franco-Prussian war, but to begin with the hatred and the suspicion of two-thirds of the people of the world; with the British Empire closed to his exports; with the opportunity to purchase raw materials essential to his trade restricted if not denied; with his industrial machinery on the human side reduced by the cruel cost of his campaigns of conquest.

Napoleon or Louis XIV would be moved to sympathy and fellow feeling in contemplating Germany's position with respect to Britain at the present moment. Nothing in what has happened to Germany would seem novel to the conqueror who marched from Madrid to Moscow, nothing in what has happened to the German colonial empires would seem strange to Louis XIV and his successor, who lost India and Quebec while winning campaigns in Flanders.

RECURRENCE.

It is a curious fact that no matter how often history repeats itself, the familiar things still seem novel to the latest generation which sees the contemporary repetition of past events. We shall probably continue to watch the west front with bated breath, to hope and fear for Russia. We shall continue to estimate the meaning of the war by the daily communiques, by the foot measure marking the change in the western trenches. Yet those who come hereafter will doubtless look at this war as we view the Anglo-French wars of the past, which today appear wars in which the European campaigns were relatively fruitless, while those which were carried on beyond the seas permanently altered the fate of millions of men and almost limitless areas of territory. So far Britain has run true to form, she has done better than ever before with her land armies, but at sea, beyond the European horizons, she has maintained the great tradition of past centuries.

BATTLEFIELD NO TERROR TO WARRIORS ONCE THEY HAVE ENTERED THE FRAY.

How Hun Prisoners Fight Among Themselves Once They Have Been "Fed up" by British Captors—"The Fatherland Can Go to Hell," Says One. Interesting and Graphic Details by One Who was There.

BY PRIVATE JOHN C. M'ELWEEN.
[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

[A more vivid, thrilling, humorous, witty, gruesome and rollicking story of the life in the trenches has never been written. The narrator of this "Life in the Trenches" is a young Scotchman who at the outbreak of the war was employed in the capacity of a humble clerk in a London bank. In the following chapters he tells the story of his numberless adventures from the day of his landing at a certain French port to the time when he was "Tagged for Blighty." Participator in more than twenty "battles," fifty "raids," and three "Great Pushes;" wounded eight times, but never asked to be "Sent Home"—each time returning to the battle line for he "was lonesome for the trenches and the Fritzes;" cursing at misfortune with always a smile on his lips; now laughing, now sighing, but never grumbling; this wonderful specimen of Scottish grit and English sportsmanship tells a story that keeps his reader always near him; feeling his every impulse, cursing when he curses, and laughing when he laughs.]

GLASGOW (Scotland) Nov. 28.—That wound of mine did not keep me away from our dear Fritzes very long. It only scratched the thick part of my right leg, and three days of recuperation at an improvised hospital behind the firing line fitted me up again.

Really, I could hardly keep quiet all night when the hospital orderly informed me that on the next day I would be permitted to return to my company.

By the way. That night—the night before the morning on which I was due at the front, batches of Hun prisoners were brought in. One of the hospital officials ordered about fifty of us to go out with sandwiches and coffee, and administer the "first aid" to the Huns' empty stomachs. The poor devils! There were about 1000 in the horde, and the whole outfit looked starved.

We went out with the food, and what do you think the Fritzes did? Well, they made for us instantly, and we had our hands full in keeping the hungry Fritzes in line.

HUNS QUARREL.

As soon as their stomachs were filled up with good British food, the Huns began to quarrel amongst themselves, and in another instant the Huns were fighting Huns.

Now these Huns would not mind us British privates. So I ran to the company headquarters and informed an officer that the Fritzes were scrapping amongst themselves, and that, the presence of an officer was required. A captain with a whip in his hand rushed to the cage with me, but believe me our officer had hardly reached the grounds when the Fritzes were separated like a bunch of tom cats, who were raising a racket in the back yard, that got a cold bath thrown from a bucket of water from a back kitchen window.

OFFICER BADLY TREATED.

After the Fritzes were fed, their the cage on an investigation tour. The whole trouble was this:

After the Fritzes were fed, their officers began to reproach them for not having fought further instead of surrendering. Now Fritz had enough of his officers' bulldozing, and even our dear and patient Fritz had his limitations in standing everything that his Hun superior handed to him at the end of his boot. It was a real sight, what the indignant Fritzes had done to their overbearing sups. But we were not going to discipline the Fritzes for that. That was one offense against good manners the Fritzes had committed for which we could afford to stretch our palms and say: "Here is a shake, old Fritz, do it again, but please do not make so much noise while doing it next time. You know it is against the international law to kill your officers."

Just before I withdrew to my bunk I got engaged in a conversation with one of the Fritzes. This Fritz spoke English with a Yankee twang, and told me in good old English that so far as he was concerned, the war was over, and the fatherland could go to hell in full speed. After the war he was going to America, and spend the rest of his life in hating the Prussians.

THE HATE.

I will tell you it is in the nature of the Hun, he must hate, and unless he is hating something or somebody he is never happy.

I asked him point blank what he thought of the war outlook for Germany. For a moment he looked as if he were going to fly into a temper, but he controlled himself with an effort, and answered after a few seconds of reflection—"You will win, and you deserve to win. We have been too clever. We have gone too far, and must now put up with the consequences.

"Our men are fighting on with the courage of despair. They know Germany cannot win, but they hope that if they fight on the Allies will quarrel among themselves, or the people in Allied countries will weary of the war and force their governments to make peace.

"I don't believe anything of the kind, but our men still think it possible, and they are encouraged in that belief by the high command. We are kept in ignorance of what is happening at home. Letters have been stopped by the censor, and even when the stoppage is not enforced all references to bad times are struck out.

PUNISHMENT FOR MUTINEERS.

"The result is that in the army we have had to establish a post of our own, and thus we obtain news of how our people are faring. What we hear is terrible.

"We are told from time to time of riots of hungry women and children congregating in the streets and being attacked savagely by military and police, who are afraid to refuse to carry out work of this kind because they know that if they refused they would be sent off to the western front. That is the punishment for nearly every serious offence today.

"In cases of treason, such as in connection with the revolts in the army and navy, they don't carry out the death sentence themselves. They say it would be a waste of German ammunition, which is already scarce enough. They send the prisoners on to the western front, where they are put into the front-line trenches.

CHAINED TO GUNS.

"Sometimes they are chained to machine guns, but as a rule there is no need to take pains of that sort. Death finds you soon enough where the British guns are.

"In the army in Flanders the men are continually refusing to fight on. The night I was captured we were out with a patrol. We found that we could not carry out the task given us. It was far too risky because of the way the British were watching, so we had to give it up. We knew that if we went back with the story of failure we would be put on to some more dangerous work that would be as good as a death sentence.

"We talked it over and decided that we would try to reach the nearest British post to surrender. The officer in the party was against it at first, but when he saw we were in earnest he fell in with us, and we gave ourselves up to the British. I daresay we will be punished if ever the German authorities get to know, but I'm not going back to Germany.

"Men are hurried back from hospitals before they are fit for duty, and they break down as soon as they get back. I had a case of the kind the other day.

"A battalion made up of men who had been brought back from hospitals was sent into the first-line trenches. They had not been in an hour before they came out again. Some of them were crying like women or babies, and they had not the heart to fight. The doctors said they ought never to have been discharged from hospital.

"Many of our men commit suicide rather than return to the front.

"Of my own company I know eight who have taken this way of escaping from the horrors of war within the last two months. In many cases they just put a finger or a hand out of safety in the hope of getting a wound that will help them to get away to hospital. The result of this is that our command do not now permit the hospital to take away men who have lo finger or other wounds that d make them unfit to serve. All cases are treated behind the li and you can see plenty of men w out a finger or a thumb. I co five close to me the day befo came out of it. The men who w to make certain of being sent manage to lose an arm or leg.

MEN WITH ONE EYE.

"The price that men will pay immunity from service is going First it was a finger, then a h an arm next; now, where the manding officer is very strict or cruel, which is the same thing, will gladly give an eye or a leg the chance of being invalided out the army.

"You can't always be

NEW YORK POOR SUFFER.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Vigorous efforts were made today to relieve New York's coal shortage, but results were not expected to be apparent before Monday. In the meantime, it was estimated between 250,000 and 300,000 families are urgently in need of fuel.

Large forces of men were employed to work tonight and tomorrow digging out the frozen masses of coal at New Jersey terminals, where some estimates place the supply at more than 100,000 tons. With this tonnage at the city's door, not much more than 10,000 tons were distributed today, although the normal daily consumption is twice that amount.

Suffering among the poor increased. In many of the large downtown office buildings heat was shut off at noon. In many hotels and apartment-houses bins were almost empty.

According to railroad officials, coal is being received at the New Jersey terminals in "unprecedented quantities," but lack of labor has hindered its transportation to New York.

The shortage of fuel was worse in the Bronx than any other borough of the city. The supply this morning was 2000 tons, just enough to last the day. Unless more coal was received tonight in that section of the city, it was said, the situation would be critical.

The office of the Fuel Administrator for Manhattan again was crowded today with women begging for coal. Blue cards have been issued to those having sickness in their homes and who urgently need coal. These persons are able to obtain small quantities from retailers by presenting the cards if the dealers' supply is not entirely exhausted.

According to P. S. Jaeger, chief assistant to F. O. Baird, head of the lake coal pool, the boatload of coal will be turned over to the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company exclusively. It is expected tomorrow noon. This company furnishes electric power to several thousand Cleveland manufacturing concerns and also furnishes power to the traction company to run more than two-thirds of the street cars in the city.

A train of seventy-five cars of coal is being rushed here from Sandusky, O., for the illuminating company.

Cities in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware have found their milk supply problems so serious that the the Governors' tri-State Milk Commission has recommended that the distribution of milk be regarded as a public utility and fair prices be assured. RECALLS ATTACK.

The Social Demokraten recalls the German minority Socialists' recent attack on the efforts of the majority Socialists to represent the German government as desiring an honorable and democratic peace with the right of all nations to decide their own destiny, and says with reference to the present Bolsheviki secret conference with Scheidemann:

"This manner of conjoining two political parties with such radically different principles is inconceivable, except on the assumption of moral bankruptcy on at least one side, and after what the last weeks have taught us concerning the Bolsheviki methods, it is not difficult to see where such bankruptcy already exists."

WHO PARVUS IS.

Parvus, who acted as intermediary between Scheidemann and Vorovsky, poses as a majority Socialist and enjoys the German government's confidence to such an extent that he was among the men mentioned at the time of the last government changes as possible Minister of Finance. He was born a Russian subject but left Russia some years ago. He made millions through grain and coal dealings in Germany and became a German subject shortly after the outbreak of the war.

ARE WE SOON TO BECOME A RACE OF BALD-HEADED MEN?

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN.

Bacteriologist, Hair and Scalp Specialist of Chicago, Who Is Now at Hamburger's, Talks Most Interestingly About the Hair.

He says baldness is increasing rapidly among men and points out some of the reasons. Prof. Austin is probably right in saying that about one man in every hundred ever thinks about his hair at all, except to comb it two or three times a day. If it falls out he looks anxiously at the falling hair and then promptly forgets it until the next time he uses a comb.

A man will give the utmost attention to his teeth, because he knows that when trouble arises he will have more trouble and probably lose his teeth if he doesn't go to a dentist promptly. But his hair doesn't ache, it just gradually dies and when it is nearly gone, and the roots are dead, he anxiously tries a dozen different remedies at once and then resigns himself to baldness.

According to Prof. Austin, there are something like 60 different conditions of the scalp and hair. Some are contagious. Others develop from neglect. Practically all of them are curable in the early stages.

Prof. Austin says the use of dandruff cures, mange cures and hair tonics is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. The particular trouble with which your scalp is afflicted must be known before it can be intelligently treated.

Prof. Austin examines the roots of your hair with a powerful microscope. He finds out just what is the trouble with YOUR HAIR, and then he tells you what to do for the trouble.

It doesn't cost a penny for the examination, and it puts you under no obligation to follow his advice if you don't want to do so.

Prof. Austin has devoted thirty-nine years to studying the hair and scalp. Surely it will be worth the few minutes it takes to let him turn the microscope on your hair.

Prof. John H. Austin, the eminent bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist of Chicago, has been giving his expert service, advice and experience to Hamburger patrons for the past three years, and with a most phenomenal record of achievement. During that time he has examined the hair and scalp of thousands of men, women and children, numbering among his clients the foremost professional men and women of Los Angeles—and customers have come to him from every section of the great Southwest.

The many letters of commendation and appreciation we've received from our patrons prompt us to take this opportunity of recommending him most highly to everyone who wishes to take advantage of his services—free of all obligation.

A. Hamburger & Sons.

He will make FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATIONS of the hair and scalp all this week in his private office on the second floor of Hamburger's. Hours 10 to 12 a.m., and 2 to 4 p.m.

WANT WAR EXPENSES ASSESSED PRO RATA.

IOWA COUNCIL OF DEFENSE OBJECTS TO APPEALS FOR CONTRIBUTIONS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) Dec. 15.—The Iowa State Council of Defense will ask Congress to enact legislation to adopt a budget system for caring for the war's financial demands and the proper apportionment to the public of its share of the burden.

The idea is to do away with "campaigns" for the purpose of raising Liberty Loan subscriptions, Red Cross and similar ends and to require each man, without solicitation, to do his bit.

It would be carried out through a plan of taxation, which would assess all citizens according to their means, and each community would bear its proportionate share.

Brig.-Gen. George H. Cameron, at Camp Kearny, California, will command the Fourth regular infantry division being formed at Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C. He also will have the rank of major-general.

VLADIVOSTOK'S SEIZURE DECLARED UNDIPLOMATIC.

Correspondent's Views Give Pro and Con of Noted English Journals.

BY ARTHUR S. DRAPER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Coming as it does at a time when America is looked upon as the last resort to help join the unwieldy forces of Russia again to the Allied cause, the Japanese occupation of Vladivostok, reported here to have been effected "in agreement with Americans," is a distinctly unfortunate move from the diplomatic point of view.

Russians here say it will have an undesirable effect in Russia, where there is a strong feeling that Japan is hostile, England unsympathetic and the United States friendly and sympathetic.

As a military measure it is agreed here it may have been necessary. The Westminster Gazette says:

"Some such measures plainly have become necessary, as Vladivostok has been one of the great depots of supplies from the Allies to the Russian forces and it is imperative to prevent these either from being dissipated or passing to the enemy. Moreover, there is known to be a great number of German and Austrian prisoners working in this part of Siberia, whose escape is feared.

The step was taken merely as a precaution and if Russia recovers her stability Vladivostok can again become a center of supply. In the meantime the Allies have a guarantee that the material they have passed to Russia will not fall into enemy hands."

On the other hand, the Manchester Guardian says:

"Russia is the ally of Japan and both are at war with a common enemy. Nevertheless, Japan, without Russia's consent, occupies Russia's only port. History will have to be ransacked thoroughly for a precedent. Are the allies of Russia and Japan parties to this action? The claim is not put forward by our Washington correspondent, who says Japan has been in close touch with the United States concerning the present delicate phase of the Russian situation, but that doesn't say the United States knew in advance, still less approved, Japan's action, which is in strongest conflict with the spirit of President Wilson's references to Russia in his last speech.

"Unless we have been officially informed to the contrary we refuse to believe the United States, France, Italy or England has any responsibility for or association with Japanese occupation of Vladivostok. The excuse is given of Japan's dislike for anarchy, now so ruthlessly prosecuted by the Bolsheviki. We are all free to detest the Bosheviki, but since when did dislike for Russia's internal politics give the Allies the right to lay hands on Russian territory? That is not the way to encourage Russia to return to stable and wise views. We are afraid Japan has seen her opportunity in the weakness of her neighbor and seized it and as that neighbor is our ally we may legitimately wonder where what has now begun may end."

No official statement on the occupation is forthcoming here.

NO CONFIRMATION.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Up to a late hour last night the British Foreign Office, the Daily Mail says, had not received confirmation of the occupation by Japanese of Vladivostok. It is said the Foreign Office knew nothing about it, further than newspaper reports.

THREE CONCERNS FACE FEDERAL COMPLAINTS

UNFAIR TRADE METHODS ARE CHARGED TO VARIOUS MANUFACTURERS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Unfair trade methods were charged against three manufacturers in complaints issued today by the Federal Trade Commission.

The Ward Baking Company, New York, is alleged to have changed prices from time to time to distributors of its bread with the intent of stifling competition. It further is charged with fixing arbitrary and standard resale prices and refusing to sell to distributors who would not maintain such prices.

J. F. Hillerich & Son Co., Louisville, Ky., is accused of violating the trade law by forcing its distributors to maintain certain standard resale prices on baseball bats and of violating the law which forbids price discrimination.

The National Distilling Company, Milwaukee, is charged with stifling competition by giving large amounts of yeast free to bakers who buy it to the exclusion of yeast made by other firms.

WOULD HALE CAILLAUX BEFORE BAR OF JUSTICE.

Premier Clemenceau Urges a Vigorous Investigation of Charges.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Friday, Dec. 14.—Premier Clemenceau and Edouard Ignace, undersecretary for military justice, were heard today by the committee of eleven appointed by the Chamber of Deputies to report on the proposed suspensions of Deputies Caillaux and Loustalot. The Premier produced documents bearing on the case from the French Foreign Office and said he would be unable to communicate others without authorization from the foreign powers concerned.

M. Ignace read documents explaining the charges, saying they involved relations with the enemy through the Almereyda, Bolo Pasha and Cavallina affairs, and an attempt against the security of the republic through maneuvers in Italy by Caillaux as reported by the diplomatic service.

The members of the committee said the government had not supplied it with sufficient documents. Premier Clemenceau replied that the chamber had sent Louis J. Malvy, former Minister of the Interior, and accused of treasonable actions before the high court on a sheet of white paper. He added that of Caillaux's three chief co-respondents one had died in prison and two others were in prison under the most grave charges. Any other citizen in such a case, he declared, would already have been called before an investigating judge.

Premier Clemenceau told the committee that the country demands the fullest light on the Caillaux case as on the Malvy case and that can only be attained by the action of a court of justice.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—A British airship is believed to have been destroyed by a hostile seaplane and a second British airplane was forced to descend in Holland, according to an official announcement tonight. It was officially announced that a British destroyer had been sunk.

The text of the official announcement by the Admiralty telling of the losses reads:

"A second airship of similar type was forced to descend in Holland through engine failure Wednesday.

"One of His Majesty's destroyers was sunk on Wednesday after being in collision. All the officers and the ship's company were saved except two men who were presumed to have been drowned."

Dispatches from Holland on Thursday announced that an airship, believed to be English, had landed in a Dutch village.

MOVING CANNON IN WAR MOST DIFFICULT TASK.

Correspondent Tells How American Artillery Went to the West Front. Horses Leap from Train.

BY RAYMOND G. CARROLL,

Special Correspondent Officially Accredited to the American Expeditionary Forces Abroad.

[SPECIAL STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, Nov. 16.—"Drivers and cannoneers prepare to mount!" came the sharp command from the young battery commander. B Battery stiffened and looked business.

"Right by sections!" was the next command, and we were on the way to the west front.

There is nothing in military appearances to me as snappy and thrilling as a battery of field artillery on the march. B Battery, a long brown cobra, coiled out of the training camp at attention, which means that the men neither talked nor smoked. All one heard was the rumble and creaking of the guns, the caissons and the wagons, and the swish of flying water as the eight-horse hitches splashed along the winding road.

The drivers rode as if nailed in their saddles. They drove with one hand, holding the reins snug in their left fingers and controlling the movements of the off horses with their short artillery whips. Long before I had learned that the first pair of horses was the "lead team," the second the "lead swing," the third the "wheel swing" and the fourth the "wheel team."

Our "B. C." mounted, headed the column. He is an officer out of the Northwest, of German-American stock that runs back to the period before the Revolutionary War. He has an easy way of getting on with the men. Behind him rode our "Giddy," or guidon carrier, the bearer of the pike having at its upper end the small red flag marked in yellow characters with the letter of the battery and the number of the regiment. He once worked at the Knickerbocker Hotel, in New York City, and claims George Cohan, the actor, among his friends.

Spread out, the battery filled one mile of roadway. There were the four guns, the ten caissons and two ammunition wagons, one wagon and forge limber, one storage wagon and limber, one telephone and reconnaissance wagon, one rolling kitchen, three supply wagons and a park wagon; twenty-four vehicles altogether. The three junior lieutenants and the sergeants galloped up and down the line, seeing that the orders bugled by the trumpeter from the "B. C." were being carried out by the chiefs of section. We mustered, with the Medical Corps, approximately 225 men, and about the same number of horses. It was an imposing, gladsome sight.

RELAXATION FOR MEN.

"Route order!" came the command before we had gone a short distance from the camp. It meant for the rigidity of the battery to relax. The drivers were permitted to carry the reins as they pleased, and assume the most comfortable postures upon the horses. Cannoneers were allowed to hop down from the caissons and walk along the road to warm up, for the day was cold and drear, a drizzling rain falling.

The cortege kept well to the right of the road, leaving the left side free. We passed many ox teams drawing primitive wagons and now and then a big French army truck or an automobile containing officers. When it was the car of a general there were two stars pasted or painted on the lower right corner of the windshield. The battery made its first halt, for a rest of ten minutes, at the end of the first hour. This gave the horses a respite and allowed opportunity for the adjustment of harness and the tightening of girths. Out of every succeeding hour on the road ten minutes was put aside for similar purposes.

Despite the weather there was an enthusiastic outdoor welcome for us in all the French villages we passed through. Little children waved tiny hands toward us. Mothers and old men came to the roadside and gave the boys greetings. I heard "Scotty," commander of No. 2 gun, yell at the figure of a grandfather framed in a doorway close to the road: "Cheer up old guy—Wait until 'Gen. Grant' starts barking."

As he patted the side of the big 155-centimeter gun he added: "Ata boy! Ata boy!"

NICKNAMES FOR GUNS.

No. 1 gun is called "Gen. Lee" and No. 2 "Gen. Grant," half and half for the North and South, while No. 3 and No. 4 guns have been given the respective French nicknames of "Alphonse" and "Gaston." A battery of heavy artillery is no Sunday-school. It is a perfect reflex in miniature of the people of the United States, all kinds, all sorts and all conditions, but full of pep, wit and nerve.

The French knew the battery was on its way to the front because of the brown helmets worn by the men and the gas masks slung over their necks. Our helmets are identical with those worn by the British Tommies. They are mushroom-shaped. Some of our soldiers have already learned to remove the leather head harness inside the hemlet, and turning it over use the casque in a practical way for a wash basin.

It was well into the early part of the evening when B Battery reached the military key and was forced to halt along the road in the seas of mud outside until A Battery of the same regiment had pulled out. The loading platform was uncovered. To add to our difficulties came the presence into the sky above of a Zeppelin and two German planes. We did not see them, but were informed they were there. In protection of the inhabitants of the locality it was deemed necessary to shut off the electric lights in the train yards by the local French authorities.

"You will have to load in absolute darkness," said the French major in charge of the key.

LOADS IN DARKNESS.

"We can do it," responded the "B. C.," dropping to the ground from his horse, and passing the bridle reins to his orderly. The battery, a line of flickering shadows, moved into the blackness of the yards and halted again. It was still raining and there was no moon visible in the murky overcast.

After what I saw this night I am no longer in doubt as to the part American soldiers can be expected to play in the conduct of the war. Put to it, our men will face any crisis that arises.

To the two American majors in long coats who walked up and down the platform the loading of the train in total obscurity was nothing to worry about; it was all a part of the work to be expected of an army in the field. The tallest major has in his veins the bluest blood of North Carolina, while the shortest major, of a South Carolina Irish-American family, wears a medal of honor which he won in the Philippines. They were going to the front for detailed artillery instruction in association with the French, both having been former battery commanders in the regiment.

"Damn it, we will have to use our pocket flashlights," said the medal-of-honor major. "The men have got to see where to catch hold of the car doors." Pocket flashlights are more essential to soldier welfare along the west front than knitted mufflers. One cannot get anywhere without them.

Whereupon the major pulled out his own "firefly" and went along the side of the train drawing back the doors unaided. He was the sort of officer who takes hold himself; leads, never follows. The composition of the train was one car for officers, thirty boxcars for the men and horses and seventeen flat cars for wagons, caissons and the guns. This is no military secret, for it has been the French standard for a battery in transit even before the war.

Next began a performance the like of which may be a part of war, but which I have never heard of being equaled, even in fiction—the putting of those green, half-wild horses into the military train. The apportionment was eight to a box car, and being heavy draft animals some of them were so large that their necks bulged higher than the openings into the cars. Miller Brothers, with their two score of bucking bronchos from Ranch No. 101, gave a piker show in comparison with this loading of B Battery in the night. Horses' legs were everywhere. I climbed to the roof of one of the cars as the safest place for a civilian.

HORSES REBELLIOUS.

One could see very little, but the hearing was excellent, especially the vocabulary of the drivers before an animal was projected into a car and the subsequent rattle of angry hoofs inside against the floor and sides of the portable stable. At last the platform was cleared save for a dozen or more successfully rebellious beasts that had stood off being mastered, and I came down from my perch to observe at close range the super-climaxes.

Mind you, the majority of the horses had never been "box-carred" before. The regiment had left its own trained animals back on the Mexican border along with its guns. Our men were handling the new French guns and horses bought from the French government. As for the animals, they had been walked to the training camp, horses from everywhere in the world except the Central Powers. Strangers among themselves no wonder they cut up and frightfully misbehaved.

Kansas Joe is a driver in the third section of B Battery. Up to this night he was an obscure personage. I mean that his talents were not known. He loomed big when his chance came. The way he went in among the last batch of insurgent equines was beautiful to behold and is worthy of the highest praise. That he was not killed is the strangest mystery of the loading. He grappled with the horses' heads and turned them around inside the cars and said words that somehow pacified their excited natures. He got behind them, seized their legs and shoved them into proper places. He was a dozen cowpunchers rolled into one man, the lion of the occasion.

"Good eye," said the medal-of-honor major as the Kansas boy throttled a mean-looking Argentine animal and actually ran it up the narrow gangway into a car after four other men had failed in a dozen attempts.

"Used to work for Pryor down in Texas," said Kansas Joe. "I ain't no shucks for drill, but I kin make a hoss know who is boss."

His tender side I noticed on several occasions when he darted into empty cars and with a lantern carefully examined their sides for projecting nail points and splinters. He said, "When a hoss raises cain there's allus a reason."

One of the battery drivers whose name I do not know had a fearful battle inside one of the cars with panicky horses, and he owes his life to his helmet. The casque he wore showed two deep dents from the kicks of a savage Clydesdale. After the animal had been subdued and put back in its place the boy showed me his bent helmet with the comment, "The tin hat is some good after all."

Four abreast, eight to a car, their heads facing the center, the animals were at last loaded. Two drivers were left within each car to maintain order for the train ride. The whole thing was conducted in the spirit of its being a great lark.

GUNS HARD TO HANDLE.

Meantime the cannoneers were having their obstacles to overcome in getting the wet, slippery guns, caissons and wagons on the flat cars in the darkness. Each howitzer was run into the center of the car and unlimbered there. The limber was turned around with the pole toward the center of the car. Then the howitzer trail was lowered, the handspike turned back, spade keys removed and the trail lowered to the car floor. Next the howitzer was moved toward the limber, the trail passing under the limber until the limber pole touched the main shield on the right side of the howitzer, where it was securely lashed to the trail with light rope. The first caisson was then rolled on to the car, unlimbered and the limber pole run under the howitzer, the wheels being in line with those of the how-

The in- council will consider such questions as the most effective use of credits advanced by the United States to her Allies, priority of the Allies' material needs which can be supplied in this country and in a general way the pooling of economic resources to make the war more efficient.

As head of the council, which includes one representative from each of the principal Allies, Mr. Crosby will not vote except in the disputes and consequently will hold the balance of power for the United States. His selection will necessitate his remaining in London or Paris indefinitely, probably for the period of the war.

"I am greatly pleased," said Secretary McAdoo tonight, "that such an honor as the selection of Mr. Crosby to the presidency of the inter-Allied council should come to the United States and the Treasury Department.

"It is very gratifying also to know that the plans for the conference have been consummated. As a result of the organization of the council, I am confident that we shall get more effective use of the credits which the United States now is extending to the Allies.".

FINANCIAL EXPERT.

Mr. Crosby accompanied Col. House and his mission to Europe nearly two months ago and since then has been studying Allied financial needs in London and Paris. Regular reports have been made to Secretary McAdoo, and on these have been based estimates of the amount of credits the Allies will need from the United States in the future, and the quantities of supplies to be sought here.

The United States already has extended aggregate credits of $3,883,-900,000 to the Allies and about $2,500,000,000 has been paid out. Before he left here, Mr. Crosby supervised these loans for the treasury, and also directed the issue of Liberty Bonds and certificates of indebtedness.

Cable dispatches have said that Mr. Crosby made a very favorable impression in London and Paris because of his wide knowledge of matters in finance, military science, engineering and general business. He is a graduate of the military academy and served as an officer in the Army Engineers in 1887. Before being appointed assistant Secretary of the Treasury last April he was director of the commission for relief in Belgium and had direct supervision of American relief work in both Belgium and Northern France.

Defense Council Chairman Presents Charges.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—Three million bags of rice are held in San Francisco by inability of the Southern Pacific company to provide necessary cars and motive power, was the charge made today by George Bradley, chairman of the District Board of National Defense, at a hearing before the State Railroad Commission.

Bradley's charge divided interest with admissions by F. H. Batture, general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific, that railroads of California had not co-operated with the government or among themselves with a view to effecting economies in operation and rendering better service to the government during the war crisis, and that there had been no conferences or efforts to bring about co-operation looking toward these objectives.

Testimony at the hearing, held to devise means of effecting economies and increasing service, made it apparent, it was said, that the commission will issue a report at the close of the sessions, although such had not been the intention when the hearings began.

Batture further admitted that instead of curtailing passenger service, as was requested by the government and the Railroads' War Board, the Southern Pacific had increased its passenger traffic and equipment.

C. W. Durbrow, Southern Pacific counsel at the hearing, contended that the 3,000,000 bags of rice were stored in Sacramento, not because of any deficiency of the railroad, but owing to the fact that producers were holding their goods for higher prices.

The hearing was adjourned until December 18, when the commission requested President William Sproule of the Southern Pacific to attend and testify.

"FOUR-MINUTE MEN" TO FIGHT SLANDER.

UNDERGROUND WORK AGAINST RED CROSS CONDEMNED IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—San Francisco's "four-minute men" have been directed to get behind the membership drive of the Red Cross and to answer charges that articles knitted for this organization are being sold, in orders received from William McCormick Blair, director of the "four-minute men" organization in Washington. The orders were sent to Jesse Steinhart, chairman of the organization here.

Regarding charges that Red Cross articles are being sold and that women are making an over-supply of materials, Blair's orders state:

"Incredible as it seems that men could sink so low as to direct their poison against a cause that has for its purpose only the relief of suffering.

"But there is one sure antidote for such creatures; living in the dark, they cannot endure the light. Let us be torchbearers for the Red Cross."

December 17 to 23 has been set as the final week of the Red Cross drive for 10,000,000 members who shall pay $1 yearly.

TEUTON OFFICER WAITS FOR CLEAN LINEN BEFORE DESERTING.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Friday, Dec. 14.—A story of how German officers are surrendering is told by an American officer just returned from the British front where he had been undergoing instruction.

One night recently a German officer crawled across No Man's Land to the British wire, raised his hands and cried: "Comrade!" British soldiers covered him with rifles, whereupon the German said.

"Excuse me if I lower my hands, I've got a package here."

The surprised Britishers granted the request and the German dropped into the trench. In his hands he had a package of laundry. He said he had decided to surrender a week before, but had waited until his laundry came back.

BRITISH REGAIN PART OF YPRES THAT FELL.

Counter-fighting Retakes a Trench that had Been Penetrated in Morning.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The British have regained part of the ground won by the Germans on the Ypres front yesterday, the War Office reports. The statement follows:

"Local fighting was recommenced yesterday evening in the neighborhood of Polderhoek chateau, in which our troops regained a considerable part of the trench into which the enemy had penetrated during the morning.

"The hostile artillery was active during the night east of Messines and northeast of Ypres."

GERMANS CLAIM VICTORY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN, Dec. 15. — An official communication from General Headquarters making reference to the front of Crown Prince Rupprecht in Flanders says:

"For over four weeks the British have discontinued their attacks in Flanders. Their violent offensive, which had for its objective possession of the Flanders coast and destruction of our submarine bases, may therefore be considered closed for the present.

"Nearly the whole English army, reinforced by the French, has for over three months struggled with our army in Flanders to obtain a decision. Here, also, German leadership and German troops have been victorious, while at other points we have crushed the enemy by mighty blows. The failure of the English army in Flanders has been accentuated by the heavy defeat which it suffered at Cambrai."

AMERICAN IS ARRESTED BY BOLSHEVIKI AGENTS.

Charles S. Smith, Railway Engineer, is Held Prisoner in Siberia.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PETROGRAD, Dec. 14.—Charles S. Smith of St. Louis, a member of the staff of John F. Stevens, head of the American railway commission of Russia, is reported to have been arrested.

Mr. Smith is reported to have been arrested at Tchita, Siberia, in company with M. Oustrougoff, former Assistant Minister of Railways, who is held by the Bolsheviki as a member of the provisional government.

Ambassador Francis has telegraphed to the American consuls at Harbin and Vladivostok to intervene. At the Smolny Institute, the Bolsheviki headquarters, it was stated that if the American had been arrested it was a mistake and he would be immediately released.

IN GOVERNMENT EMPLOY.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 15.—Charles S. Smith, reported arrested in Siberia, has been in Russia since May, 1916. He left the engineering department of the Missouri Pacific to become a member of the valuation board formed jointly by the railroads and the government to determine the value of the railroads in the United States.

Smith was accompanied by his wife when he went to Russia. In October a letter was received here from Smith saying he was then in Harbin, Manchuria, and had given up his private interests in railroad work to join the American railway commission.

Battle no Terror.

that, however, for I have seen men with one eye employed in the fighting zone. I suppose it will be necessary to lose both eyes very soon to make certain of being released from service."

Now, that is the whole story. The common, ordinary Fritzies are generally human beings like you and I. They are good, and some of them I found very good, but when they become officers they seem to turn Huns instantly.

Now, just to prove that I will tell you another experience of mine. I am again getting ahead of my story, but never mind, this is a good one, and I must tell it. The trouble with the Fritz is that he is too obedient to his officer.

Just previous to one of our big attacks our lot went up to the front-line trenches. It was to be a fight for pill boxes, and from the nature of the ground we knew it would be a stiff struggle. It's a battle in itself to get through the mud, so things weren't exactly rosy-looking.

ALL IN THE GAME.

But it was all in the game, and we could only lie there and wait and figure out for ourselves how the obstacles would be reduced by the terrific artillery bombardment before we topped the bags and wallowed forward to our objective. It's an experience in itself to be out under that awful shelling, a big experience for us, even.

What it must be for the Huns who have the steel, as well as the noise of it, to contend with, can be better imagined than described.

One pill box was within sight, and as I was watching it I saw four Germans under the Red Cross flag approach it and enter.

Well, I thought, that's all right. Somebody's got hurt, or they're preparing.

They must know that an attack is coming off—the bombardment was sufficient advertisement of the fact, in all conscience—but what was my surprise, a few minutes afterwards, to see, not four, but twenty-four at the very least emerge again from the concrete fort, and all under the protecting sign.

They came out, cool as cool, and trotted off to their own lines in the most brazen and open way. I could scarcely believe it at first, but the evidence of my eyes could not be denied.

It was obvious, of course, that a trick had been played.

As I say, the Huns must have known perfectly well that an attack was brewing, and, realising perfectly well, too, from bitter experience, that we would carry that pill box, just as we had carried others, they had determined to relieve their garrison.

But how?

Ah! the Red Cross!

They had sent down that party of four, knowing that they would not be fired on by us, and then, with that sacred sign as their protection, they had got the big majority of the fort's inmates clear away, leaving only one or two die-hards to work their infernal machine guns when our boys went over.

PILL BOX CAPTURED.

That was coming it pretty low-down. But it is only part and parcel, after all, of their idea of fighting. No doubt they thought it rather smart, but I had a different opinion, and I was only sorry there was no officer beside me at the moment to witness the affair.

We had the satisfaction of carrying the place afterwards but instead of the score or so of prisoners we ought to have had, we could only have got a handful—if we got any, for I don't know what the exact fate of that particular pill box was. Probably it was blown to bits.

I shall never forget the last trip I made. The going up to the front line was all right—bar the mud. What mud, and what a task getting through it and out of it!

And yet, despite it all, our boys went up as if on review, with rifles and bayonets slung high, and jest on their lips. You couldn't call it a road, the way we had to go over. Almost at every part it was knee deep in sticky mire but through it we plowed, literally plowed, our way, helping each other as best we could until we reached the front line trenches. Into these we scrambled, and then settled down to wait the first act in the drama which was to unfold itself.

The first act, of course, was the artillery, and needless to say, it was a great success.

STORM OF BULLETS.

Our special difficulties began when the boys went over, and we had to follow them up.

For a bit it was quite safe, or comparatively safe, behind the creeping, all-protecting barrage, but the further we penetrated into the No Man's Land before us, and the nearer we got to the pill-box zone, the less we could count on being safe from molestation while at our work. I don't mean molestation from Hun infantrymen—these we only saw in the shape of prisoners—but from Hun bullets and shells. These were flying pretty thick at times, but we had just to risk it and go on with our duties.

It's curious, though, how familiarized you become with the worst possible conditions.

When you think about it, going out and tending the wounded under a hail of bullets seems a hopeless, if not an impossible task, but once you get over and get started, all thought of risk and danger vanishes.

BATTLEFIELD HEROISM.

You become so engrossed in your work that you pay no more attention to bullets than if they were flies.

After all, what can you do?

You're probably just as safe at the spot you are in as if you shifted to another, for you never know where the missiles are going to land. So you just go ahead and chance it, as the saying is.

And besides, you've so much to do that you even forget all about your "chances."

Well, we forged ahead all right, and things were going pretty well for us when, all of a sudden, disaster came.

One of my chums got knocked out, and I went to his assistance.

We were well into the danger zone by this time, bullets flying around everywhere and all the roar of battle around.

It was no good, I figured, getting him into a shell-hole, for these places were filled with water. You might get in—only to drown.

So I bandaged him up as best I could, and no sooner had I finished my task and saw him being carried away to safety than—whizz! A bullet had got me on the leg, and I dropped.

FIRST AID.

A nice predicament!

Once again I thought of a shell-hole, but it would have been a job crawling to one; and as I say, it might be filled with water, and a worse place for me even than the open. So I sat there and performed first-aid on myself.

Then, what next, think you?

No sooner had I tied up my leg than—whiz once again! Another bullet had come and caught me right in the arm.

A second sooner and I would not have been able to finish the bandaging of my leg. You'd have thought some German sniper had been watching and had been good enough to wait until I got one job done before he gave me another to attend to.

But I don't think! It was just the luck, or misfortune, of war, whichever way you care to look at it.

That was the end of my duties for the day—and for some time to come.

INDIVIDUAL GERMANS KIND.

I never came across any of the German stretcher-bearers at work, but they often helped our wounded. In fact, we hadn't to ask them.

They are always very willing to give a hand at the job, and on many occasions came forward voluntarily and offered their services.

That's all to Fritz's credit; but what stands to his personal credit as a soldier does not minimize in the least the guilt of his superiors in playing such tricks as I have described in the Red Cross episode. That's something about the Huns we can't get away with—the mean, dishonorable manner in which they take advantage of everything to help them out of a difficulty. Their officers are out to win the war by fair means or foul, and the foul seems more to their nature than the fair.

We got our objective during the stunt which brought me my wounds, and on the way back I had an opportunity of witnessing how our men manage to get through their terrible task.

When I was creeping back, seeking what shelter I could from the bullets and shells which were still flying, I was hailed by voices yelling at me to have a care. I looked around and saw a party of Highlanders lying deep in a shell hole, waiting a little till the iron hail abated somewhat. "There's a pill box down there," they said, pointing to the left; "we're out for it. Look out!"

CHEERFUL HIGHLANDERS.

My word, they were the hardy and cheery boys. How long they had been there I don't know, but they were waiting with a grim sort of optimism for their opportunity.

It came, alright.

From shell hole to shell hole they crept, slowly but surely working round to outflank that infernal fort. It must have been a tedious heart-breaking business. I say nothing of the danger—that was too obvious.

But patiently biding their time, they gradually reached the spot they wanted, and then, when the moment came, they were down on that pill box in a swarm. Within a few minutes there was one tooth less in Hindenburg's jaws.

CONSTRUCTION.

I had opportunity of examining several of these pill boxes, and one thing particularly took my fancy about their construction.

They were of all shapes and sizes—round, oval, square and all the rest of it.

But I noticed that at the side pointing to our lines the walls were of tremendous thickness, six feet in some cases, with apertures for the machine guns, or, sometimes, no apertures at all except a back door through which they could run the guns, whirl them into position at the side of the building, and then run them back again when our shells became too attentive. But the point that struck me was that, at the rear, the walls were comparatively thin, the idea obviously being that if we took one of them and commenced to utilize it to repel counter-attacks, Fritz's guns would have a fairly easy job in cracking it up.

He's a fly chap, Fritz, isn't he?

He knows what he is doing all the time, but our boys are getting the better of him. Even his pill box defense is going the way of his other defenses.

But there's something better than that to add. Our boys are not only getting the better of him in fighting, but they are easily retaining the upper hand in morale. The German prisoners are bound to be despondent and seedy-looking — that goes without saying—but apart from comparisons, our boys are the cheeriest and most hopeful lot you ever saw. Through mud and rain they're forging ahead.

Nothing daunts them. They go up to the trenches as if on review. Troops who can do that, and fight afterwards as they fight, are bound to win through.

NO NEW TRIAL OF EARL SUI

Court Denies the Motion His Attorneys.

Publisher had Fair Ch Judge Declares.

Calls the Ella Cain Affid "Serious Matter."

Judge Monroe denied the of E. T. Earl's attorneys yest for a new trial in the $150,00 suit against the Record in which jury gave a verdict in favor of newspaper. The motion was nied solely on the presentation arguments by Mr. Earl's att who contended that the verdi against the evidence and tha instructions of the court with ence to the words "boss" "skunk," mentioned in the publication, were ambiguous tended to confuse the minds of jury. Judge Monroe said he the instruction "was dec favorable" to Mr. Earl.

The court said he ought to permitted Dana Sleeth, the edi the Record, to tell of his know tions of Mr. Earl, but in pers Deputy District Attorney Doran testify as to a telephone conv tion with W. T. Helms, he said probably made an error in fav the Record.

As the court viewed it, there a fair trial. He thought the of the article was contained few paragraphs and was direc Earl's political activities.

As to the notorious Ella Cain fidavit, which figured in the tri the libel suit and was offered by Record in an endeavor to show it was a part of a conspiracy part of Mr. Earl to "get" Dist.-A Fredericks, Judge Monroe had siderable to say.

Addressing W. H. Anderson, of the attorneys for Mr. Earl court stated:

A SERIOUS MATTER.

"You know, Mr. Anderson, that Ella Cain affidavit was serious matter. I cannot stand how anybody would fail I think that was an exceedingly ous matter. It appeared fro testimony and was uncontra in fact, Mr. Earl so testifie Mr. Keich came to him with story and told him the story.

"Now it would have been for you and for me or for Yancwich or for Mr. Scott body told a story of that kin have said, 'She can't do anythi that sort, that's impossible, won't go into that.' Instead of that, he (Mr. Earl) said, 'I will send my stenographer there and take an affidavit.' his agents go down there and the affidavit of a veiled wom is not necessary to say about the affidavit further th it carries falsehood on its There could not have been to it.

"Now, I don't think anybo a right to complain of any that is launched against him he is confronted with a that sort."

NO EXCUSE FOR IT.

"Yes, if the court please," rupted Mr. Anderson, "we are cussing a legal question."

"You are talking about tion," replied Judge Monroe. sonally, I think that this attack really an attack—of course were other things incidental Mr. Earl's activities. Whethe or I think they were good I think that was what the was.

"The worst thing in the absolutely the worst thing Ella Cain affidavit. There question in the world about was no excuse for that, and Mr. Earl thinks so himself, he so expressed himself. had a right to believe, as did believe, that when Supervisors called down (Earl's office) he (Earl) said a case on Fredericks; they right to believe that he that affidavit. I am simply now to that portion of the which said 'If he can't get one way, he will another.'"

TREND OF CURRENT POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

While the gubernatorial campaign must before long be in active operation not one candidate has yet formally announced himself. Even Gov. Stephens seems satisfied to let the people assume that he would succeed himself. Why all the mystery it is not easy to determine.

Every day or so some new name is mentioned in the list of possibilities. During the past week the following southerners have been added: Walter Bordwell, former Superior judge and member of the Board of Education; Phil A. Stanton, standpat Republican; Willis H. Booth, recently a candidate for United States Senator; Leo V. Youngworth and former Gov. Henry T. Gage.

Others, not new because there has been a lot of talk about them for several months, are: Mayor Woodman, Mayor Rolph, Francis J. Heney, Dist.-Atty. Woolwine, H. L. Carnahan, Frank Jordan, Congressman Kahn, Congressman Hayes.

Obviously the only chance a Democrat will have in the race will be to get the support of the national administration. I wonder if that is the reason both Heney and Woolwine are back in Washington. The former has been flirting with the President for several months and is known to have some standing with him. Tommy Lee is a wonder when it comes to winning friends and if he makes a big noise during the next two weeks while trying to bring the sugar refiners to time I would not be surprised to see him come back home with a letter from Joe Tumulty or Herb Hoover. If he does he will be worth watching in the coming campaign. Before departing for Washington the District Attorney said: "I am not a candidate for Governor, but it is more than probable that I will be. If I decide to run no one can stop me."

The candidate who can get a bulk of Republican and Progressive votes of course will be the winner. The Democrats as a party do not count for much in California when compared with the other political organizations. Now if Gov. Stephens is able to induce part of the Republicans and the rank and file of Progressives it would be difficult to defeat him. But there is the rub. He does not seem to be making any particular play to get into the good graces of the regulars; in fact, he seems bent upon lining them up against him and I think his stock in the Progressive camp is dwindling. He has the remnants of Hiram Johnson's powerful machine with him, but the Senator is openly against him and even the remnants may be expected to wait for instructions from Washington.

The appointments made by Gov. Stephens during the week can really be criticised only from a political viewpoint. There is no honest objection to Hon. Curtis D. Wilbur, who was elevated to the Supreme bench because he is a jurist of exceptional ability. E. J. Delorey will probably make a good Supervisor and it is certain that Dana Weller will grace the Superior Court. Politically, however, Republicans have a protest coming. Four times within a few months they have witnessed the Governor pick out Progressives, only once selecting a genuine Republican.

Gov. Stephens defends his action by asserting that he is guided solely by a desire to get the best men. Granting that he has picked citizens of that caliber, isn't it strange that only good men in Los Angeles are to be found on the top floor of the Union League Building. There they hobnob with M. Lissner and his kind. Then M. has a talk with the Governor and they further cement the family circle by throwing all the plums to persons of their own stamp. It may be all right, but the worm usually turns.

What's all this talk about members of the Public Service Commission resigning? There is a probe being made of the books and records of that department and it will be filed within a few weeks.

Jesse D. Burks is floundering around like a ship without a pilot. Like one of our erstwhile political bosses, he knows not which way to turn for succor or sympathy. Even Dr. Haynes has deserted him and the Municipal League has not had the temerity to go to his rescue. He is writing reams of stuff and no one reads it. The Council files it without burdening Dave Carroll with an order to peruse it. What a difference a few months sometimes make! A year or so ago all of the gang was with Jesse. Now he fights alone and in vain. It has been rumored for months that the Mayor would tie a can to the city's chief exponent of inefficiency and it has been done so successfully that Mr. Burks better forget it. If he is so wonderfully efficient there are other cities that need him and he need not be jobless long.

Here's to a Council with a backbone! Who would have thought they would have had the nerve to legislate Mr. Burks out of office and then laugh at him. Now let the good work go along. The Mayor has some ideas in connection with elimination of some more commissions through a plan of consolidation and the Councilmen can make a tremendous hit if they will adopt it.

Jack Bean says he will be a candidate next fall against Supervisor Delorey. He believes the recently appointed official will be easy to beat. Time will tell. The incumbent always has the best of a political race and maybe Mr. Delorey will build up some fences that will be hard to vault.

Because of his continued illness it is generally believed that Associate Justice Lorigan of the Supreme Court will not be a candidate to succeed himself and that he will resign. In fact it has been stated during the past few days that he plans to quit January 1. Reports to the contrary have been received by the Governor, who said yesterday that he understood Justice Lorigan will be a contender next year. If he does resign there will be several local judges eligible for the appointment. Among them may be Appellate Judge Shaw and Superior Judges McCormick and Craig. If Judge Shaw is given the honor, the Governor will have another chance to tickle a good Progressive—no, not a Republican—when he names a man for the Appellate bench.

A keen edge ax is about to drop on the neck of Uncle George Alexander. The Supervisors must soon name a new member of the County Civil Service Commission and it is understood that a majority of them think that Uncle George has been at the public trough long enough. It looks as if Charley Burger will get the job.

Political enemies of Archie Eley, suspended Fire Chief, are gloating over the fact that he was not exonerated by the jury that heard the embezzlement charges against him. It is hard to believe that a man holding so responsible a position would take a chance on ruining his reputation for a measley sum of $500, and Mr. Eley's friends do not believe he did no.

EMBANKMENTS ALONG SAIZ AND VOLCANO LAKE TO BE REINFORCED AT ONCE.

EL CENTRO, Dec. 15.—Flood protection work aggregating $335,000 was authorized today by the Irrigation District Board, which let contracts to Lee Little and Robert Shearer & Co. for the raising of Saiz and Volcano Lake levees. The letting of these contracts was in conformity with the report of Chief Engineer Clarke that, unless the levees were raised from two to five feet, there was danger that the Colorado River during the next flood period, in June or July, would seek the lower levels of the valley and empty into the Salton Sea.

Lee Little already has 200 teams and equipment for raising the levees in the vicinity of Hanlon Heading and will be at work raising the levees within a few days. The Saiz levee, which he is to raise, was broken by the high water last June. The break is to be repaired and the levee raised four feet at the point of the break. Robert Shearer will complete most of the contract for raising the Volcano Lake levee by dump cars, getting earth from Black Butte. Both contractors are given four months in which to complete their work.

Detectives who were sent to the scene of the incident, in answer to a call that someone had been killed, were told by the secretary of the chamber that the rock had accidentally fallen out of the window. No blame for the accident was placed by the authorities.

COUNCILMAN CONWELL IS CALLED BY DEATH.

City Official is Stricken Down at Blythe. Expect Fight on Successor.

JAMES SIMPSON CONWELL, president of the City Council and for many years prominent and influential in the commercial life of Los Angeles, died suddenly yesterday forenoon at Blythe, Cal.

Councilman Conwell, granted a month's leave of absence by his associates, was motoring home for the holidays from a brief vacation passed at Phoenix, Ariz. His companions on the pleasure trip were his daughter, Miss Larooka Conwell, and Roy E. Stewart. Arriving at Blythe Friday night they halted there, and in the early morning hours the Councilman was seized by an attack of heart trouble, which caused his death despite the prompt attention of his daughter and a physician.

News of his sudden and unexpected death came to Los Angeles in a message from Mr. Stewart, who is the president of the Conwell-Hathaway Automobile Company. Received at the City Hall a minute later the information fell as a pall, for every Councilman, department head, bureau chief and employee viewed the president of the Council, not alone as an associate, but as a personal friend.

Acting Mayor Cleaveland, on receipt of the word, sat as one dazed for a moment. He summoned the entire Council by messenger, but because there is no Saturday session he was able only to get word to Councilmen Conaway, Criswell, Olsen, Reeves and Farmer. Conrad was out of the city; Mallard could not be found. In their conference they decided to delay action on a resolution and funeral arrangements until tomorrow morning. No discussion was had on the question of a successor as Councilman and as president of the Council. City flags went to half-mast without orders, the custodians of the public buildings, feeling the loss as their own, did not require even a suggestion in this direction.

MANAGED AUTO SHOW.

The president of the Council, well and prominently known for his leadership in commercial automobile circles, guaged his annual vacation so that he could take charge of and manage Los Angeles' annual automobile show. It was a magnificent, though a stupenduous task, and the show was the greatest success of any given here or along the Pacific Coast, say dealers and owners. Mr. Conwell, who was not enjoying the best of health just prior to the show, persisted in remaining at his post of manager. December 5, accompanied by his daughter, he traveled by automobile to Phoenix. There they were joined by Mr. Stewart, president of the Conwell-Hathaway Automobile Company, in which the decedent was a large stockholder, and they were homeward bound when death halted them at Blythe.

Mrs. Conwell and the daughter at home, Miss Deisy, a teacher in the public schools, on receipt of the word of the death of the husband and father, were immediately surrounded at their home, No. 347 North Van Ness avenue, by sorrowing friends who sought to comfort them. The body will arrive this morning and will be placed in the charge of Pierce Brothers, funeral directors. No arrangements for the funeral have been made.

Mr. Conwell, a native of Minnesota, was born in Winona, July 4, 1859. His father, Rev. F. A. Conwell, was a chaplain in the First Minnesota Volunteer Infantry Regiment in the Civil War. He became the husband of Miss Mae Hopkinson in 1891. He obtained his education in Evanston, a suburb of Chicago, and at Lake View, now a part of Chicago. He won his Bachelor of Science degree in the Northwestern University at Evanston in 1882.

CAME HERE IN 1882.

Shortly after Mr. Conwell came to Los Angeles and entered the men's furnishing goods field, becoming a partner in the firm of Evans & Conwell, in 1885. From 1889 to 1894, he was associated with Folmer, Clogg & Company, umbrella manufacturers in San Francisco. The following three years he was engaged in the bicycle industry. From 1897 to 1900, he was the Indianapolis manager of the Indiana Bicycle Company. In 1900 he went to Anderson, Ind., where he was the president of the Wilke Manufacturing Company. The year 1907 found him engaged in the automobile industry in this city. He was secretary and manager of the United Motors Company from 1907 to 1913, making him one of the pioneers who saw the future in the business. He also had served as secretary of the Automobile Funding Company of America.

His first appearance in the public life was at Evanston, where he was town clerk in 1881 and 1882; also, he was a member of the United States Life Saving crew. While in San Francisco he was chosen by Mayor Phelan as a member of the Charter Committee of 100, and he served a term as president of the Cycle Board of Trade. In this city he was president of the Motor Dealers' Association in 1911 and 1912. In 1899, he built the first Waverly electric pleasure car. He also was the inventor of a gassifier to permit the use of distillate in motor engines.

He was a member of the University clubs of Los Angeles and Indianapolis, the Society of Automobile Engineers of America, the Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity, the Los Angeles Athletic Club, the Automobile Club of Southern California, the Gamut Club, Annandale Country Club, several lodges and the Methodist Episcopal Church.

IN THIRD TERM.

Mr. Conwell was in his third term as Councilman. He was the only member of the Council of 1915-1916 to be re-elected. He was in the center of the billboard fight, about which the last Councilmanic campaign fluctuated. He led the fight in the old Council for an ordinance that would restrict billboards and exclude them from the residence districts. Constant attention to his public work, and sane action, won for him the admiration and respect of friend and foe alike. His leadership, many times acknowledged, won for him the presidency of the present Council. As an expert, successful business man he was a champion of efficiency movements in the City Hall and was a member of the Council Efficiency and Supply Committee. In the past he was a defender of Efficiency Director J. D. Burks, recently removed from office.

Speculation as to his successor was broad, but no information as to the Councilmanic line-up was vouchsafed by members of that body, who decried any attempt to discuss the question.

"We do not expect to act for a week or two, possibly a month," said Acting Mayor Cleaveland. "We owe that much respect to the man we loved and admired for his sterling, manly qualities."

John B. Powell, an engineer in the fire department, residing in Boyle Heights, was tenth in the last race for the Council. He received 41,680 votes. Henry H. Lyon (recently slain) ran next, receiving 41,159 votes. Next came Dr. A. D. Houghton, who got 40,569 votes. After him came F. C. Wright, seeking re-election. Then came M. F. Betkouski, also wanting to be returned to the Council. Dr. F. C. Langdon, like Wright and Betkouski, wanted to be retained. He was a contender with E. J. Delorey for Former Supervisor R. H. Details of the drowning Wednesday at Portsmouth, Va., of Naval Gunner Arthur B. Toerpe, whose body is now on the way to this city, where his widow survives, were received from the Navy Department today. The information disclosed that Gunner Toerpe and Seaman Thomas Rose were drowned when a naval patrol boat was rammed by a steamer. The remaining seven members of the crew, including one officer, were rescued, the report stated.

A guard of honor composed of San Pedro sailors will be appointed to accompany the body to the grave at the funeral services here, it was announced today.

OUT ON BAIL.

Alexis M. Schwitalla, secretary and chemist of the Western Chemical Manufacturing Company, accused of arson in connection with the destruction of the main building of the plant by fire December 1, was released from the City Jail here today by posting $10,000 bail. Attorney Harry A. Chamberlain of Los Angeles, who will defend the Schwitalla brothers at their preliminary hearing next Tuesday in Justice W. S. Brayton's court, secured the bondsmen. Alfred Schwitalla, brother of the chemist, who is also charged with arson in connection with the fire, remained in jail. His bail was also fixed at $10,000.

ADOBE HOUSES FOR MEXICAN LABORERS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

OXNARD, Dec. 15.—The American Beet Sugar Company here has made an appropriation of $8000 for the experimental construction of adobe houses for living quarters for Mexican laborers. Adobe brick for the houses is now being made on the factory grounds here, and the houses will be erected in various parts of the beet-growing district. The plan, a new one here, is being tried out upon the recommendation of Frederick Noble, who recently came here from Colorado as manager of the local factory. In Colorado the Mexicans remained in the beet districts when they had a home rent free throughout the year. Other Mexicans joined them and in a short time there was plenty of labor.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA PAULA, Dec. 15.—Mrs. Gilbert Tanner and Mrs. G. M. Sanders were given $145 damages against the county for injuries to their clothing and persons sustained when a workman on the county highway threw a big shovelful of hot tar into their car. Miller contended that the running board of the car hit him, hurling him to one side and spilling the tar. The women sued for $243, but the Supervisors settled the claim for $145.

INSANITY CHARGE IS DISMISSED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VISALIA, Dec. 15.—Mrs. Lena Clarke, who was arrested on a complaint sworn to by her husband, S. Clarke of Tulare, in which Mrs. Clarke was charged with insanity, was discharged at the conclusion of her examination by county alienists. Mrs. Clarke, according to her husband, attacked him with an ax and later attempted to shoot him. Mrs. Clarke, in her own defense, declared she used this method to compel her husband to give her an adequate allowance with which to run the household. She appeared anything but unsound in mind at the hearing. The Clarkes, who were married a few months ago, have a combined age of 140.

PUBLIC ECONOMY URGED.

"This doctrine of the conservation of all our resources, which is being taught with so much earnestness by President Wilson, should be made to apply to our State and city governments as well as to the conduct of individuals," said John McArthur, formerly Commissioner of Public Works for Chicago, while he was talking of existing conditions yesterday. "There is a very strong feeling in favor of the adoption of this policy for Chicago," he continued, "and I for one am confident it will be done. The most important portion of the plan proposed is to drop all the more expensive public improvements until the end of the war or, at least, until conditions make some work of this kind imperative."

Mr. McArthur and his family are stopping at the Hotel Maryland for the present, but are looking about for a home and expect to remain in Pasadena until next June, at least.

INVESTIGATION BY GRAND JURY

Is Hinted at by Venice City Board of Trustees.

No Formal Charges Made, but Official is Under Fire.

Building of Canal Dam Being Inquired Into.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, Dec. 15.—That the grand jury will sift the charges made against Superintendent of Canals Roger H. Lientz by Constable Frank Barton and others, to the effect that the city official had received $125 from the Douglas Fairbanks company for the construction of a dam, had used city labor on the job and then charged the labor up to the city, even to the extent of overtime, was intimated today by members of the Board of Trustees. The board will make known its decision on the charges at its regular weekly meeting Monday afternoon.

NO CHARGES FILED.

While no formal charges have been preferred against Mr. Lientz, information to this effect was laid before the Trustees at the close of last week's meeting, and for two nights this week the Trustees examined witnesses, including city employees, who testified that they had worked on the job and had received only city money for their work. Joseph E. Henaberry, director of the Fairbanks company, testified that he had given the check for $125 to Mr. Lientz, in payment for constructing the dam, last October, at a set the company had erected. One hundred dollars, he said, was for the construction and the other $25 for cleaning away sewage that had collected at the dam.

CITY PAYS MEN.

Pay rolls of the city were in evidence to show that the men were working on the city's time, but no one testified to having received pay for the work from any source but the city.

Mr. Lientz, through his attorney, Samuel Crawford, admitted that he took the $125 check and promised to show where the money went. Later the canal superintendent refused to give his version of the circumstances, declaring that he had nothing at all to say, even though pressed to do so by Mayor Rutherford B. Harris, who presided at the investigation. The general impression is that, although Mr. Lientz received the money, it was certain "higher-ups" eventually received it.

part forced him to retire and suspend artillery action for the day.

"The daring of our troops of the Fourth Army during this fierce and bitter struggle, which has been proceeding for four days between the Brenta and the Piave, has been worthy the greatness of the hour."

PRISONERS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN (via London) Dec. 15.—More than 3000 prisoners have been taken by the Austro-German forces during the fighting of the last few days on the Italian front between the Brenta and the Piave, army headquarters announced today. Some captures of cannon and machine guns also were effected.

Italian counter-attacks against positions taken were repulsed. The statement reads:

"Italian front: During the past few days, in engagements between the Brenta and the Piave we took forty officers and more than 3000 men prisoners and captured some guns and machine guns. Several Italian counter-attacks against positions we had captured were repulsed."

HUN STRENGTH.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The strength of the Austro-German invaders in Italy is placed by official dispatches from Rome today at sixty divisions.

On the front line are fifty-two, of which forty-five are Austrian and seven German. Eight others, four German and four Austrian, are said by information from competent sources to be held back of the lines in reserve.

CONGRESSMAN IN DANGER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Friday, Dec. 14.—An army automobile in which Congressman George H. Tinkham of Boston was riding today on a visit to Monte Grappa, on the northern mountain front, skidded over the mountainside and dropped twenty feet. The automobile was crushed to pieces, but the Congressman and the other occupants escaped with bruises, the chauffeur being seriously, but not dangerously, injured.

Congressman Tinkham, who fired the first American shot against Austria, received slight injuries.

Heavy fighting is in progress today on the mountain front in the north, east of the Brenta River. The enemy is attempting to advance his positions, as he has those west of the river, which would give him two lines of approach to the Brenta Valley and the open plain.

HEAVY GUNS.

The enemy has brought a large number of his heaviest guns to the Piave and northern fronts, and the bombardment has taken on increased range and violence. Some of the shells have reached Mancino, eight miles back of the Piave and a few miles from the city of Treviso. Four hundred of these monster projectiles were concentrated on one point.

Gen. Diaz, the Italian commander-in-chief, sums up the results of the struggle of the last three days in the north by saying that the enemy secured an insignificant stretch of ground at the cost of an immense sacrifice of blood. Although he has obtained a lodgment on Monte Spinuccia and Monte Fontanel, heretofore held by the Italians, this does not represent any appreciable advance toward the plains, which is his main object, but merely a fluctuation of the Italian line, of which Monte Grappa is the dominating barrier. Even below Grappa, formidable defensive works have been constructed, in event the enemy should reach the plain, but each day of his futile pressure on the north and east and of successful resistance by the Italians and their allies strengthens the belief that the enemy will not realize this eventuality.

SCHOOLS FOR SKIPPERS.

Plans Completed for Training Thousands of Men to Man Merchant Marine.

Two of the training vessels to accommodate 600 men each already have been selected and others will be put into service as fast as they can be obtained. Instructions will be by able seamen.

The men will be recruited throughout the country, and while in school will be allowed $30 a month, board and clothing. Men without seafaring experience will be accepted.

FIRST ARREST FOR HOARDING SUGAR.

NEW YORK MAN TAKEN INTO CUSTODY FOR HAVING OVER-STOCK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The first man to be arrested here on the charge of hoarding sugar was taken into custody today. He is Hyman Borrok and is alleged to have held 126 barrels of the commodity in storage. He was held for trial December 22.

If Borrok is found guilty he will be subject to a fine of from $100 to $1000 or one year's imprisonment, or both. His plea is that he bought the sugar to go into the syrup manufacturing business.

STRICT NEUTRALITY PROMISED BY SWISS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—In thanking the United States for the declaration to strictly observe the neutrality of Switzerland the Swiss confederation, in a communication made public today by the State Department, declares it will maintain its neutrality by its own forces and will repel a violation of its frontiers.

The communication received today by the State Department is signed by President Ador of the Swiss confederation and addressed to the Charge d'Affaires at Berne in the absence of Minister Stovall, and is as follows:

"December 12.

"Mr. Charge d'Affaires:

"In a note of the third instant you were kind enough to inform the political department that you had been charged by the Department of State to inform the Federal Council that the presence of American troops in Europe, taking part in the war against the German imperial government, has led the government of the Union to inform the Swiss confederation that, the same as its co-belligerents in Europe, the United States will not fail to observe toward Switzerland the principle of neutrality and inviolability of its territory so long as this neutrality is maintained by the confederation and respected by the enemy.

"In the name of the Federal Council I have the honor, in acknowledging this declaration, to beg you to transmit to your government the thanks of the Federal Council for this new proof of the sentiments of friendship that the United States has always manifested towards Switzerland.

"The Federal Council can only renew the declaration of neutrality that it had the honor to notify to Washington April 20, 1917, insisting particularly on its firm and unwavering determination to maintain and defend its neutrality and inviolability of its territory by all means at its disposal against any person.

"At the same time the Federal Council has the honor to declare that by virtue of its sovereignty and in accordance with the declaration of the powers who signed the treaties of Vienna and Paris of 1815, in particular that of the 20th of November, the Swiss confederation, to whom it appertains to take the necessary measures for the defense of its territory, will maintain its neutrality by its own forces and will repel a violation of its frontier if that occurs.

"Referring to these acts and to its declaration of neutrality of August 4, 1914, as well as to later declarations, especially the notification made at Washington by the Swiss Minister on April 20, 1917, the Federal Council believes that it appertains only to it to decide in what condition it might appear opportune to appeal to the assistance of foreign powers.

MUST PAY WAR TAX ON SEASON TICKETS.

RULING APPLIES TO PURCHASE MADE BEFORE FIRST OF NOVEMBER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 15.—Holders of season tickets to theaters or other places of amusement will be required to pay a war tax for all performances attended after November 1, under an amended ruling of the Internal Revenue Bureau today.

It had previously been ruled that payments made before November 1 were not subject to tax. The revised ruling is that it is the privilege covered by the payment that is taxed, not the payment itself. Accordingly, no tax is to be collected on any amount paid for admission to performances prior to November 1, but a tax is to be collected for all admission to performances, entertainments or places after November 1, notwithstanding that such admission may have been paid for before November 1.

Holders of season tickets will be required to pay the 10 per cent. tax on the portion of the cost of the ticket covering admissions after November 1.

After today no person shall be admitted to any place to which admission is charged unless the ticket, card or pass by which he is admitted bears evidence that the tax due has been paid. Proprietors of amusement places are charged with responsibility of collecting the tax and of keeping daily records of tickets sold and taxes collected.

RED CROSS FACTOR IN TROOPS' MORALE.

PROVIDES THE NEEDED LINK WITH HOME DECLARES RELIEF OFFICIAL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Every report from the training camps in America, and from the French front, indicates the American troops are in excellent spirits, W. Frank Pearsons, director-general of civilian relief of the American Red Cross, said today in an address before the American Academy of Political Science, meeting here.

Whether the soldiers will maintain this morale through trench life and battle to the end will be determined, he said, largely by the home service of the Red Cross. "Men may be the best soldiers in the world," he declared, "but if things are not well with their families at home they worry and lose efficiency, and the morale, that all-important factor, begins to fail."

The greatest opportunity of the Red Cross home service, Mr. Pearsons said, is the conservation of human resources—the maintenance of good standards of health, education, industry and family solidarity among the large minority of soldiers' families which is not able to provide these standards for itself.

Southern Pacific Presents Claims for Permission to Increase Switching Charges.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—Application for permission to increase by 100 per cent. certain switching charges at points in California was filed today with the State Railroad Commission by the Southern Pacific Company.

Effect of the application, if granted, would be to increase the rate from 25 cents a ton with a minimum charge of $5 a car, to 50 cents a ton, with a minimum of $7.50 for inter-yard movements, that is, movements between points located on the rails of the company.

The application also proposed to increase the charge for handling cars from transfer tracks to industry tracks, when the shipment originates on an industry track within switching limits of the connecting carrier, from $2.50 to $5 a car.

Amazing Power of Bon-Opto To Make Weak Eyes Strong

Doctor Says It Strengthens Eyesight 50 per cent in One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses, and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes, which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription at home. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent. in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is sold in this city by the leading druggists.

ABANDON NEW MILITIA COMPANY.

REDLANDS, Dec. 15.—The plans for the organization of a new militia company in this city were stopped today, when A. E. Isham, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, received a telegram from Adjt.-Gen. Borree in answer to an inquiry as to the requirements for such a company.

Adjt.-Gen. Borree says: "The new national guard is subject to draft into the Federal service provided it is not called into active service by the President before the next general draft. It is subject to service outside the State and if organized it is quite possible that the company will be ordered into active service in the near future. The time of service would be for the duration of the war."

Plans were for the organization of a company here provided it would not be called on for service outside the State.

PASTOR GRANTED LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Dec. 15.—Rev. Herbert C. Ide, pastor of the First Congregational Church here, has been granted a leave of absence from the church to go to Camp Kearny and take up religious work as one of the "soldier pastors" there. He plans to leave soon and it is not known just how long he will be in the service.

He will work under the direction of the Congregational State conference and several ministers are to be placed in the work at the camp by this board. His leave of absence is for one month, but it is understood that this will be extended if his services are needed.

Rev. Ide has been the pastor of the church here for about a year, coming from New York, where he held the pastorate of one church for ten years.

Reservations should be made now for Christmas week at "Hotel del Coronado." Agency, 527 Spring.—[Advertisement.

CONSERVATION DIFFICULT.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

MADISON (Wis.) Dec. 15.—Assertion that it is practically impossible to impress upon people the necessity for food conservation and that the events of the last two days in Europe have in reality placed the United States in deadly peril of its very existence, was made today by Dr. Ray L. Wilbur, president of Leland Stanford University and a member of the Hoover Food Control Board, in an address before the Saturday Lunch Club.

"If Germany were to conclude a peace now," he added, "she would have her dreams of mid-Europe practically fulfilled."

He will supervise the distribution of flour through the nation's retail trade from the miller to the consumer.

"What is expected of me and what I shall try to do is to determine a fair and equitable price for flour from the miller to the consumer with due consideration for the interests of both," said Mr. Zabriskie. He made it clear that his duties also would comprehend solution of all problems affecting distribution of flour through retail markets of the country and that this work throughout would be coordinated with that of the other departments of the Federal Food Administration. GEORGIA EXEMPTION BOARD IS DISMISSED.

ATLANTA (Ga.) Dec. 15. — The entire membership of the Fulton county exemption board has been summarily dismissed on orders from President Wilson on charges involving "unwarranted exemptions and discharges" and the case has been turned over to the Department of Justice. This was disclosed tonight in an order issued by Maj. Joel D. Mallet, in charge of the operation of the selective draft law in Georgia deposing the board and naming new members.

The men dismissed are Judge F. R. Thompson (chairman,) S. J. Mitchell and Dr. C. M. Curtis. Maj. Mallet's statement said that out of 818 white men called in the county 526 were dismissed, 44 per cent of the exemptions being on physical grounds. It was also charged that of 202 negroes examined by the board only six were exempted.

Atlanta is located in Fulton county.

NAVY OIL LAND BILL APPORTIONS MILLIONS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Senator Swanson of Virginia expects to introduce a bill Monday, drawn by the Navy Department, either separately or as an amendment to the coal and oil bill, proposing an appropriation of $150,000,000 of which $1,000,000 would immediately be available to condemn properties in the reserve claimed by private individuals and corporations, with a view to immediate government development.

MANY JOIN GUARD.

Recruiting for New Units Active. Men with Military Experience are Needed.

Now that the ranks of the regular army are closed to men registered for the draft, large numbers of men are crowding the recruiting offices of the additional National Guard companies, twelve of which have been allotted to California. Three companies already have been recruited and mustered into service in Los Angeles and another is nearing completion.

While such enlistment does not necessarily grant exemption from the draft, there is a fine opportunity to obtain military training while remaining at work, and if the government decides later to retain them in the Guard units the men will be in "on the ground floor."

A special appeal is being sent out to men who have had previous military training, such men being practically assured of appointments as noncommissioned officers immediately. The need for former students and graduates of military schools, Spanish War veterans, etc., is great, to provide sufficient noncommissioned officers to assist in the training of raw recruits.

The recruiting office is open day and evenings, including Sunday, at No. 602 South Main street, on the ground floor of the Pacific Electric Building.

CHRISTMAS BOXES BOOST CALIFORNIA.

Several seasons ago the holiday gift-package idea to advertise Southern California in the East was originated by Jevne's, and this season, more than ever before, it is being employed to send easterners something distinctly associated with the Land of Sunshine.

The box or basket of California fruits, dried, evaporated or—as in the case of oranges — fresh, all packed, ready for the long journey and guaranteed to arrive safely at their destination, has proven a great success. This year the range of contents and the form of packages have been extended greatly. From the smallest to the largest amount that the sender may wish to expend there is a gift box, basket or hamper to correspond.

CERTAIN BOMB CAME FROM AIR

Police Learn More Facts on Strange Explosion.

John-street Woman Finds Steel Shell Case.

Distillate Tanks Theory is Called Impossible.

Additional evidence that the explosion near Temple and Hoover streets last Thursday night was caused by an airplane bomb was secured yesterday, according to Detective Captain Home, who stated also that little more of the work of the investigators can be made public until the person responsible for the detonation is taken into custody.

The most significant detail yesterday was the testimony of a small piece of bomb casing given to the police by Mrs. Belle Johns of No. 3420 John street. Mrs. Johns told Detectives Blue and Loo that on Thursday night, immediately after the explosion, she rushed from her home to the street and, as she went, heard what she thought were small stones striking the roof of her home and the houses of neighbors.

While she stood in the street, Mrs. Johns said, she saw a spurt of and heard the sound of something striking in front of her. She turned to her home, secured matches and searched the ground near where she had been standing. The reward of her search was a small piece of steel, about one and one-half inches long by half an inch wide and a quarter of an inch thick. This bit of steel, she told the police, felt slightly warm and smelled strongly of burned powder.

SAW TWO LIGHTS.

On Friday morning, with neighbors, she searched around her home and found other small sections of steel, one of which matched the piece she had found in the street. Mrs. Johns also told the police that she thought she saw two lights, one small and the other slightly larger, very high above her in the air, and that she supposed them to be lights of an aircraft.

Detective Captain Home last evening ridiculed the theory that exploding distillate tanks near Sherman had caused the report and showered the steel fragments in the neighborhood of Temple and Hoover streets.

"These fragments that the officers have found," said Capt. Home, "were picked up in the district bounded by Plata street on the north, Hoover street on the west and Michigan street on the south. At no other point in the city have fragments of steel been found which match the pieces in this office. Sherman is at least five miles from Hoover and John streets.

SURE IT WAS AIRSHIP.

"Further, if the distillate drums had scattered these fragments which the officers and people of the neighborhood found, it would have been impossible for them to have been thrown so far in such a short time. The concussion of the exploding drums would have been distinctly heard in Beverly Hills, Laurel Canyon and other localities near the oil field. Contrary to this, the explosion was heard there only faintly.

"It is to be remembered that within a few seconds after the residents of the Hoover-street section heard the explosion, small fragments of steel were seen and heard striking the houses and falling in the streets. There is no other explanation than that an airship dropped the explosive material."

Former State Senator Tells of His New Viewpoint Toward Capital.

Declaring that he has changed his opinion of John D. Rockefeller he often had "foolishly" and that he has many other ideas now about capital and labor, former State Senator G. W. wright interested members of City Club yesterday with an on present industrial conditions.

"In my twenty years' public admit I have made many speeches again John D. Rockefeller," he said. "Now, I do not him, but I believed I knew wealth and his system stood have changed my opinion of feller because when he makes extra hundred million he does hoard it, neither does he from doing good. He does not an extra suit of clothes, nor an extra collar and eat an meal. He summons his and superintendents and plants. He expands money in York, in St. Louis, in Los An he adds new buildings, and means more clerks and more borers, but let the agitator fere, and what happens? ler retrenches, and saves his for better days. Therefore, foots the bills."

Agitation between capital and labor, he said, is not to be through the medium of the bdx demagogue, but will be men place their legs beneath table and look into one eyes. He urged that there be er reformers and more

"One of the most foolish-sounding sentences in the world is in the New Testament and reads something like this: 'If any man would be first among you, let him be your servant.' Sounds perfectly absurd, doesn't it? Beautiful in sentiment, of course; but impractical, visionary, good only for unselfish dreamers. So the world thought for many years; but pick up any trade paper today and see what the world thinks. Pick up a magazine and look at the advertisements; half of them are nothing in the world but that verse in different words.

" 'Come to my hotel,' advertises one. 'It is the leading hotel.' Why? 'Because you can't possibly insult us enough. There is nothing so menial, so slavish that we won't gladly do it for you. We are more humble servants than any other hotel men, therefore we are the greatest of all.'

"Service—service—service—it's the keynote of modern business, the open sesame of present-day success. And every man who discovers it and applies it to his own business supposes he has found a new thing in the world, never suspecting that this old Book has been holding out the secret to him, waiting for the world to take it for over nineteen hundred years."

We fully agree with the above article from the American Magazine: SERVICE is the foundation upon which our business has been built, upon which it has been developed and upon which it will continue to invite your patronage.

BILLY SUNDAY AIDE ARRESTED.

Former Secretary to Choir Leader Arrested on Bogus Check Charge.

Charged with attempting to pass a worthless check for $80, Ronald V. Robinson, former secretary to Homer Rodeheaver, Billy Sunday's choir leader, was arrested yesterday in a downtown department store by operatives of the Nick Harris agency.

At the Central Police Station, Robinson told Detective Jackson he had tried to get the money to feed his aged mother. He was one of the first to hit the sawdust trail in Los Angeles, he said, and got along pretty well until the end of the revival when he lost his position. After that he said, he couldn't find steady work and soon became destitute.

Robinson is the second Billy Sunday convert in this city to get into trouble with the police.

A Simple Way to Reduce Wrinkles

Remember that wrinkles and bagginess of cheek or chin are due to the muscular tissue losing its strength and shrinking. The skin is then too large in area to fit such tissue smoothly. It wrinkles or sags.

To remedy this condition, there's nothing so effective, so quick-acting, as a simple wash lotion easily made at home. Just get an ounce of pure powdered saxolite at your druggist's, and a half pint of witch hazel, mix the two and bathe your face in the liquid. This at once tightens the skin and solidifies the underlying tissues—which, of course, smooths out the lines and draws in the sagging skin. It also stimulates capillary circulation, bringing natural color to faded cheeks.

Los Angeles

THE proposed government operation of railroads during the period of the war mean greater efficiency and mean that the farmer of Angeles and Southern California will have a better opportunity to get his goods East, according to those traffic experts who favor the move.

It is expected that President Wilson will ask Congress this week to take over the war-time operation of the rail carriers. This, it is said, will eliminate all competition among the railroads that operate 260,000 miles of road in the United States; will mean maximum efficiency, the elimination of many "palatial" passenger trains, curtailing of all passenger schedules, increasing all freight schedules, and the [illegible] of freight trains ahead of all others, with the exception of trains carrying troops.

THE OTHER SIDE.

While it appears to be generally conceded that this move will relieve the freight congestion [illegible], F. P. Gregson, traffic manager of the Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles, and a recognized traffic expert, is inclined to criticise the scheme.

"If President Wilson wants something done in a traffic way let him tell the railroads what it is and then they will do it," said Mr. Gregson, suggesting an alternative to government operation.

"For example, let the President tell the railroads to stop favoring certain ports. There are more than 3600 freight cars tied up in San Francisco because there are not sufficient warehouses to store the goods awaiting shipment by water. Let the President order that these cars be sent to Los Angeles. We can unload them, store the goods, the cars can be sent East immediately, filled with foodstuffs, and the ships can call here and collect their cargo.

"Apply the same situation in the East and you have the whole problem solved. Why send everything to New York? There are a dozen ports equally as good. Why not send all of our stuff to Galveston and New Orleans? There are excellent ports on the Pacific Coast. Why tie up everything in San Francisco?

"The cattlemen want meatless day lifted in this State for one month because they say they cannot send their product East, and therefore it will go to waste. Let them tell me when and where they want the meat shipped East and it will be done.

"We have plenty of refrigerator cars, and there is no tie-up in the West. All of the congestion is east of Chicago. And all of this is due to the fact that all railroads are favoring the port of New York.

All Sides of a Big Question.

HAT WILL BE EFFECT OF GOVERNMENT OPERATION OF RAILROADS ON CALIFORNIA, WAR-TIME LARDER OF THE ENTIRE UNITED STATES?

s of Local Traffic Experts, Shippers, Growers, Railway Officials and Others at Variance—Believed by Many a Solution of the Car Shortage Congestion, Rate and Labor Problems—Will Cost the State Five Million Dollars a Year in Taxes Lost—What the Roads are Doing in Los Angeles to Meet Huge Demands.

ALIFORNIA has beome the war-time food larder for the entire United States. During 1917 a total of 260,000 cars of soil products have been shipped from this State. A few years ago 50,000 was the high record. California is now sending foodstuffs East at the rate of 220,000 tons a month. There are now 289 canneries in the State and the output surpasses all other States in the Union.

There is no freight congestion in the West, according to F. P. Gregson, traffic manager of the Associated Jobbers' of Los Angeles. The tie-up is all east of Chicago. This is due, he says, to the fact that the ilroads are all favoring the port of New York. He suggests that other eastern ports be utilized. The same holds true on the Pacific Coast, he says. A total of 3600 freight cars have been tied up in San Francisco for nths because there are no adequate storage facilities. He suggests sending these cars to the Port of Los Angeles, where they could be emptied immediately and the cars sent East with fresh foodstuffs.

All of the conis east of Chicago. And of this is due to the fact all railroads are favoring port of New York. California has led the whole in the matter of food production. During the current year we have shipped 260,000 cars of soil products. Only a few years ago 50,000 cars of soil products was our big record.

THE NATION'S LARDER.

"We are fast becoming the food supply of the United States. Each year sees a new product added to our long list. This year we have shipped nearly 500 cars of rice. That is something new. We now have 289 canneries in the State, and we are leading the United States in the amount of canned goods we put up.

"Now that we are going to get the brunt of the war in regard to sending our food East, it only remains for the railroad men to get together and relieve the abnormal congestion in the East. They should pay greater attention to operating than to financing. Let the President order something like that and he will accomplish wonders.

"Why do not we realize on our inland waterways? We have been spending billions for years, and now is the time to cash in on the money. We have been building rivers for ships. Let the rivers alone and build ships for the rivers. The Ohio and the Mississippi will relieve all the congestion in the entire East if river boats are provided and the shipments made to ports other than New York.

"The President should also order boats to carry freight on the coastwise service. Today the railroads are handling abnormal loads without aid of the usual coastwise aid."

SOUTHLAND'S PART.

California is now shipping foodstuffs East at the rate of 220,000 tons a month, according to Ralph P. Merritt, State Food Administrator. A large percentage of these shipments is being made from Southern California, and the bulk is in the form of perishable food.

G. Harold Powell, manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, who has charge of all perishable foodstuffs for the United States Food Administration, stated on his arrival here a few days ago that the policy of the Food Administration is to promote the perishable food industry and that there is a liberal car supply to handle these crops.

"We have answered in the affirmative to the question: Are perishables essential during the war?" said Mr. Powell. "The fundamental policy of the administration has been to see that these foods are used freely in lieu of foodstuffs that may be exported. There are no restrictions on handling perishable foodstuffs, and there is not likely to be."

Railroad men assert that the government will not be able to handle the railroad business as well as would the heads of the transcontinental lines, providing the carriers were permitted to pool their shipping. Pooling is forbidden by the anti-trust laws, and the railroads are asking that such pooling be permitted during the war period.

THE LABOR SIDE.

Local traffic men state that the real incentive for government operation at this time is to give the government a strangle hold on the labor situation. The railroads have asked for a 15 per cent. increase in freight rates. The union employees have taken advantage of this to ask for a wage increase of 40 per cent.

The 15 per cent. increase asked for by the rail carriers is to meet the increased labor cost necessitated by the eight-hour day. If the 40 per cent. increase in wages is granted, the railroads will have to get another increase in freight rates to meet the added expense.

The situation has become so complicated that the government sees only one way out—that is for government ownership of the carriers and the conscription of labor, if necessary.

AS TO VALUES.

Holders of railway stock will have no immediate cause for concern about loss of incomes, it is asserted. It is proposed that the same dividends shall be paid by the government as the stockholders received in 1914.

The California taxpayer has a special interest in the question of government ownership, however. The transcontinental lines pay to the State government about $5,000,000 a year in taxes. Under government operation no allowance is made for taxes. That goes to the government, but it leaves a hole of $5,000,000 a year in California's revenue that must be filled by local taxation.

Never before have the three main lines of the Southern Pacific, Salt Lake and Santa Fe systems carried such a tremendous amount of business, and never before has there been such a strenuous effort made on the part of the roads to keep up to the maximum capacity.

MAKE CARS HERE.

The Southern Pacific has solved its threatened car-shortage problem by beginning to manufacture freight cars in Los Angeles and San Francisco. A new freight car is turned out in the Los Angeles shops each hour of a ten-hour working day. Each month seven complete new freight trains are produced in the local yards, and this standard is being duplicated in the Sacramento shops.

More than $5,500,000 has been appropriated by the Southern Pacific for new freight cars, and at least 2500 of these cars will be constructed in the shops here. Supt. W. H. Whalen of the Southern Pacific says this will mean a new manufacturing industry for Southern California.

Delivery is now being received by the Santa Fe on an order of 1000 stock cars, 500 coal cars, 800 refrigerator cars, 500 tank cars and 200 extra cars for general service. At the beginning of the war, the Santa Fe turned over to the government a partly-filled order for forty-six new engines. It is now receiving delivery on an order for 160 new engines, of which forty-six are for the Pacific division.

The Salt Lake route, in addition to increasing its equipment in flat and box cars, is receiving delivery of 1600 steel gondola cars of fifty tons capacity each, for the handling of Utah coal. F. A. Wann, general traffic manager of the Salt Lake, says the operating capacity of that line is being increased about 20 per cent.

What the conditions under government operation will be is, of course, a matter of conjecture. The first result would be to eliminate about 1000 employees and the freight and passenger departments. Each railroad maintains a freight traffic department for the purpose of encouraging freight shipments over its lines. To this must be added the industrial agents, passenger agents and the local representatives of eastern lines.

Under government ownership all competition for freight and passenger traffic will cease. The routing of freight will be solely in the hands of Uncle Sam. There will be no encouragment of industry, no efforts to secure new manufacturing enterprises and no thought of building branch lines for feeders.

At the present time, it is pointed out, increases in wages and in price of materials have cut down materially the profits of the western roads, but the roads have not been deterred from increasing their freight carrying capacity.

BIG FIGURES.

Supt. Whalen of the Southern Pacific gives the following comparative figures, showing the freight carried by the Los Angeles division of the S. P.: In March, 1912 the local division handled 158,000,000 gross ton miles of freight. In March, 1917, it handled 173,000,000 gross ton miles of freight, and in October this increased to 309,000,000.

GREAT ARMIES OF MEN MOVED.

Railroads Transport Million and Half Troops Since August First.

Approximately 1,500,000 soldiers have been safely transported to training camps and embarkation points by the railroads of the United States since August 1, according to official figures made public by the Railroads' War Board of the government.

More than 500,000 of these men, state officials of the board, have made journeys necessitating overnight travel and have been moved in tourist or standard sleepers furnished by the Pullman Company.

One of the biggest and longest movement of men was the transportation of 8600 men from a training camp on the Pacific Coast to a point on the eastern coast, a distance of 3700 miles, in a little less than a week. The men traveled in sixteen sections, each section comprising twelve tourist cars and two baggage cars.

To expedite the movement of troops, an official of the Pullman Company was stationed in the office of the Quartermaster - General in Washington, where the work was directed.

To assure the safety of the men in transit, the railroads have adopted an average speed of twenty-five miles an hour for all troop trains except when freight cars, needed for the transportation of equipment, are included in the trains. The speed is then reduced to twenty miles an hour.

WOMEN HELP IN SOLVING HUGE TRAFFIC PROBLEMS.

Thousands Working on Eastern Railways, Says Official, Here.

EASTERN railroads are going to the limit in conserving energy, according to J. R. Kearny, assistant to the vice-president in charge of operations of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Mr. Kearny, who, until recently, was superintendent of transportation of the Baltimore and Ohio, is in Los Angeles for a brief vacation.

Eastern railroad companies are employing many thousands of women in their yards and shops, he said yesterday. They are reducing passenger service and dispensing with many of the luxuries of travel. Observation cars are being taken off first-class trains, and it is likely that dining cars will go also.

Mr. Kearny expressed the opinion that conditions on this Coast will not be so severe, as the chief burden of transporting men, munitions and supplies is at the Atlantic seaboard. He said that some eastern railroads will be called upon to use 75 per cent. of their capacity for government service.

The commandeering of steel steamers formerly in the coal-carrying trade has added to the burdens of the railroad, as now coal has to be carried by rail, according to Mr. Kearny.

The principal cause of increased railroad efficiency, Mr. Keagny says, is not so much the changes in individual systems, but the co-operation and co-ordination of all railroads working under the supervision of the Washington advisory board. The letters on freight cars no longer mean anything. Cars are used to the best advantage, no matter what road owns them. Time used in switching has been cut 50 per cent. Passenger trains are run less frequently, so that locomotives no longer haul empty seats.

There are not men enough to fill the jobs in the East, Mr. Kearny declared. The Baltimore and Ohio road employs several thousand women, wiping engines, watching grade crossings, checking baggage and reclaiming waste.

The biggest machine in the Baltimore shops, a lathe, is being operated by a slip of a wom-

WILL BEAR WATCHING. Chief Justice White of the Supreme Court scathingly rebuked an attorney who argued against the constitutionality of the draft law. It is deplorable that Justice White's criticism should have been necessary, but his action is commendable. Those attorneys who would place questionable and ridiculous technicalities in the way of their country's defense in time of national danger are a disgrace to their profession and are laying themselves open to the suspicion of all loyal citizens.

THE ONE BIG MAN. It is good to note that the United States government is exhibiting every attempt to be honest with itself and with the people of the country. The few disloyal ones, in both high and low places, are being held to strict accountability for their every word and act. Uncle Sam is proving himself bigger than any man who lives within the borders of his domain. The political grafter today who tries to use his influence or position for selfish purposes must be indeed a clever schemer to "get away with it."

GOOD NEWS. The United States government is seriously considering the establishment of an aviation base near Los Angeles to cost 2,000,000 and providing for about 2000 student aviators. Southern California has never failed, and will never fail, to do its part in the contribution of men and money for the cause of democracy, and, considering the fact that there are numerous ideal locations for the establishment of an aviation base in this section, it would be no more than fair that the Southland should be favored by the government in this respect.

SPANKING AND SHOOTING. Hip pockets should not be placed on boys' pantaloons, for boys will fill hip pockets with substances which may interfere with the enforcement of discipline. A schoolma'am who smote a cigarette-smoking boy on his southern terminal with a wooden ruler ignited a bunch of matches in his hip pocket and produced conditions which necessitated a patch and required that the boy should for a time take his meals standing.

Another boy who had been reading the blood-curdling narrative of "Jimmy, the Boy Demon of the Rio Grande," carried a toy pistol in his rear pocket. His stern parent had occasion to give him a stern lesson in the woodshed with a heavy shingle. There was no bullet in the pistol, but there was some fulminating powder, the explosion of which made the father suspect that some German spy had been proceeding to extremities and caused the boy to feel as if some railroad-hating Governor had been practicing calisthenics upon him.

"KULTURED" DEVILS. The famous German scientist, Prof. Haeckel, makes the following statement: "One single German warrior of those who are, alas, falling in thousands represents a higher intellectual and moral life value than hundreds of raw children of nature whom England and France and Russia and Italy opposed to us."

Haeckel in his works denies the immortality of the soul, the freedom of the will and the existence of a personal God. He claims that just as the highest animals have been evolved from the simplest forms of life, so the highest faculties of the human mind have been evolved from the soul of the brute-beasts, and more remotely from the simple cell-soul of the "unicellular Protozoa."

The Times will not deny that the Kaiser was evolved from a tiger and that Haeckel himself was evolved from a combination between a "unicellular Protozoa" and an ass, but it is unable to concede the "high intellectual and moral life value" of German soldiers who burn cathedrals and art galleries, murder prisoners and rape women.

Adolph Deissman, professor of New Testament exegesis in the University of Berlin, differs entirely from Haeckel with respect to the origin of man and the existence of a God, but agrees with him that the duty of the German soldier is to rob and murder enemies. He says—referring to the Allies: "What they call barbarism history will call primitive strength. We proclaim—no, we do not proclaim it, but it reveals itself—the religion of strength."

That's a nice professor of New Testament exegesis, isn't it?

Prof. Karl A. Kuhn of Charlottenburg is another German scientist and teacher. He says: "Must kultur rear its domes over mountains of corpses, oceans of tears and the death rattle of the conquered? Yes, it must. The might of the conqueror is the highest law before which the conquered must bow."

The teachings of German "kultur" have strewn the fields of Belgium, France, Serbia, Rumania, Poland and Macedonia with millions of corpses and made ash heaps of hundreds of thousands of homes. Surely there should be no peace with these devils except a peace by conquest and the extirpation of William Hohenzollern and his [illegible] Bands.

AMERICAN OPPORTUNITY.

I.

ALTHOUGH this war has created an indelible distrust of and hatred for Germany and her vassals, it has almost miraculously unified races and nations that have for long centuries been unfriendly when not open enemies, and it has brought into trustworthy understanding other nations that have long regarded war as inevitable between them at some more or less distant date.

So it is that whoever speaks slightingly of any one of the Allies, speaks slightingly of America. No American can with honor say, as many of them have said: "I'm patriotic and all that, but I wouldn't trust England;" or "The Japs are playing a crafty game—just waiting for a chance to jump us;" or "The French are only after revenge—why should we fight to give them Alsace?" Scratch such a "patriot" and you will find not a Tartar, but a Hun.

The blessings that grow out of war are precious because they are obtained with great sacrifices; and the greatest of those blessings from this war will be the mutual friendships established between potentially antagonistic nations. The representatives of Britain, France, Italy, Japan, China, and America are getting acquainted—not across a diplomatic table, where each doesn't dare be himself or say what he thinks, but as Allies, making common cause against a barbarous enemy. The nations are learning to be human, to put their prides into their pockets and, instead of looking suspiciously at each success and advantage gained by another, to rejoice and to applaud, as all applauded the French at the Marne and at Verdun, the British at Jutland and Cambrai and Jerusalem, the Japanese at Vladivostok, the Italians at the Piave.

The spirit of co-operation, of unity, now inspiring the Allies in their exhaustive war against a common enemy, has removed the barriers which have hitherto prevented nations from becoming intimately acquainted. Those barriers have been formality and suspicion, inevitably present when diplomats meet merely to see which can best the others in some treaty or deal; but now they meet and plan to best no one but Germany, the world's foe.

II.

INSTEAD of being jealous of the leadership that is coming to America in much of the war work, the other nations have not only made the way easy, but have given encouragement and assistance. It was more than the selfish joy at receiving help that set England wild with enthusiasm when the Yankee boys marched through the streets of London, when the people of Paris strewed their streets with flowers. It was generous in the extreme of Gen. Byng to emphasize in the dispatches the work done by American engineers at Cambrai. It has been confidence-inspiring on the part of the English and French to give our boys so much time behind the lines in training and to gradually work them into the front line trenches. Of course, that training was given in order that they would be better equipped for the war and the more readily distinguish themselves; but the point is that jealous Allies would not have wished American troops to distinguish themselves; and what we have been saying is that the Allies are developing a fine friendship and a fine co-operation and a fine sympathy that will endure long after this war is over.

It may be some time before American generals will undertake an independent offensive. It would be folly for Pershing, or any other man whose life had been spent in service where 10,000 soldiers was considered an army and the war conditions were wholly different from those in Europe, to pit himself hastily against the veteran strategists of Germany. American generals have more to learn than American privates; and the privates, the young officers, too, have the most optimistic future. The chiefs in command cannot go further up; they can only hold their own, or fall. A mistake, their own or a subordinate's, and they fall like Von Moltke, or are removed and "promoted" to an advisory capacity like Sir John French, Joffre and Cadorna.

III.

AND in this war it is not the academic officers that are surest of promotion. Since our Civil War commissions have been granted to enlisted men only when they passed examinations with pen and ink, showed themselves to be competent spellers and letter perfect in grammar. Now the need is for war-brains. England has, one might say, almost for centuries, been very particular about the family connections and social attachments of her officers; France, too, has granted commissions only to those who added other qualities to the supposititious military capacity. But all that has been changed in this war. Once again, as in Napoleon's day, each private carries a marshal's baton in his knapsack. The colonel of one of the Canadian regiments was three years ago a private who scarcely had a military term in his vocabulary. One of the generals on Haig's staff is a lad of 30 who went into the war a raw subaltern, and probably now doesn't know much about spelling, but has shown himself to have war-brains.

Innumerable soldiers, privates and noncommissioned officers, have been boosted up the ladder, not only because they are brave—bravery is expected of each soldier—but because they have shown themselves to be quick, accurate thinkers, men who use their heads as well as their trigger fingers. Aye, and men who have first proved their ability to command by the respect with which they received orders and the decisiveness with which they executed them. Officers are needed, not men polished in language, not elegant dancers fit to grace a diplomat's staff.

It has been so in all wars, and we see no reason to expect this will be an exception. Off the field of battle come the men who, for the next twenty-five or more years, will direct the destiny of their country, not only in war, but in politics and commerce. War is the testing ground. So recently as the Spanish-American War the late Gen. Funston was a foot-loose adventurer. But he had war-brains and rapidly rose to the highest position in active service. Following the Civil War the Presidents, the Congressmen, the Senators, as well as the generals, were almost entirely selected from among those who had proved themselves in battle.

There are no limits to the heights which a man may scale when nations are at war. All the old, restricting conventions are broken down. A man is a man, not a family connection; it is individual initiative and ability to win the confidence of fellow-soldiers and of his nation that counts, not his artistry at wire-pulling. In war time a soldier is jumped over the heads of his superiors, not because he happens to have a father-in-law on the Committee on Military Affairs, but because he has made victories. When France had been at war less than three months, Joffre had sent into retirement a dozen generals. Somebody had to take those generals' places, and somebody the places of those who became generals, and so on down the line. And before this war is over, American soldiers with names now obscurely scrawled on company rosters, unknown, mere infinitesmial units in a vast army, will have shot out from obscurity because they had the stuff in them that makes for promotion.

IV.

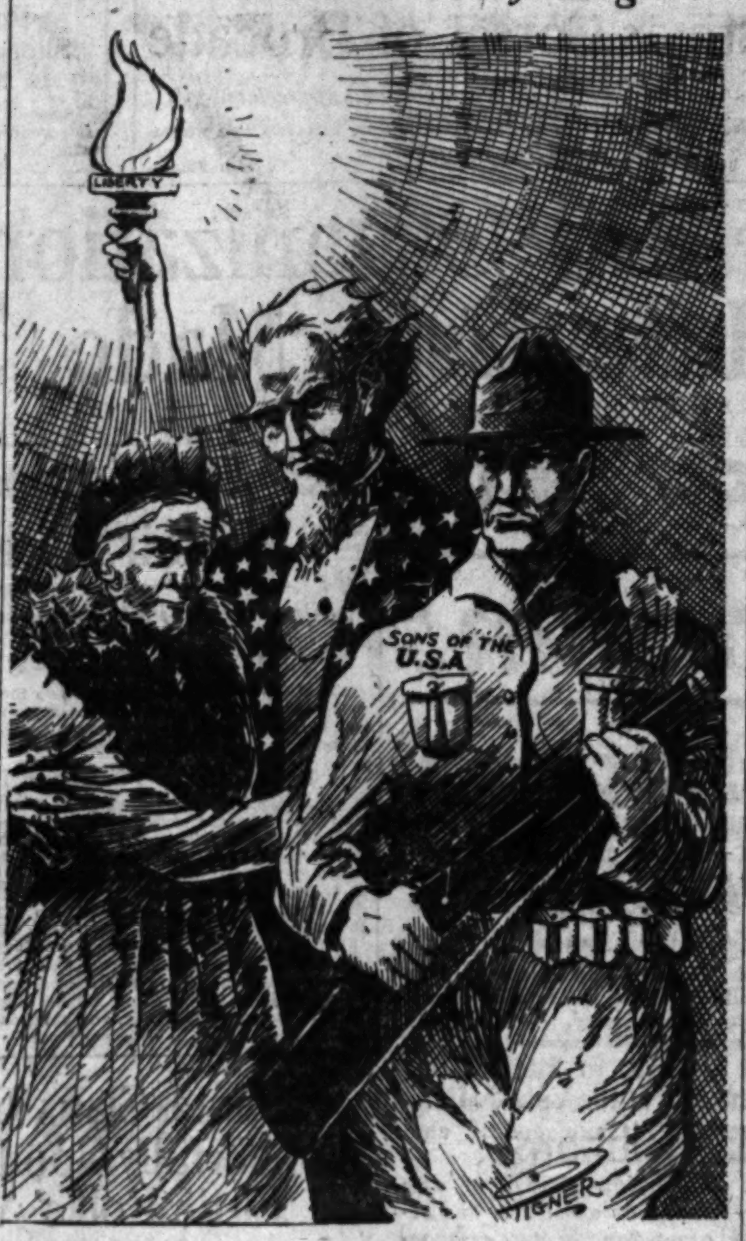
AND in the days that close this war it may be some American name, now obscure, that is hailed by the nation with gratitude and honor. Day dreaming? Remember, Grant was a tanner when the first shot was fired on Sumter. Remember, Funston was little more than a filibuster when the Maine was blown up. Remember, too, that Gen. Miles, the ranking officer of the Spanish-American War, came from the ranks by fighting—not by scribbling on an examination paper. America has no great military caste to draw from; she must, and gladly will, take her new generals from farmer lads or grocery clerks, from mechanics and stenographers, as she has taken her bankers and men of commerce from them.

Those men of commerce, those engineers, bankers and strategists in peaceful pursuits have already placed America in the leadership of the world. Our President was chosen as the spokesman to reply to the peace overtures from the Vatican; and it is America that has demanded that the Allies perfect their organization of co-operation and give to a centralized authority as complete as possible jurisdiction over the Allied economic and military forces. America does not ask for that authority for herself; she asks that it be established, and, of course, the interests of each nation will be represented and guarded.

But who is so blind as to fail to see that such a centralized authority will have in it the organism of international government? It will be the first time that great nations have ever even so faintly placed themselves under a co-operative authority that needs little more than a mere twist of a pen point to become a co-operative government of world-powers!

And with Germany crushed, with the Allied nations on the best of terms and painfully aware of war's horrible extravagance and folly, it is not unlikely that the dream of a world government, an international confederation, not to maintain a balance of power but a continuance of peace, will materialize. As America is the Mother of Republics, it is fitting that America should take the leadership in bringing about a Republic of World Powers.

For Freedom's Holy Light!



HIGHBROWS AND BUNK. Supposing the highbrows of Elizabeth's court could have glanced ahead and seen what was going to happen to Shakespeare's plays in the twentieth century? They would have had psychic epilepsy. Shakespeare was the Charley Chaplin of his day. He wrote and produced to entertain. He was held in contempt by the highbrows. It is venturing rashly and unnecessarily into prophecy to say that the comedians of our day will be hailed or even remembered in the future; but the point is that the highbrows, the better-than-thou intellectuals, look with scorn upon the comedians of stage and screen—upon the entertainers. The highbrows talk of improving oneself; the elite of the highbrows talk of "esthetics," which is a Grecianism for the same thing. Let them go to their records, the world's records, and they cannot show one "immortal" bit of poetry, drama or fiction that was not created to ENTERTAIN the period in which it was written. That is why it is immortal; it has entertained the people of other periods. Shakespeare has endured more because of "Falstaff" than because of "Hamlet." College professors wrangle over "Hamlet;" but people read the plays written around "Falstaff." And he who entertains is greater than he who delivers a lecture on the obscure origin of the curlecue tail of the letter "J."

THE WAY OF THE PHILISTINES. The Allies went by the old Way of the Philistines, by way of Shur that goes to Beersheba and Hebron, over the desert routes traveled by the caravans of Abraham, Jacob and Joseph—a journey that has been watered by the blood of countless emperors and kings—went to the very gates of Jerusalem, the city holy to Christian, Jew and Mohammedan alike.

On the immortal soil of the Holy Land David fought his way to Jerusalem. He smote many a king under the fifth rib and laid low many thousand of his enemies before the Ark of the Covenant rested in peace on Zion's top.

How many associations gather around the historic places—Hebron, where David, the wanderer, the singer, the king and the founder of the Holy City, spread his tents; where his songs were sung and the foundations of his empire were first laid; Gath, where Goliath was met and conquered; the Cave of Adullam, where David fled, like Ishmael, with every man's hand against him, but through all of his tribulations holding fast to his faith in Jehovah; Bethlehem, the birthplace of both the Christ and David, where the latter wandered as a boy, for he was descended from Rahab, the Canaanite, and Ruth, the Moabitess, she "who stood amid the alien corn;" the well at Bethlehem, whose waters David loved better than any in Israel, and a host of other places well known in sacred history!

Mighty engines of modern war are rumbling through the land made famous to Bible readers, the land that has been fought over by Egyptians, Babylonians, Romans, Persians, Saracens, Crusaders and Turks, and the songs of the Land of Tipperary are mingled with the memories of the songs sung by David, and his most plaintive psalm, the fifty-sixth, where he cries, "Be merciful to me, O God, for man would swallow me up; he fighting daily oppresseth me; mine enemies would swallow me up, for they be many who fight against me, O thou most high."

How it must thrill the Christian soldier as he reads in his Bible placed in his kit by loving hands far overseas that he is in the land where the spies of Moses sought out the Promised Land; where David was anointed king, first over Judea, then over all Israel; where Absalom conspired to secure the throne, and where, many years later, Judas Maccabeus captured Hebron from the Edomites and again the Romans stormed its walls, almost within sight of the Mount of Olives and Gethsemane, having passed Beersheba where were the wells that succored Hagar and Ishmael and watered the flocks of Abraham, and where Jacob saw in the vision the ladder that was trodden by angelic feet.

For God is marching on!

The story of David's three captains is the narrative in a few lines of an exploit never equaled in the annals of time. Remember it in First Chronicles, ii:15-19:

> Now three of the thirty captains went down to the rock to David into the Cave of Adullam; and the hosts of the Philistines encamped in the Valley of Rephaim. And David was then in the hold and the Philistine garrison was then at Bethlehem. And David longed and said, O that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem that is at the gate. And the three brake through the host of Philistines and drew water out of the well of Bethlehem that was at the gate and took it and brought it to David, but David would not drink of it, but poured it out to the Lord, and said, My God forbid it me that I should do this thing; shall I drink the blood of these men that have put their lives in jeopardy, for with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it? Therefore he would not drink it. These things did these mightiest.

The men of Thermopylae, Marathon and other historic places later on gave the world examples of sacrifice and bravery, but Abishai, the brother of Joab, who was chief of the three, set the precedent.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

EASY PATRIOTISM.

You undergo no grievous strain when you observe a meatless day; so don't get all swelled up and vain because you shooed the steak away. I hear so many people boast of little self-denying tricks; because they did without a roast they think they're heroes, dandies, bricks. And one man has a swollen head, his Sunday hat it has outgrown, because he cut out wheaten bread and filled himself with hot corn pone. Great Scott! Before this war is done, before Red Bill's an also ran, we may be thankful for a bun composed of sawdust, hay and bran. Oh, let us take ourselves abroad, and tell the starving people there how we have felt privation's prod by cutting down the bill of fare. Let us address the Belgians gaunt and say, "Your sympathy we seek; we, too, have known the pangs of want—we've cut out beef one meal a week. Our children cry for wheaten bread, appeal to us with streaming eyes, and they must hungry go to bed because we've naught for them but pies. We've sounded all the depths of grief, we've known all throes that men may feel, for once a week we cut out beef and eat some fish instead of veal." Then would the Belgians realize what anguish with the bark an means, and they would say, "These hungry guys may have our share of pork and beans."

I GUESS SO.

BY CHARLES F. LUMMIS.

The English Language is the most remarkable musical instrument in the world. It has more "range" than even the violin, with more flexibility, more overtones and undertones and shading. Paderewski at the piano is a mere tyro to Shakespeare or Milton when they sit down to the Eternal Organ of Our Speech. And the Wonder of this Chiefest Music is that it Never Dies. Nor even Fades. You hear Caruso, Paderewski, even Ysaye. You HAVE HEARD! All your life you will be richer for the evanescent notes that glorified your momentary ear. But you cannot SAVE one note of it. It is a Memory, not a Possession. You cannot embalm one throb of that ecstacy which obsessed you. On the other hand, while you did not hear Homer or Milton or Shakespeare, you can keep just as much of them as you ever had. Their words are the same. You knew them first and shall ever know them. No War can Wound them. No Politics can ever make them less than our Foundation. They are as safe in our memory, and as unchanging, as flies in amber, made imperishable and changeless.

ART is the only thing in the world that LASTS. Music is perhaps—yes, sure—its most thrilling form. Nothing for the moment so stirs and betters us as great music. But it is, as Tom Moore said, "Fled as soon as shed."

Painting and Sculpture have no such excruciating thrill—but they last incomparably longer. This is a world of Compensation.

And Literature—the slowest of all the Arts to Inflame us, is the one that longest keeps us warm. It is not a wild note on the forgetful ear of night, nor yet a perishable canvas. Printing is as near Immortality as man has ever come—and as near Damnation! Half that is printed should be burned at the stake—with the authors on top!

But Art is the Flower not only, but the very Immortality of Life. Music painting and literature—it makes no odds. All of them outlast—and therefore are more important than—War or Business. You can't tell to save your life who was the biggest banker in England in Shakespeare's day; nor who was King when Homer wrote. Do you know—or do you care a whoop who was Monarch when blind John Milton penned the "Paradise Lost?" Tell me off-hand who was President of this United States when Whittier, Holmes, Lowell and Garrison were thundering for Freedom!

Talking only the other night with Ysaye—the world's greatest violinist and one of its Big Men as well—we were happily agreed that Art is Art. It notices no Geography. Time and place are unknown of it. The artist cares not whether a picture, a poem, a song or an opera was made in Berlin, Prague, Petrograd, Rome, Paris, London or Kokomo. All that concerns him is whether it's "Good Stuff."

The "Hundred-Years War" is the longest we recall—and what, by the way, do you recall of that? Who today remembers the date of Pickett's Charge or any other gallantry of that Our Civil War of which I knew something while it was going on? But do you remember "Suwanee River" and "Marching Through Georgia" and "John Brown's Body," by-children of that same war?

Art has no Nationality. It's like Truth—if True, it's true; if false, it's a Lie—wherever made.

Some minds never make a noise in the world till they pop forth with a SQUEAK on the face of a crisis. They mind us of Robert Louis Stevenson's

> "A Blue-Behinded Ape, I skip
> Among the trees of Paradise."

And the higher they go, the more they show the Seat of their Intellect.

War has been, in some form, the Muscle-Maker of Man ever since Man began. For several hundred thousand years Plato's "Featherless Biped" has been fighting either his Brother Man or his Mother Nature. I fancy he always will. The "Irridescent Dream" (as Senator Ingalls had it) of Universal Peace is for a Dream—and about as likely to come true as the Abolishment of Competition in Business. Perhaps as undesirable!

David Starr Jordan is no Pacifist, but a real Apostle of Peace—the heaviest artillery we have ever had on the side of the universal wish for no more wars; for time and ease to live and learn and love. He is also Godfather of my 17-year-old Boy, now second lieutenant in his military academy. And when the lad came in with his tall-tale chevrons, Dr. Jordan (this was two years ago) said: "What! Are you raising him to be a Soldier?"

"No," said I. "I'm raising him to be FIT to be a soldier. What little I know of History tells me that when a Nation ceases to Raise Soldiers, it Raises Sissies!"

And I hope one result of this splendid answer of our spoiled and unready youth to their country's need will be Compulsory, Universal Military Training. I hope that American boys of the next generation will have to learn to walk upright, act upright, Know Discipline—even as they are now compelled to learn "the three R's." I would like to see every lad I meet on the sidewalks of an American city walking with that physical self-respect which nothing in the world gives except "Military Training." It doesn't make them truculent nor bullying nor bloodthirsty. On the contrary! It teaches them what the Home no longer teaches—on the average—Respect, Poise, Self-Control. It doesn't do away with Human Nature. It doesn't make Paragons—nor Dodecahedrons. But it does make Men!

Whether we fight or Frivol, the Main Object of Life is to LIVE. Which includes Learning, Loving and Projecting ourselves to another step of the Generations.

With both Christmas and New Year falling on meatless day we shall have to restrict our menu to turkey. Oh, hard luck!

In addition to this, the legal advisory board has made the following statement for publication:

"The questionnaire is a complicated document. An army of lawyers working by relays will donate their services to registrants during the entire period of registration.

"One thing that all men within the present draft should know and which many do not understand is that no attorney working as a member of the legal advisory board will make any charge for the service.

LAWYERS NEEDED.

"Another matter to be made clear is that attorneys in order that they may have authority to act as an associate member of this board and to advise registrants must take the required oath and be assigned to duty through this board.

"The lawyers are responding splendidly. Had they done so sooner, we would have been able to do more efficient work during the first few days of the period, but the work will be done, anyway. In some districts we are still in need of the services of more lawyers.

"About 210 attorneys will need to be in constant service throughout the county. There is need for every lawyer to do his bit and at least 1000 attorneys should give a part of their time, and a substantial part in order that the work may be given proper care.

"The following have been named as secretaries of their districts and each will be primarily responsible for his district and to act in conjunction with headquarters at room 502, Chamber of Commerce Building:

The guards from the naval training station carry regulation clubs and those from the submarine base have automatic pistols. Any intoxicated man in uniform who is caught on the streets or any man who should be in uniform will be arrested and turned over to the authorities at their respective posts.

That there may be plenty of recreation for the men, an army and navy club for enlisted men is soon to be established at the harbor, to be operated in conjunction with the one in the Trinity Hotel in Los Angeles. Charles Lloyd, representing the War Department in national war camp recreation work, has approved the lease taken in the Patterson Building at the corner of Sixth and Center streets, San Pedro. The committee that made the decision to establish a branch at the harbor included J. M. GREAT FLEET COMING.

Monster Liners Between Coast and Far East; Angelenos Booked for Orient.

Twelve more big Japanese liners will be operating between Pacific Coast ports and the Orient by the fall of 1918, according to D. F. Robertson, local agent of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha and the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Steamship lines. One of these vessels, the San Francisco Maru, will be the largest ship in the Pacific, and by far the finest and the fastest.

Mr. Robertson says that the Pacific route is now safe to such an extent that travelers, who had previously made tours to Europe and Egypt, are now journeying across the ocean to Honolulu, Japan and the Philippines.

The new liner Shinyo Maru, a vessel of 22,000 tons, will leave San Francisco for Honolulu and the Orient December 28, and among the passengers from Los Angeles will be Mrs. A. de Celis and son, Mrs. Florence Heywang and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. George Middleson and a party of twenty-five prominent Los Angeles Japanese.

Anticipating a rush, he has arranged to keep the marriage license bureau open on the Sunday before Christmas from 8 to 11 o'clock. Only soldiers will be accommodated, he declared. Mr. Sparks has just returned from Camp Kearny.

FOUND GUILTY OF SCHEME TO DEFRAUD.

JURY IN FEDERAL COURT RETURNS VERDICT AGAINST W. W. PRICE.

A record for speed was made in the local Federal court yesterday, when W. W. Price, alias Dr. O. J. Osborn, was convicted of using the mails to refraud, less than twenty-four hours passing from the impaneling of the jury till the judgment was rendered. The jury recommended the young man to the mercy of the court. He will be sentenced tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The charge against Price was that he, with Mrs. Jessie A. Chan, had used the mails to secure money from A. F. Chan, former husband of the woman, and Thomas Vehawn, both of Lewiston, Mont., to pay the fee of the alleged Osborn, who was represented as being a physician who had treated a child of Mrs. Chan by a former husband. Price and the woman were arrested living as husband and wife in an apartment on South Figueroa street.

At the trial the woman went to the rescue of her sweetheart and declared that she had written the letters to her former husband and her father demanding the money, $45, and that Price had afterward copied them. When the jury found Price guilty, she gave way to an uncontrollable spell of weeping.

The testimony showed that Mrs. Chan had left her husband in Lewiston, with one Harold Houser, whom she later deserted for Price, who at the time was living at the Sherman Hotel in this city.

After Mrs. Chan had deserted her husband, he brought an action for divorce in the Montana courts, and subsequent to the arrest of the pair in this city, secured a decree that gave him the custody of the child, Alice, who was supposed to be ill here.

—because it is overwhelmingly the BEST—literally the ONLY instrument that really REPRODUCES!

WITH any and ALL other makes of phonographs unreservedly open to us for sale, we have eliminated all but the NEW EDISON, staking our financial success as well as our musical judgment upon this ONE instrument.

The NEW EDISON claim to superiority is not based on empty advertising "talking points" cleverly represented—but upon one of the most wonderful inventions ever made by the greatest inventive genius that ever lived—an invention that all but duplicates the human throat.

This marvelous invention, the secret of "Music's Re-Creation," is the NEW EDISON Reproducer, by which Mr. Edison has succeeded, after five years' experimenting and $2,000,000 expenditure, in completely eliminating the blight of mechanics—the tell-tale twang of the "talking machine."

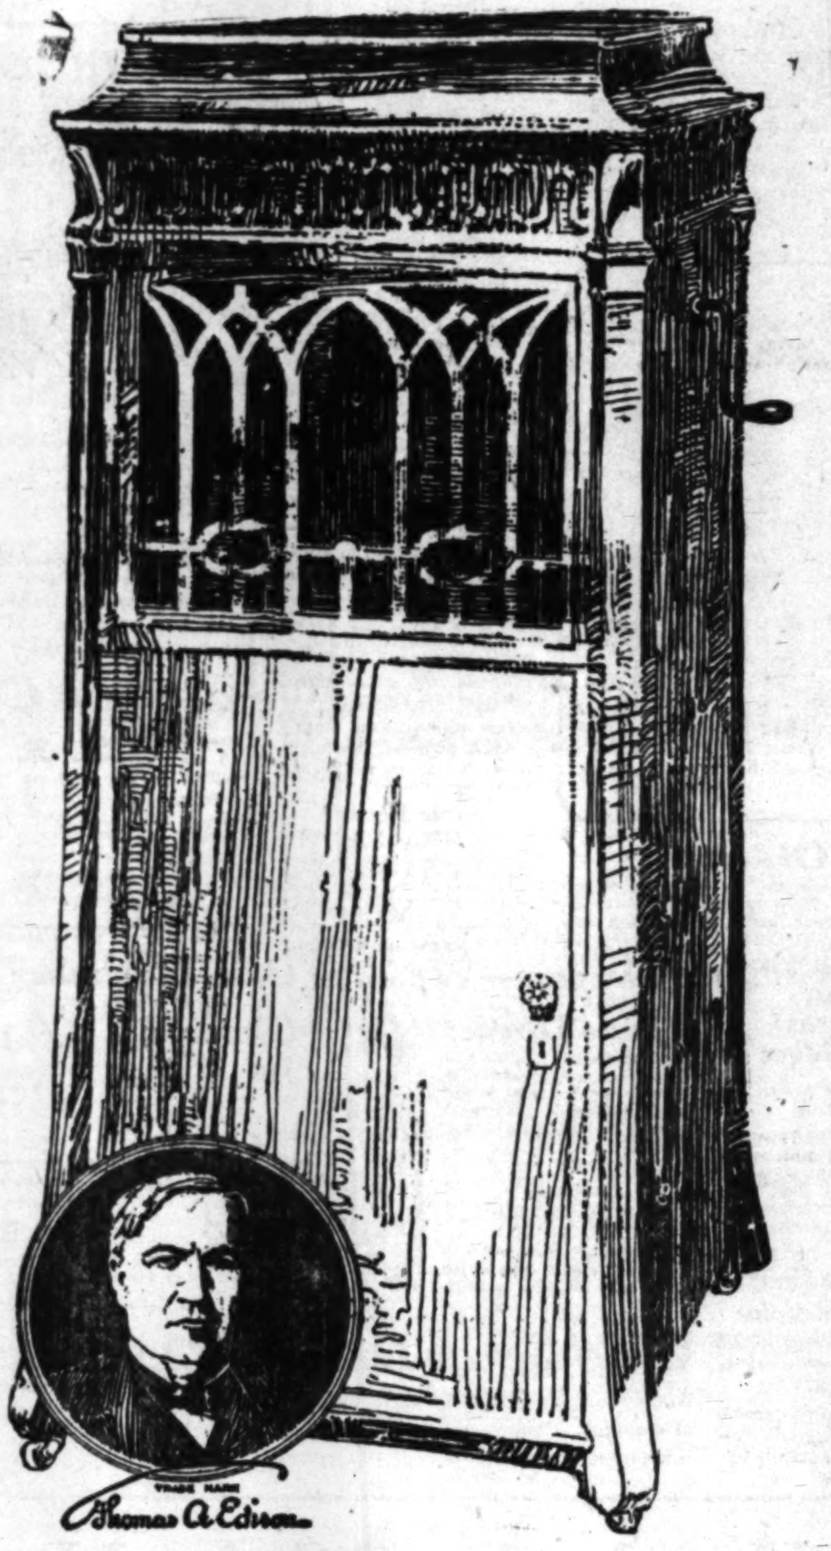
The Difference Between the NEW EDISON and a "Talking Machine"

The "talking machine" reproducer is made of steel and mica, with their metallic resonance. The result is metallic and mechanical.

The NEW EDISON Reproducer is made exclusively of non-metallic substances—diamond, silk, cork and vegetable texture—the result is tone as pure and lifelike as the original that came from the throat of the singer.

Why You Should Buy Your NEW EDISON Only at FITZGERALD'S

Why you should buy the NEW EDISON is plain—and will be plainer when you hear the instrument. But there is an equally good reason why you should buy the NEW EDISON only at FITZGERALD'S.



This firm is the largest exclusive Edison dealer in the Southwest, and as such can give you the very best terms, and has a larger stock of instruments of all grades and prices and a larger stock of the latest records for you to choose from.

Furthermore, the permanency and absolute trustworthiness of this big institution insures you absolute satisfaction not only at time of purchase, but in later years, because we give—

DRAFT DODGERS AT MAZATLAN ROB AND FIGHT TO GET FOOD.

THE slackers at Mazatlan, Mex., who left this country last June to avoid registering for military service in the United States, are in hard luck, according to information received yesterday by Collector of the Port Elliott.

Some time ago, Gen. Esteban Cantu, Governor of Lower California, taking cognizance of the presence of so many of the cowards within his jurisdiction, ordered a census to be taken of them, which had the effect of driving many from Mexicali and Ensenada, where they had been eking out a precarious existence, down to Mazatlan, on the coast, where they thought there would be a chance to get out of the country by steamer.

The information brought to the collector is that they are all but starving at Mazatlan, and that robberies are frequent by the slackers, who have become desperate in their hunt for food.

They have employed every artifice to get a bit of money, it is stated, and recently organized an athletic club where prize fights were held. In several instances the financial reward was considerable. But this condition lasted only a short time, for there were a number of real prize fighters among the local Mexican population, and the slackers who entered the ring were not only badly beaten, but the other fellow walked away with the purse, which covered about the entire amount taken in as admission fees.

With the American authorities watching for the coming of the dodgers on this end of the line, and the high cost of living still going up at Mazatlan, with no food conservator or price stabilizer in sight, their condition has become desperate.

The Mexican authorities, thinking no more of a slacker than loyal Americans do, have refused them succor, and just what they are going to do is undeveloped. It is proposed to arrest every man of the crowd who attempts to cross the boundary line, and some interesting developments are expected, as vessel owners have refused to have anything to do with them. There are several hundred in the colony, according to the latest reports, only a few having succeeded in making their escape by the ocean route.

DESIGNS STAMP FOR CAMP RELIEF FUND.

WOMEN OF BATTERY F AUXILIARY PRESENTED WITH NOVEL MONEY RAISER.

The treasury of the woman's auxiliary to Battery F, One Hundred and Forty-third Field Artillery, stationed at Camp Kearny, is scheduled to be enriched through the proceeds of the sale of a novel service stamp. Will A. Kistler, a commercial printer, whose son is a member of Battery F, designed the stamp, which is designed much after the service flags. He gave it outright to the auxiliary. The women relatives and friends of the battery boys, realizing that the sale of the stamps, printed in the national colors, will provide a nest-egg to enable them to purchase dainties and necessaries for the hero members of their families, are planning a campaign.

At their meeting held in the auxiliary headquarters, 426 Metropolitan Building, yesterday, Miss Flora Buneman and her committee added the finishing touches to the dance and card party to be given Tuesday night at the Abbey Hotel, Eighth and Figueroa streets. A musical programme has been added.

The proceeds are to be expended in purchasing socks for the army.

On Thursday night the auxiliary will conduct a drive for jellies, jams, honey and preserves to be sent to Camp Kearny for Christmas.

BIG FREIGHTER LAUNCHED IN WORLD-RECORD TIME.

SLIDING gracefully down the ways in exactly sixty days after her keel was laid, the new 8800 steel merchant ship Accomac, built for the United States government, was launched at a Pacific port yesterday. Her launching is believed to set a new world's record for rapid construction of big vessels.

The new vessel was christened by Mrs. William D. Stephens, wife of the Governor, the name being selected by the wife of President Wilson and being taken from a county in West Virginia. Among the very few persons who were present at the launching, besides stockholders of the construction company, was Capt. A. F. Pillsbury, representing the United States Shipbuilding Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation. An armed guard of soldiers with fixed bayonets guarded the entrance to the yard.

Further details of this important event are withheld at the specific request of the government's representatives.

Within five minutes after the launching, which took place at 9:29 a.m., work was begun on the keel of a sister ship of the Accomac, which it is expected will be ready for launching in the same quick time. The vessels are of the standardized type of freighter being built in large numbers at different yards for the government.

STORAGE HOUSES PLAN BETTER FIRE PROTECTI

THE importance of fire protection in connection with the conservation of food under the national policy was outlined at a meeting of owners of food storage houses in Los Angeles county, held in the rooms of the Board of Equalization yesterday. The meeting was called by John J. Hamilton, chairman of the Committee on Food Conservation and Production, who explained that it is the custom of the County Council of Defense committees to appoint subcommittees to handle specific problems in their allied industries.

A general discussion took place relative to the various methods of protecting storage houses from fire and the consequent loss of provisions. Capt. C. J. COLUMBUS KNIGHTS START IN EARNEST.

WORK OUTLINED FOR WAR FUNDS IS FOR SPIRITUAL AID FOR CATHOLIC SOLDIERS.

The war camp fund drive of the Knights of Columbus has started in earnest, following its introduction by the Rt. Rev. John J. Cantwell.

The several committees are actively at work among the business and professional men of the city, and in each parish separate committees will have the work in hand. The Catholic Women's Club, under the leadership of Mrs. E. C. Higgins, has volunteered its active co-operation, and committees from this organization will devote their time next week in an endeavor to make an unqualified success of the drive. The collections taken up in all of the Catholic churches of this city today will be devoted to this purpose.

The purpose of the drive is to procure funds to enable the continuance of the welfare work that has been instituted at the various camps throughout the United States under the sanction of the government, and known as the "Knights of Columbus War Camp Fund." The benefits of this fund are extended to all enlisted men without respect to their religious affiliations and is conducted on the same general lines as is the welfare work of the Y.M.C.A., who are looking after the spiritual comfort of those of other faiths.

The work in hand should appeal to all broad-minded people who have the interests of our soldiers and sailors at heart.

Headquarters are in room 521, Laughlin Building, where subscriptions may be made, or to any bank, or to John P. Burke at First National Bank.

Robert L. McFarland was granted a decree of divorce by Judge Wood yesterday from Letta J. McFarland. Some time ago Mr. McFarland sued William H. Meanwhile, Mrs. McFarland brought suit for separate maintenance. Neither this action nor the lost-love suit was pressed.

KEARNY DIVISION HOPING TO BE OF FIRST TO LEAVE FOR FRANCE.

Speeding up of Intensive Training Spurs the Ambition of Soldiers to Lead the National Army Forces to the European Battle Fields.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CAMP KEARNY, Dec. 15.—"How soon do we go to France?" is the question that is constantly asked now by the men of the Fortieth Division. Since the practice under real battle conditions—except for the casualties—began a week ago with big guns, hand grenades, gas masks, airplane fleets and other devices for the combating of frightfulness with frightfulness, the men have been on the keen edge of expectancy. Of course, no announcement on the subject will be made, nor would be printed if it were. The first the enemy will know about it will be when the troops are on the job.

Yet, like the mariner of old, who fixed his eye on the stellar light of the north, so does the soldier, the officer and everybody connected with the army here turn his eyes toward the battlefields of France, as the prospect of going across the big pond becomes ever brighter. The intimation by Brig.-Gen. Frederick S. Strong, when he resumed his command here last week, that the time may not be long now, has spurred the men to an anticipation which shows the spirit of the new-made soldiers.

While no one knows when the men of this division will entrain for the eastern seaboard, or where they will embark for the European front, there is strong hope that the Fortieth Division may be among the first of the land forces now in training that will go. Real intensive training has been in progress here for a longer time than at most of the other camps, and it is believed that the division now is a unit of sufficient proficiency to take up its final course behind the trenches in France and Belgium.

WELL TRAINED FORCE.

The trained officers of the French and British armies who have been co-operating with the officers of Uncle Sam's own trained forces, have accomplished wonders during the last week or two. These officers, who understand every phase of trench warfare and artillery preparation, of infantry attack and airplane observation, have been giving the recruits the full benefit of their wide experience. The mere matter of digging trenches, in which the Sammies attained proficiency some time ago, is not by any means so important as how to take advantage of the position of a trench, and this they have been learning in the recent maneuvers. Co-ordinating with the trench work are the arts—for that is what they are—of bomb and grenade throwing, infantry attack and the maneuvering of artillery.

As the great war has made over the map of Europe, an altered completely the conditions of warfare, so it has changed the methods of instruction, and the organization of the troops here has been changed in a manner that is the marvel of even the most radical soldier mind. New tricks of the war game have been learned, and no time is being wasted on unessentials. It is a war machine that has been evolved, but one with the power of individual intelligence and initiative still active in the humans who make it up.

EVERYBODY BUSY.

If any officer who sought and obtained a commission in the United States Army thought life would be just one social whirl after another, he has found himself mistaken and disillusioned here. This applies also to the private who thought the army a nice place to be to while away the time. If there are any such persons at Camp Kearny now nobody has been able to find them; everybody is too busy. Intensive training is not the old idea of the National Guard, the kind given at yearly concentration camps. In the talk of the street, "There is something doing every minute." The farmer who really starts out on intensive training utilizes every square inch of land and makes it produce. This, in a different sense, is the case with the army. Every minute counts.

If a soldier or officer is not working, he is resting, and that is part of the training. One has to rest in order to work. And that is the sentiment of the enlisted man and the officer.

A corporal and two privates of the New Mexico regiment expressed the opinion of the individual members of the whole division when they talked over the situation in the shade of a mess tent.

"I don't care where they send me, but I want to go," said a private.

The corporal had been in the service twelve years.

"You'll be dissatisfied wherever you go," he said.

"Maybe so," replied the private, "but I'll be doing something, and that's what we got to do to win this war."

The whole division realizes now that it is doing something.

SONG OF THE KNITTER.

A startling discovery was made recently by an officer of Battery C, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Field Artillery, which comes from Utah. He was passing by tent No. 1 when he heard strange commands issuing therefrom. These commands had a new ring, such as "Attention, knitters!" "Overstitch, one, two, three," and other strange jargon of the knitting school. It developed that Clyde T. Greene was in the act of teaching three husky Mormons to knit. There is a story back of the determination with which these needles were wielded. Lately he had received a pair of knitted socks from a girl friend. He indited a verse to her that ran like this:

"The stockings you sent me are surely some fit,
I use one for a helmet and one for a mit.
They will surely help me to do my bit,
But where the heck did you learn to knit?"

Then he went out and spent all his liberty days at a knitting school. Three companions saw his work, and now he is teaching R. B. Batson, Sergt. Norman J. Salisbury and W. H. Green. All the boys came from Logan, Utah.

MEETS AN OLD FRIEND.

An interesting incident occurred in the U. S. Grant lobby at San Diego yesterday, where Maj.-Gen. N. Habiki, the hero of many Japanese battles, who is visiting this country, was being introduced to San Diegans. Gen. Habiki was standing graciously acknowledging the introductions of numerous strangers, when suddenly his features lighted up as he saw the face of a friend, Arnold Kruckman, whom he had met in Japan. Mr. Kruckman, who is managing director of the San Diego Progress Commission, was wearing on his coat lapel a badge which Gen. Habiki himself had presented to him in Tokio three years ago in behalf of the Imperial Aero Order.

At that time Mr. Kruckman was aeronautical commissioner of the San Francisco exposition and was making a tour of the world. Gen. Habiki was appointed by the Japanese government to act as his host during his stay in Japan. Mr. and Mrs. Kruckman were guests of honor at a banquet given by Gen. Habiki in the famous Maple Leaf Club of Tokio and were entertained by him as only the orientals can during their stay in Japan.

Mr. Kruckman was not positive the distinguished visitor to San Diego was his former host, but pinned the decoration on his coat in the morning intending to attend the luncheon given in honor of the general. Mr. Kruckman was detained and was not at the luncheon, but as he passed through the hotel lobby there was no doubt in anyone's mind when the face of the general lighted up with such evident pleasure. Eagerly he told the American about other Japanese friends whom he had left in Japan and talked of the visit at that time.

WANT FRENCH OFFICERS' EFFECTS FREED OF DU

PROTEST has been made to John B. Elliott, collector of customs for the Port of Los Angeles, by the heads of local French societies against the collection of customs duties on the personal effects of French officers acting as military instructors for American troops.

Different regulations appear to apply on the east and west coasts. The French officers assert that the collector of the Port of New York gives franking privileges on all luggage and effects of French officers and that no duties are demanded or assessed against them. When the officers arrive at the ports of San Francisco, Los Angeles or San Diego, however, they are taxed the customary tariff duties on their uniforms and other effects.

Under present arrangements between the two republics, the French government charges no duty whatever on the personal effects of soldiers and officers of the American Army. But there is no reciprocity shown by the collectors of customs of the Pacific Coast. A [illegible] of 60 per cent. is [illegible] the uniforms of French [illegible] livered in California.

Rules of the Road.

BURDEN OF CARE IS ON AUTOISTS, COURT RU

NEW and interesting ground has been broken by Judge Bledsoe as to the rights of automobiles on the highway, in a charge just given to a jury at Fresno, in the case of Klein vs. the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway. As to the duty of an automobilist about to cross a railroad track, the court said:

"The exercise of the ordinary care required of the wayfarer upon the highway under such circumstances also requires a person to stop if necessary in order to look and listen. . . . The looking, listening and stopping, if necessity thus require, should be exercised at the last moment which ordinary prudence would dictate before passing from a place of safety to one of danger. If the ability either to look or listen be obstructed by natural or artificial objects, then the duty to stop before entering a zone of danger, in order that proper investigation might be made, becomes absolute.

"Those rules thus generally announced apply to any traveler upon a highway approaching a railroad crossing, whether on foot, or in a horsedrawn or other vehicle, and whether he be the driver of such vehicle or an invited guest therein.

"In addition, with respect to one driving or riding in an automobile, it may be said generally when approaching a point of apparent or possible danger, such automobile should be kept under such control as will enable the danger to be avoided should it become real or threatening."

In this ruling Judge Bledsoe goes far into the question of the responsibility of automobilists in crossing a railroad track, and places upon them the burden of what may happen if they disregard the [illegible] down by the court. Mr. Hoover's Right Idea

MR. HERBERT HOOVER, National Food Administrator, had the right idea when he recently said in an official statement: "Those who wish brewing entirely suppressed should bear in mind that if such a course were pursued THE COUNTRY WOULD BE PLACED UPON A WHISKEY BASIS entirely."

That is the Crux of the true temperance question which prohibitionists in their over-zealousness failed to see.

Mr. Hoover's statement was made in connection with his recommendation that, as a food conservation measure, the alcoholic contents of beer be reduced to 2¾ per cent.

In the brewing of beer, alcohol is not sought by the brewer, but is an incident to the process through natural fermentation.

The new 2¾ per cent. American beers will be similar to those so popular in Norway, Denmark and Sweden, where, on account of their low percentage of alcohol, they are classed among the true temperance drinks, and to encourage their consumption, ARE MADE TAX FREE.

Buys for Canteens.

W. W. Willis has been appointed official buyer for all the Y.M.C.A. canteens in the cantonment. He has had considerable experience along this line, and knows a bargain when he sees it.

Promotes Shows.

Edward Dougherty, who is serving with Battery A of the Grizzlies, is a volunteer promoter of high-class entertainments. He is very active securing attractions for the Knights of Columbus, and has landed some high-class talent.

Conlon to Entertain.

According to a muscle-bound rumor, Paul Hubert Conlon will soon appear at Camp Kearny at the head of his own vaudeville troupe. These troupers are unmounted, and ride on the cars. When not serving as a vaudeville impressario, or criticising a high-brow play as a "dramatik critik," Mr. Conlon writes soul-stirring accounts of Jack Doyle's four-round bouts under the nom de plume of "Scoop."

Changes Occupation.

Randolph Cook has entered Y.M.C.A. work here. He formerly was connected with the headquarters troop and military police in the capacity of chaplain. His duties are now those of secretary.

Rivals Benny Kauff.

In a recent game played between Co. M of the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry and the Fifteenth Ambulance train, Horton of the former unit cracked out two home runs, thereby causing people down here to forget all about Benny Kauff.

Wireless Expert.

Corp. Eddie Jacobs, whose company pals stand ready to back him against any man in the camp when it comes to sending the Continental code over the wireless, has been in the service most of his life. He enlisted in the navy when only 12. According to a report, it was he who located some of the outlawed wireless stations in Southern California which were causing the government trouble. He has the whole system down pat from wireless to smoke signals or talking along a barbed wire fence, which can be done with dots and dashes. Corp. Jacobs has sent messages two miles down a barbed wire fence simply by tapping on the metal.

Youthful Officer.

Sergt. Fred Zigenfuss is one of the youngest officers in the camp. His aunt, Anita Baldwin, has sent word that there will soon be delivered prepaid at the camp one of the best Airedales in the Santa Anita kennels. It will be installed mascot of the company.

Joke on Sentry.

Four former San Francisco newspaper writers are serving Battery E, One Hundred and Forty-third Field Artillery. They are Sergts. Fulwiller and Cook and Corps. Goldstein and Darrow.

The boys are telling a good one on Private Tony Pagio. Pagio, who is a rookie, was doing sentry duty. Like some of the "bushers," he sometimes forgets his lines.

Recently he was approached by the officer of the day. In such cases it is customary for the sentry to tell the officer of the day to "advance and be recognized."

"Who comes there?" demanded Tony.

"The officer of the day," came back the answer.

"Officer of the day, pass in review and be recognized," solemnly commanded Pagio. The real humor of this will be appreciated by military men.

Real Sacrifice.

You never know who you are meeting in the army, and only until you get down here do you realize the sacrifices some are making. For instance there is E. Mizner, who owns a ranch that spreads out like a domain in Napa county, serving as a corporal at $35 a month. He is over the draft age, and has a son almost old enough for the service. He surrendered the comforts and luxuries of wealth for the rigors of army life because he felt that the country had a tough job ahead and that every man should do his part.

DIES IN THE SOUTH.

Word of the death of Miss Elizabeth Kirby-Smith, daughter of Gen. E. Kirby-Smith, the Confederate chieftain, in Sewanee, Tenn., was received here yesterday by her sister, Mrs. Erwin M. Wade of Inglewood, who is an honorary member of Robert E. Lee chapter, U.D.C. Miss Kirby-Smith was for twelve years the postmistress at Sewanee, by appointment of President Cleveland.

DRUG VENDOR FINED.

In Judge Oscar A. Trippet's court yesterday Charles L. Brown pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with dealing in heroin, in violation of the Harrison antinarcotic law, and was fined $500, which he paid.

Timely Suggestions for those who contemplate purchasing

Diamonds

In selecting a diamond or a piece of jewelry in which diamonds are used, several suggestions may be made which will greatly aid the purchaser.

Value in diamonds is governed by several considerations, the first being the form or shape of the gem. Then comes color; and next in order, is freedom from imperfections.

We have stated these facts in understandable terms because there are few judges of diamond values.

It is advisable to consult a reputable firm before making a purchase of so valuable a gem.

Our stock of diamonds has been selected with but one thought in view—to secure gems perfect in form and color and free from imperfections. This is why we show perfect diamonds—even now when market conditions make their purchase particularly difficult.

We will be pleased to talk with those who contemplate purchasing a diamond, no matter how modest your requirements may be, and we will make it possible for you to secure the advice and help of men of experience and ability in the selection of these rare and beautiful gems.

The policy of Brock & Company makes it possible for you to come here with the assurance that you will not be importuned to purchase, while every effort will be made by demonstration and otherwise, to enable you to form the best possible judgment as to what best suits your needs.

TO PROVIDE the family with nourishing, wholesome and palatable food at the least possible cost and in absolute conformity with the suggestions of the Food Administrator is the aim of every patriotic housewife.

In order to accomplish this laudable purpose, use all the oatmeal, barley, macaroni, rice, dried beans and peas, home-made war bread, corn pone, cream soups and fish

PRICE NO GUIDE TO FOOD VALUE; REAL ECONOMY REQUIRES STUDY.

Cents' Worth of Oatmeal has the Same Amount of Nutriment as Two Dollars' Worth of Oysters—Patriotic Housewives Given Helpful Suggestions.

BY LILIAN C. FORD.

PROVIDE the family with appetizing, wholesome and palatable food at the least possible cost and in absolute conformity with the suggestions of the Food Administrator is the aim of every patriotic housewife.

In order to accomplish this laudable purpose, use all the oatmeal, [illegible] macaroni, rice, dried beans [illegible] home-made war bread, [illegible] cream soups and fish [illegible] the members of the family will consume with relish. These are foods which, at the present prices, supply the most nutriment for the least money.

The best food is not necessarily the highest priced; neither is it the cheapest. A pound of one food material costing a few cents may supply ten or fifty times as much nutriment as a pound of another costing several dollars. Food value cannot be determined by the price.

The average woman has no more idea of comparative food values than a Fiji islander who merely knows that he prefers missionary [illegible]. Is it economical to substitute rice for potatoes, oatmeal for prepared breakfast foods, cheese or eggs for meat, salad or canned fruits for cake or pastry? How shall the answer be ascertained? Not by merely comparing the price per pound, but by noting the food value of each and comparing the cost in relation to that food value.

NECESSARY DATA.

In order to do this, certain data are necessary as to the food values of the various food commodities. Bulletins issued by the Department of Agriculture contain complete tables of food values of practically every foodstuff in ordinary use. Farmers' bulletins numbers [illegible] and 142 are particularly valuable.

To make intelligent use of these tables we must know something of the use of food in the human economy. Food has two purposes. First, it supplies energy for carrying on the bodily functions and for performing our daily tasks. Even if we commit no labor, we use energy in avoiding it and so require energy-giving foods. Second, foods of certain kinds, notably those containing protein, supplies material for building the blood and the muscles and tissues of the body.

We must have some protein food in order to keep our bodies from wearing out and disintegrating. It is supplied by lean meat, milk, cheese, eggs, beans, peas, the cereals and some other foods. So we must include some of these in our diet if we would not emulate the one-hoss shay. With a reasonable amount of protein foods to supply building material, we may derive our energy and pep from whatever other foods may appeal to us or to our pocketbooks.

PRICE NO CRITERION.

Some of the rarest and most expensive of table delicacies have the least value as food. Some of the cheapest and commonest of foods are most valuable in the human economy.

As a rule, the higher-priced foods are the least valuable, though this is not always the case. Mushrooms, little neck clams, cavair, oysters on the half shell, asparagus tips, capon, and fruits out of season have comparatively little food value, though they are costly enough. But porterhouse steak, broiled lamb chops, English plum pudding, walnuts and other nuts, all considered somewhat high-priced, are high in food value—almost as high as some of the cheap foods, notably oatmeal, pot roast and corned beef. The point is this—the price is no criterion of the value of a food material. You may have a grocery bill big enough to bankrupt a food controller and your family may be undernourished.

Do you know that a pound of oatmeal, costing from 6 to 10 cents, contains practically the same amount of nourishment as eight pounds or four quarts of oysters, costing from $1.40 to $2? A pound of dried beans supplies as much energy to the human machine as five and a half pounds of frogs' legs or as eight quarts of average chicken soup or [illegible] pounds of asparagus or a pound and a half of lamb chops. The comparative cost is easily calculated. If you want to be more economical you can cut the cost of beans one-half by buying split beans. They are just as nourishing and for boiling with bacon or for use in soups are really better than the whole beans. Since beans have doubled in price, careful buying is necessary.

BREAD'S FOOD VALUE.

Again, a pound of bread, costing from 6 to 8 cents is equivalent in food value to two and a half pounds of chicken, or capon, costing from 10 to 15 times as much. Likewise, a pound of peanuts, purchased for 15 cents, provides as much nutrition as [illegible] pounds of rhubarb or asparagus, or as fifteen pounds of strawberries, or as seven pounds of lobster.

Ten cents invested in oatmeal or dried beans, or peanuts or rice actually buys more nutriment than can be purchased for from 50 cents to a dollar in the form of porterhouse or tenderloin steak, of chicken, of salmon, of shellfish, or asparagus or celery.

Ten cents invested in oatmeal, or dried beans, or peanuts or rice buys more nutriment today than can be purchased for from 50 cents to a dollar in the form of porterhouse or tenderloin steak, chicken or fish, shellfish, asparagus or even such humble cabbage or turnip.

The woman who wishes to economize will substitute fish for meat at least twice a week, will use beef rather than pork or lamb or veal, will indulge sparingly in high-priced canned vegetables and fish. She will round the heavier dishes with [illegible] served with lemon juice and sugar, or with French dressing, with fresh or canned fruit, or with salads made of whatever vegetables most abundant on the market, with bulky vegetables such as lettuce, cabbage and spinach.

USE FIRELESS COOKER.

Don't buy cream for coffee or to serve with cereals or desserts. Buy whole milk, skim or dip off the cream with a cream dipper, and use the skim milk to add palatability and nutriment to your homemade bread, to form the basis of soups and chowders, to make puddings and custards, and in cocoa, which is a stimulating and nourishing low-cost beverage.

If you haven't a fireless cooker, either buy or make one, and use it. Thus you will cut down your gas bill, and will have no excuse for serving half-cooked cereals, beans, stews, potroasts or other foods.

Ninety per cent. of American women when cooking with gas use too large a flame, thus wasting gas and hurrying up the cooking process. Rapid cooking of potatoes and other vegetables and of many kinds of wheat, as well as of cereals, makes them less palatable, and less easily digestible, thereby seriously impairing their nutritive value.

Cook slowly, allow plenty of time in which to prepare a meal, plan a little ahead instead of rushing home from the club or the matinee, or the shops, and hurrying some potatoes onto the stove to boil to pieces with the gas turned on full tilt, while you throw the tablecloth on the table and the dishes at the cloth, haste being necessary in order to get the chops or steak on to fry.

DON'T FRY MEATS.

Frying is no way to cook meat. Boil it slowly on the simmerer, bake it at a medium or slow heat, or broil it quickly in the hottest kind of a steel pan. Don't use those abominable tinny "spiders" supplied in Los Angeles apartments. Have a heavy skillet and use it.

Because you are implored not to get a hurried, too-hastily cooked meal does not mean that you should spend your time nursing the kitchen stove. Plan and prepare in advance, use a fireless cooker, and don't depend upon the eleventh hour inspiration for the planning of your menu.

Remember, if you are desirous of keeping the living expenses down, use all the oatmeal, dried beans and peas, home-made bread and corn pone, cream soups and fish chowders you and your family can partake of with a relish.

The average man doing average work requires about 3000 food units a day. The following table gives the cost of one-third of the day's food requirements for different food materials:

MEN AND OFFICERS FRATERNIZE ON SAME PLANE AT CAMP LEWIS.

True Spirit of Democracy Permeates the Fighting Forces; Californians Publish a Big Weekly Newspaper; Regiment has Prize Dog as Mascot.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CAMP LEWIS (Tacoma) Dec. 15.—Civilians whose previous knowledge of army life has led them to believe that America's boasted democracy has found no place in the nation's fighting forces—that officers and men find nothing in common and that they live in different worlds—have been agreeably surprised at the conditions at Camp Lewis.

The relation between the officers and men here is one of mutual respect. With no relaxation of discipline, the commissioned officers and noncommissioned men and privates have become more than efficient members of the same fighting units—they have become fast friends.

"We have the finest men in the world in our company," is a favorite expression with company commanders.

"Our officers are the finest in the land," is a favorite expression with the men.

There is no bullying of men by the officers. There is no language or tactics used that would tend to lesson the mutual respect. The relations are businesslike and cordial and of such a nature that a splendid morale is maintained.

There is not a man in camp who hesitates to go to his platoon or company commander when he has a grievance or a request to make. There is not an officer in camp who will not go right down the line for the men in his company.

ON THE SAME PLANE.

It is not unusual for commissioned officers and men to make week-end trips together. Almost any Saturday evening will find officers and men grouped around the same hotel tables in Tacoma and conversing on a common plane. Officers and men play on the same athletic teams, and on opposing teams. An officer umpire is subject to all the panning that a civilian might expect if his decisions do not please the men.

The officers have the welfare of their men at heart. They advise them on a hundred and one subjects, frequently visit them in their barracks rooms and are particularly solicitous concerning their health. And laying aside the humantarian aspect all this makes for efficiency in the National Army.

A memorandum just issued by Brig.-Gen. J. A. Irons, in command of the Ninety-first Division during the absence of Maj.-Gen. H. A. Greene, outlines what is expected of the officers. It follows:

"While unquestioned obedience and respect for properly constituted authority must remain the cornerstone of discipline and the foundation on which to build military efficiency, the advance in education and intelligence of our citizenship makes it more important than ever to establish a close and sympathetic relationship between the officer and his men.

"Prior to 1898 our army was in great part a frontier police; in numbers, an insignificant portion of our total population, and generally isolated from populous centers with their comforts and amusements. The material increase of our military establishments has placed both officers and men under the observant public eye and in their mutual relations it becomes a duty and an honor to exemplify our country's principles of equal and exact justice for all.

FOR EFFICIENCY.

"While there must be no relaxation in discipline in exacting a thorough and prompt performance of military duty, officers, when dealing with subordinates, must bear in mind the absolute necessity of avoiding language and remarks or gestures which will tend to lessen self-respect. That is all important if we are to have a cheerful, willing and efficient army. It is not necessary to adopt a tone of voice or manner different from that usually employed in general conversation, and especial care must be taken against sarcasm and unnecessary public rebuke. These faults, while more often found in officers new to the service, sometimes exist in others of more experience. Such officers are unfit temperamentally for command of men.

"All newly appointed officers must realize there is much to learn and the only way to qualify themselves for higher and independent command is by constant intellectual exercise, by systematic study, and by sympathetic knowledge of those intrusted to their control. Careful attention to the instruction of these officers is enjoined upon all commanders. They will be impressed with the importance of the faithful performance of every duty, however unimportant it may appear, and with the responsibility of their conduct and bearing in all relations with those under their command.

"All commanders will endeavor to build up such relations of confidence and sympathy as will insure those under their command coming to them freely for counsel and assistance without relaxation of the bonds of discipline. Any officer known to be tactless in his treatment of enlisted men will be given special instruction and supervision."

"OVER THE TOP."

So loath are the soldiers at Camp Lewis to give up many of the things they enjoyed in civil life that a newspaper which would be a credit to cities of several thousand population is being published weekly. It is called "Over the Top," and is published by the Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry, California men.

Volume 1, No. 1, made its appearance a few days ago. "Over the Top" is a four-page, six-column paper and is filled with regimental and general camp news. Its business and editorial staffs were recruited from the ranks of former newspaper men. The paper has broken all records for circulation, for there are less than 3500 men in the regiment and the subscribers total 4500.

The front page feature of the first issue is an article by Maj. Henry C. Breckenridge, former Assistant Secretary of War, who is a battalion commander of the regiment, in which he tells of the war aims of the Germans and why the Hohenzollerns's autocratic machine must be smashed.

"Comes a bully, armed to the teeth, stamping with iron heels, jangling with the trappings of medieval feudalism, and in his garments hidden away every bludgeon and dirty weapon known to the thug and assassin," says Mrj. Breckenridge, in describing Germany. "He announces that the will of the Prussian is the law of the world—that no solemn pact or obligation of honor can stand in the way of the necessity of the Hohenzollern."

In his concluding paragraph, he says:

"California is going to Berlin. From the mountains and the valleys, the rivers and the seashore, her sons have gladly come to go through the fiery ordeal of battle to the establishment of liberty, of law, of humanity. Germany will be beaten. The soldiers of America will collaborate in writing the last chapter of glory in the book of valor, written, to the present, in the blood of our allied heroes."

A DOG MASCOT.

"Over the Top" features a picture of "Mission Chum," the regimental mascot. "'Mission Chum,'" the article reads, "a prize airedale, has been presented to the Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry, by Mayor James Rolph, Jr., of San Francisco. The dog has won prizes in dog shows all over the country and has a pedigree as long as the Camp Lewis parade ground.

"Corp. I. J. Herscovitz of Headquarters Company, Three Hundred and Sixty-third infantry, received the dog from Mayor Rolph during his recent trip to San Francisco to receive the national colors. It represents the best of the Mayor's kennels.

GREAT PAGEANT SHOWS CAMP LEWIS IN ACTION.

AN UNUSUAL opportunity to see how every department of an American Army performs its duties was given at Camp Lewis yesterday and is being given again today at the great military exhibition and horsemanship show held there under the auspices of Auxiliary Remount Depot No. 331, Capt. J. W. Jackson commanding. Besides the participation of every branch of the service at the camp, many semi-official organizations, such as the Red Cross, Red Star and Y.M.C.A., are included in the pageants.

Some of the world's most wonderful riders, now enlisted men in the Remount Depot at Camp Lewis and helping Uncle Sam to train his horses for the war, are staging a horsemanship show such as only the great West could produce.

The Fourteenth United States Infantry is doing wall scaling, demonstrating how attacking parties overcome obstacles. The Three Hundred and Sixty-first Infantry, with a regimental band and buglers, go through a bayonet drill.

The hand grenade throwing demonstration is offered by the Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry, whose personnel includes some baseball players, especially expert at this work. The Three Hundred and Sixty-fourth Infantry presents a physical drill, with regimental band and buglers.

The Three Hundred and Forty-sixth Field Artillery goes through field maneuvers with a battery of guns. The Three Hundred and Forty-seventh Field Artillery has its regimental band and buglers. The Three Hundred and Forty-eighth Field Artillery goes through a [illegible] drill, with band and buglers, a feature which is said to be particularly beautiful. The Three Hundred and Sixteenth Ammunition Train presents on a large scale calisthenics and setting-up exercises.

In addition the Ordnance Depot, military police and train, bakers' and cooks' schools and Bakery Company, the Motor Truck Company, Motorcycle Company and Medical Corps participate. The funds will be used for the athletic and educational benefit of the 45,000 men at the camp.

Red Star campaigners on the stage.

DOGS OF WAR BARKING IN CAUSE OF RED STAR.

AS A means of stimulating interest in the Red Star drive, which began here on the 10th and will end on Thursday, a group of young women have been appearing in a unique special act at Pantages Theater the past week. Their number was given three times daily. It consisted of a fifteen-minute talk by Mrs. Claire H. Coombs, official lecturer for the Red Star Society, assisted by five young women who are taking an active part in the local campaign. An army dog team appeared in the act.

Mrs. Anita M. Baldwin, chairman of the local committee, says this city's apportionment in the Red Star drive is $50,000, and her earnest conviction is that the community should not fail to do its full share.

"The people have not yet come to a full realization of the importance attaching to the Red Star work," she claims. "The organization is undertaking to do for the dogs and horses of war what the Red Cross is doing for the soldiers and sailors.

"If it were not for dogs, horses and mules the soldiers in France and Italy would often be unable to get food and ammunition. It is absolutely necessary to take care of the wounded animals that are assisting in the war to make the world safe for democracy."

Each time the Red Star squad appear at Pantages they are [illegible] with a pack of wolf hounds from Mrs. Baldwin's kennels. One of the dogs of the pack is of unusual interest. He is the new type of war dog bred in the United States—a combination Airedale and Shepherd sheep dog. This cross is said to produce the best dog yet used on the battlefield.

WASH THE KIDNEYS!

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys every few minutes. This is why the kidneys play such an important role in health or disease. By some mysterious process the kidneys selects what ought to come out of the blood and takes it out. If the kidneys are not good workmen and become congested—poisons accumulate and we suffer from backache, headache, lumbago, rheumatism or gout. The urine is often cloudy, full of sediment; channels often get sore and sleep is disturbed at night. So it is that Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute in Buffalo, N. Y., advises "Washing the Kidneys," by drinking six to eight glasses of water between meals and then if you want to take a harmless medicine that will clear the channels and cure the annoying symptoms, go to your nearest druggist and obtain Anuric (double strength). This "Anuric," which is so many times more potent than lithia—will drive out the uric acid poisons and bathe the kidneys and channels in a soothing liquid.

If you desire, write for free medical advice and send samples of water for free examination. Experience has taught Dr. Pierce that "Anuric" is a most powerful agent in dissolving uric acid, as hot water melts sugar. "Anuric" is a regular insurance and life-saver for all.

HOME GARDENERS MAY ASK CITY TO OFFER REWARD FOR "SCALPS" OF PESTS.

Home gardeners who are enthusiastic in their efforts to increase the food supply have appealed to the Chamber of Commerce for some systematic method of exterminating gophers, which, they say, caused thousands of gardens to be operated at a loss during the past season.

Owing to there being large vacant areas in the city, it is almost impossible for the gardener near vacant ground to protect his garden from these pests.

The suggestion is made that the city offer a sufficient bounty on all gophers caught to inspire the small boys of the city to undertake a war of extermination. In hundreds of instances gophers practically ruined gardens upon which care and labor had been expended for weeks, and which were about to produce food for the family.

Experienced produce raisers state that the only time poison is effective in killing gophers is in the spring during the breeding season. When the baby gophers are big enough to get about they dine exclusively on tender roots of garden vegetables. Many instances were reported where during the past season [illegible] gardens planted [illegible] been ruined by gophers.

A bounty by the city is suggested. A persistent small boy, who understands them—with a chance of pay for his trouble—is said to be the only practical solution of the problem, which has assumed considerable importance in view of the world-wide demand for every ounce of food that can be produced.

Let these friends develop your boy

These are a few of the boys and the men—clean-hearted, healthy-minded, red-blooded—that your boy will meet, love and be benefited by, in The American Boy Magazine.

Here at the left is Dan Beard, among boys the best-loved man in America, and among men respected for his knowledge of the woods and his fine outdoor philosophy. He is teaching more than half a million boys to be woodsmen and sportsmen.

Next is Clarence B. Kelland, with his hand on Mark Tidd's shoulder. Fat Mark Tidd, the creation of Clarence Kelland's brain, is the funniest and most fascinating youngster since Tom Sawyer. Beside him is Charles Tenney Jackson; Corporal May is the chap he's been telling boys about. Each time Corporal May has emerged from some new and exciting adventure because of his intelligence and downright grit. On the right is William Heyliger, who holds boys spellbound with tales of baseball, football and track meets, where his heroes are a wonderful inspiration in courage and stamina.

That boy of yours is growing up. His reading and his friends are moulding him. His thoughts are laying the track for the thoughts of years to come. The boys who congregate on the corner are a bad influence, but it is merely a temptation to say, "Don't play with those boys." Cheap, morbid novels are just so much poison to his mind, but it doesn't do to say, "Don't read that." Your boy is healthy, vigorous, impetuous. He cannot thrive on "don'ts." Encourage him to do. Divert him from harm and the possibility of harm by giving him a present of

THE AMERICAN BOY
"The Biggest, Brightest, Best Magazine for Boys in all the World"

The American Boy is the cherished friend of half a million boys. Its editors themselves are "grown up boys." They have been editing The American Boy for eighteen years. They know boy nature and how to reach it. The one great aim is to make The American Boy not only a powerful influence among boys, but a powerful influence for positive good.

The American Boy brings clean, wholesome stories, combining plot and action with the best of writing—stories that inspire; that stir a boy to think; that carry a good moral but do not preach; that instruct but do not ostensibly teach; that show resourcefulness, skill, moral courage, heroism; virile stories that fit the present day American boy. But there are no stories of crime in The American Boy. The sensational, the morbid, the grotesque, and the wishy-washy are scrupulously barred out.

In 1918 The American Boy will be better than ever. It will publish first, in serial form, seven of the best books to be published during the year. Besides the Mark Tidd story and the serials by William Heyliger and Charles Tenney Jackson, there will be the true story of the adventurous life of Hugh Monroe, who spent all his life among the Indians of the West; a rattling story of old pirate days by Ralph D. Paine; and other continued stories. There will be short stories about School Life, Baseball, Animals, The Government Forest Service, Indians, the Lumber Woods, the Sea, Camping, Fishing, The Army and Navy, the Great War, and many other things—enough to fill eight big volumes if printed in book form.

Articles presenting facts in a form as fascinating as fiction will appear in The American Boy in 1918—thrilling historical articles, stories of "boys who used their brains," articles about Gardening, Poultry Raising, Birds, Mechanics, Electricity, Aviation, Automobiling, use of Bicycle and Motorcycle, Camping, Sports—each in its season. And the regular departments—Dan Beard's page for Outdoor Boys; "For the Boys to Make," by A. Neely Hall; Photographic Contests; American Boy Contests—writing essays, stories, reports of experiences, poems, cartoons, etc.; "How to Do It"—handy, time saving, labor saving devices and methods; The Stamp Collector; Puzzles; "Funnybone Ticklers"—jokes, comic pictures, etc.; Novel Inventions and Natural Wonders. No wonder 500,000 boys read The American Boy each month! And no wonder their parents are glad they read it!

The American Boy is the finest present you could give your boy. It will do him the most good. It will give him the most pleasure for the longest time. If you haven't a boy of your own, send The American Boy to some boy you want to help. Get it, and see the genuine pleasure it gives.

It was ...Bovard Field, November ...net result was $2200. ...evening the colored ...of Los Angeles gave a ...Shrine Auditorium, en... ...large audience, and ...for the Yuletide Committee. ...C. Oliver was in charge of ...Yuletide Fall Festival given in the Sunday tabernacle recently, in conjunction with Temple Baptist Church, netted over $600 for the Yuletide fund, and a check for that amount was delivered to Mr. Teasdale on Thursday.

The many Catholic organizations in Los Angeles raised considerable money by giving entertainments and contributing cash as separate bodies. All of their returns have not yet been reported to the Yuletide office, but Mr. Teasdale asserts that the total will be a great boost for the fund.

EXEMPTED MEN LIBERAL.

Among those who made personal contributions to the fund are the many men who have been exempted from military service. In each exemption district the men who were excused from duty organized and raised money for the Yuletide Committee. One district, where 250 men had been exempted, turned in $250. In most cases these men contributed $1 apiece. Altogether the exempted men have forewarded $3500 to the Yuletide office.

Children in the public schools at Covina did their bit by making smile books for the soldiers. This was accomplished by making up blank books and then pasting them full of newspaper jokes. Many of the smile books were sent to boys in France in advance of the Christmas shipments, and letters of acknowledgments have already been received.

POST CARDS PROVIDED.

The Los Angeles High School students made up several hundred post cards, upon which pictures of the new Los Angeles High School buildings were printed. These cards were donated to the Yuletide Committee, and they have been sent to soldiers and sailors who formerly attended the school. The public schools have given liberal amounts of money during the campaign.

The Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. supplied the committee with 1000 handsome Christmas cards for the holiday boxes. Nearly all of these cards were hand painted and they will doubtless be greatly appreciated by the recipients.

A cantata was given by the Choral Club at the Y.M.C.A. Tuesday evening to raise funds with which to swell the Yuletide Committee treasury. This entertainment was liberally patronized, but the net amount that will be turned over to Secretary Teasdale has not been reported.

From neighboring cities Secretary Teasdale already has received checks as follows: Garden Grove, $80; Van Nuys, $400; Pomona, $377; Orange county, $200, and the promise of more; Glendale, $508. The people of Riverside are said to have promised the committee $2000 as their share in the Yuletide campaign.

The work was undertaken September 26, when Mayor Woodman issued a proclamation calling upon the people of Los Angeles to play Santa Claus this year for all the Sammies south of the Tehachepi. Everett P. Teasdale was made secretary of the Yuletide Committee.

It was at first thought that $20,000 would cover the expense of the undertaking, but it is apparent now that $30,000 is a low figure. The expense may run as high as $35,000. The committee has not yet raised as much money as it needs, but Mr. Teasdale believes that funds with which to pay all expenses will be forthcoming before the work is closed up. About 35 per cent. of the money has been raised by individual contributions.

Through those in charge of the various army camps, naval training stations and recruiting offices the Yuletide Committee has been able to secure the names and addresses of nearly 15,000 Southern Californians who are now in the service.

FOR MEN OVERSEAS.

The Yuletide work began as early as Thanksgiving week, when the committee put up 1500 holiday boxes which were sent to soldiers and sailors who are now on foreign soil or waters. These were mailed to Hoboken, N. J., on December 4, and they will reach the men by Christmas, it is expected.

In addition to the plans for sending 15,000 boxes to as many known addresses, the Yuletide Committee has been engaged by the Red Cross Society of this district to send 6000 similar boxes, unaddressed, to men in the Pacific States army camps and naval training stations, who probably would not otherwise receive a gift box on Christmas. This plan has not yet been carried out, because the Red Cross has not forwarded its Christmas box fund to the Yuletide office, but it is believed that the original plan will go through without a hitch.

To get at the matter in the easiest way the Yuletide committee had 15,000 cartons printed. Then more than a carload of gift articles were purchased at wholesale prices and stored in a vacant building on Broadway. When everything was in readiness a week ago young women from the various high schools did the packing. A force of thirty girls worked every day for a week. Many other volunteers assisted in packing the boxes.

By special arrangement, a postal inspector was on hand to check up the contents of the boxes and authorize their shipment by mail. The postage was estimated by the zone system, and was paid on the postage-permit plan, so the use of stamps was eliminated from the task.

ADDRESSING THE BOXES.

Up in the Yuletide office another postal clerk took the gummed address labels as fast as they were typewritten, and sorted them into piles of thirty-six, that being the exact number of the boxes that will go in a mail pouch. Each pouch was addressed direct to the military unit to which the men for whom the boxes are intended belong. In that way the labor was reduced to the minimum, and the Postoffice Department was able to avoid a great deal of confusion and possibly considerable delay during the holiday rush.

One of the incidentals in connection with the work was the sending of a Wells Fargo travelers' check in each Christmas box. In order to do this the committee had to take each group of thirty-six addressed labels that were sorted by the postal clerk, deliver them to the express agent, have a check made out for each address, attached to each label, and delivered back to the office in regular order.

BOATMEN, ATTENTION!

Federal Tax on Pleasure Craft is Retroactive, Internal Revenue Collector is Informed.

Collector of Internal Revenue Carter recently received additional rulings in regard to the payment of war revenue taxes. Every broker who transfers stock must register and make monthly reports as to his transactions, the same as brokers who deal on produce exchanges, where articles are sold for future delivery. Stamps must be put on all stock transfers and conveyances or agreements to sell. Complete regulations as to this class of business have not yet been received by the collector.

The office of the collector is sending out forms of application for the registry of pleasure boats. Under the law, tax-paying period began October 4. It will be necessary for such owners to pay now from that date to July 1, 1918 the close of the fiscal year; after that, in twelve-month periods. Every owner of such a boat must register, whether he pays any tax or not, and it is estimated that no less than 1000 blanks will be required to cover that character of shipping at Los Angeles Harbor, San Diego and Santa Barbara. Boat owners who do not receive the proper blanks should apply for them at the office of the collector.

NEED FIELD GLASSES.

Shortage in Navy and Persons Who Can Spare Them are Asked to Contribute.

Persons owning field glasses or marine glasses that are not in use are offered an opportunity to do their bit for Uncle Sam through a condition that has arisen in the navy. Due to the war, there is a shortage of glasses used by marine officers. The only hope of obtaining enough of these is from citizens patriotically inclined, who are willing to contribute theirs to officers in the navy now forced to do without.

Those willing to make contributions may do so through Dr. J. Park Dougall, No. 605 South Hill street. He has had five requests personally. The Chamber of Commerce also will receive such contributions and see that they are properly placed.

A soldier at the Sawtelle home recently sent a pair of officers' field glasses to the War Department as his part in the war. This brought out the information that such contributions would be gladly received, as a serious shortage had developed.

FORSAKES HIS CIGAR.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon Munches Apple in Congress and Throws Peeling on the Floor.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 14.—Temporarily abandoning his ubiquitous cigar, "Uncle Joe" Cannon today went boyishly to Congress biting at a big red apple. He sauntered down the center aisle and scattered peelings right and left. Finally he took a seat next to that occupied by Miss Rankin and threw a handful of the peelings on the floor at her feet, to her great but unabashed amazement.

"Uncle Joe" devoured the apple, then swallowed the core.

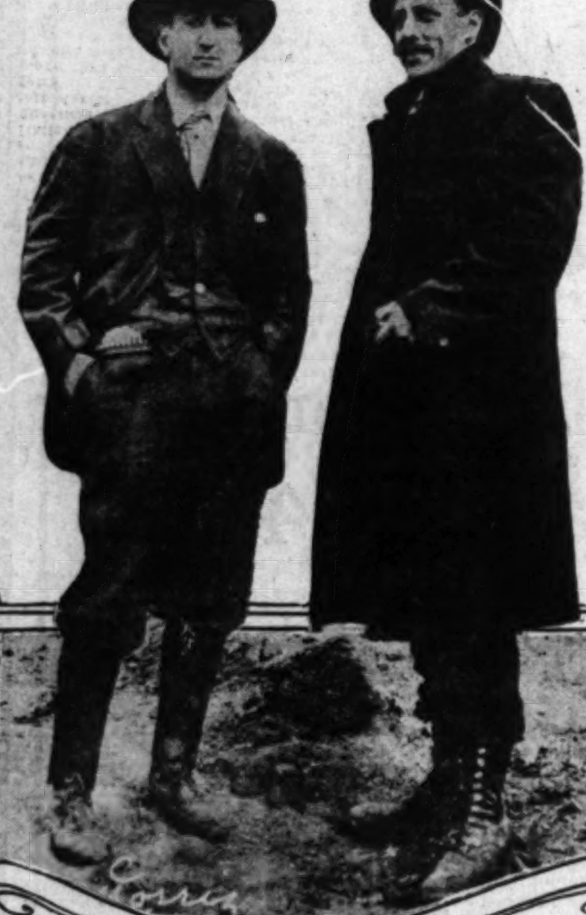
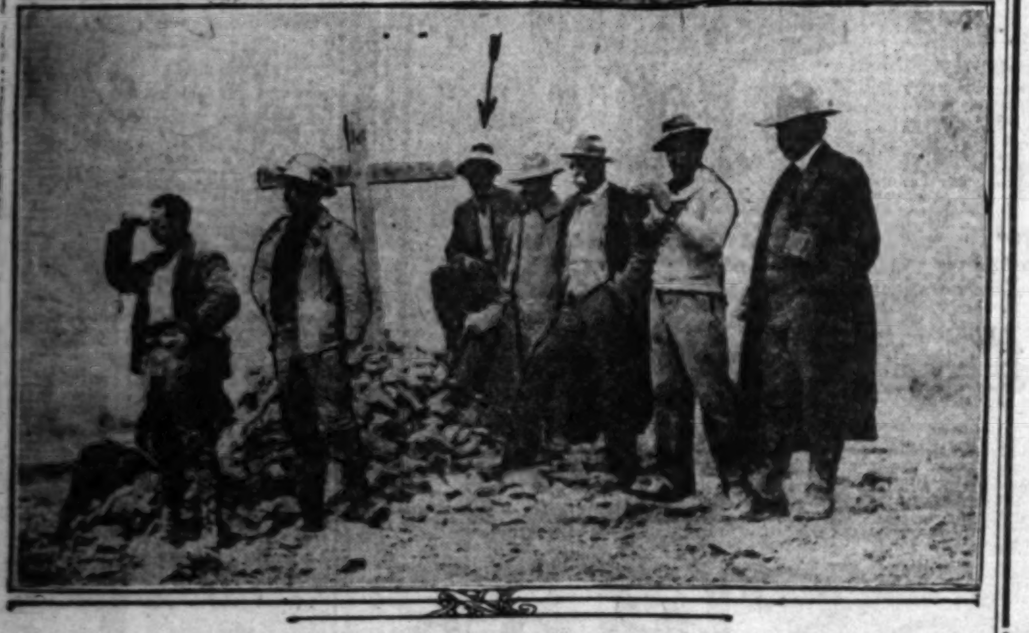
Mexico as a Maker of Soldiers.





Gen. Giuseppe Garibaldi as a Madero staff officer.

ALPINIERS' COMMANDER A SOLDIER OF FORTUNE.

Los Angeles Man Tells of the Career of Guiseppe Garibaldi in Mexico.

INTERESTING facts concerning the early training in Southern California and Northern Mexico of Guiseppe Garibaldi, grandson of the famous Garibaldi, who liberated Italy, now in command of the Italian Alpiniers, were told yesterday by Joe Morris of No. 1108 Sentous street, a photographer, who was connected with the forces of Francisco I. Madero in 1911, when Garibaldi was chief-of-staff in the first Mexican revolution. Garibaldi has recently come into prominence through the activities of his unit in resisting the Austro-German advance.

The now famous Italian general joined the forces of Francisco Madero and his brother, Raoul Madero, when the revolutionists gathered at Juarez in February, 1911. After only a month with the revolutionists, Garibaldi was made chief-of-staff.

The Italian's interests in the revolt against Diaz were purely altruistic. He had been a soldier of fortune, participating in revolutions in South and Central America, largely for the love of fighting, and recognized in the Mexican insurrection another chance to show his prowess as a soldier and experiment with his military knowledge, the garnering of which had been the ambition of his life.

Madero gave no small amount of the credit for the overthrow of the Diaz dynasty to Garibaldi, realising that his strategic moves with mere handsful of men had won more than the trained Federal troops.

When Francisco Madero became the head of the republic as provisional President, Garibaldi was made military adviser of the Executive and one of his closest aides. When a minor revolt started in Sinaloa, Garibaldi was sent to repress it. Considerable agitation against his occupying the high position he held developed in certain sources, on account of his being an Italian. Rather than cause internal dissension, Garibaldi resigned and left Mexico. Those familiar with affairs in the southern republic declare that the downfall of Madero, which ended in his assassination, may be traced from the resignation of the Italian.

The Italian general's knowledge of the military establishments of the world were astounding, said Mr. Morris. There was hardly a nation, however small, that Garibaldi could not describe, and tell its armament and military and naval power. He was universally respected by the Mexican officers, who served under him during the revolt.

According to friends, Garibaldi traveled all over the world garnering intelligence concerning the powers of the nations for his own information and as a part of his education along military lines.

At the outbreak of the war between France and Germany, Garibaldi organized a force of 1000 Italians and joined the Foreign Legion, fighting for France. When Italy declared war on the Central Powers, the Italian resigned from service in the French army and joined the Italian Alpiniers, the unit in which he has since seen service and of which he recently was placed in charge.

STORY'S THE THING.

PICTURE FIRMS PAYING MORE ATTENTION TO PLOTS.

By Grace Kingsley.

It appears to be dawning clear and bright in the minds of the picture producers, at last, that a photoplay really is a kind of a play, and that therefore it requires a good plot, and that not all the leapings of Douglas Fairbanks, not all the smiles of Mary Pickford, not all the comic kickings of Charlie Chaplin can carry the spectator along through five miles of film junk. Therefore, it has come about, the picture producers are buying up all the good stories they can lay their hands on—magazine stories, novels, tales old and new, even operatic plots—and making them into picture plays. This follows the history of the stage, which, for a season during which stars arose overnight, gave no plays to the public that were worth while. But it was found that Totty Two Shoes, charming though

BIG THEATRICAL NAMES IN "MISS SPRINGTIME."

BY PAUL HUBERT CONLON.

"MISS SPRINGTIME," which comes to the Mason Operahouse a week from tomorrow night, is absolutely the stellar musical comedy attraction of the year, if the remarkable record the Klaw and Erlanger success made in New York has anything to do with prophecy. I know of no musical show in recent years that offers us such an array of finished artists in every connection. It is enough to know that Klaw and Erlanger are the producers, for they have not disappointed us yet.

The combined efforts of many celebrities were enlisted in the making of "Miss Springtime." Emmerich Kalman, who gave us the entrancing airs of "Sari," wrote the melodic score; Guy Bolton threaded the libretto with incisive wit and brilliant dialogue; P. G. Wodehouse penned graceful and humorous lyrics; Julian Mitchell devised new eye-fascinating dancing numbers and ensemble groupings for the big girl chorus, and Joseph Urban, the greatest master of color among our scenic artists, designed and painted the beautiful settings that embellish the production.

Look at the programme. For a long time we have been enduring New York shows with Kickapoo casts. This time we get the cream. There will be Frank McIntyre, Zoe Barnett, Hattie Burks, George Leon Moore, Harrison Brockbank, Frank Doane, Mae Hennessey, Alf Fisher, Alice Gailliard, W. F. Nunn, Charles DeHaven, George Fox and Harry Braham. Most of these names are familiar from coast to coast, so we may be sure that we are in for a good time.

Many of the song hits of the musical comedy are now familiar to Angeleno theatergoers. I can remember such numbers as "Throw Me a Rose," "My Castles in the Air," "Some One" and "A Very Good Little Girl on Sunday." Then there are also "The Garden of Romance," "Life is a Game of Bluff" and "The Old-fashioned Drama." These songs have a lilting swing and a facility of rhyming far above the average of current-day patter stuff.

MAKING THE SHOW.

One of the marvels of present-day theatricals is undoubtedly discovered, as Tolstoy pointed out in his "What Is Art," in the tremendous energy, time, money and skill put into the making of a big New York musical comedy production—and the consequent risk run by the producers whose cash has gone into an enterprise the success of which cannot be insured, but depends upon the whim of the amusement seeker.

Little thought does the layman who visits the theater give to these

STRONG PHOTOPLAYS.

BIG FEATURES ARE OFFERED FOR THIS WEEK.

Clune's Auditorium.

Starting tomorrow matinee, W. H. Clune will present at the Auditorium the art edition of the French screen version of Victor Hugo's masterpiece, "Les Miserables," an eight-reel subject. The print that will be exhibited here comes direct from a three weeks' run at Orchestra Hall, the largest motion picture theater in Chicago, where it was shown at greatly advanced prices.

The picture, directed by Albert Capellani, the foremost director of France, stars Henri Kraus, probably the only living actor who could give an absolutely true-to-life interpretation of Victor Hugo's world-famous hero, Jean Valjean.

To compare the performers who portray Victor Hugo's characters with any of the motion picture actors of the American screen would be an injustice, for they were chosen from among the greatest exponents of drama in France, and not from any one particular company. This was done because "Les Miserables" is the classic of France, and because Victor Hugo is a national idol. It would hardly do to have such a work as this suffer in its photo dramatization or screen interpretation. Henri Kraus as Jean Valjean is without doubt the most striking character the screen has ever reflected, his great strength and bulk admirably suits the part, and his long and glorious career as the leading man at the Theater Sarah Bernhardt entitles him to first place among the dramatic actors of France.

In a tiny paragraph that seeped through the cables from France a few days ago word came that Henri Kraus, the leading man of the Theater Sarah Bernhardt, and an idol in Paris, had lost his life defending his country. Kraus was mortally wounded in the latest battle of Verdun. He enlisted at the first outbreak of war, as the Huns came marching with their legions through Belgium, and served through three heartbreaking years of the struggle.

Clune's Broadway.

Commencing Sunday afternoon, Clune's Broadway will present winsome little Margaret Clark in the third and last of the famous sub-deb stories from the able pen of Mary Roberts Rinehart. No series of stories in motion pictures have attracted greater attention from their sheer piquancy and merit than these charming and artistically humorous creations.

"Bab's Matinee Idol" is the title of this latest sub-deb in which Miss Clark appears, and is a whimsically funny story of a boarding school girl's first love affair, and which is bound to appeal to girls of all ages, who will recognize themselves in Miss Clark's winsome screen portrayal of Bab. The story shows Bab, who after being sent home from a private school on account of an epidemic of measles, makes the best of things by deciding to enjoy her vacation, and commences by attending the matinee. She immediately falls desperately in love with the hero, and learns through a friend of the family that he is financially interested in the play, and also, that it is on the verge of collapse. She at once sets about in an original manner to boost the show, and by arranging some publicity on her own account, causes a great deal of trouble between her idol and his wife, for he is married to "that fat blondine woman" in the play. The reconciliation between her hero and his wife is too much for Bab, and she collapses in the arms of an old sweetheart who has arrived upon the scene.

Quinn's Rialto.

Breaking all attendance records at Quinn's Rialto Rex Beach's tremendous story of the under side of American life in big cities, "The Auction Block," will tomorrow begin its second and last big week. For once J. A. Quinn will change the one-week run policy of the Rialto to afford those who have missed the great production in the last seven days another chance to see the picture. Spectacular scenes of the Pittsburgh steel mills, New York midnight cabarets, big girl shows, a millionaire's feast, the fight in gambling dens, and many other remarkable scenes abound in "The Auction Block." The cast of the production has been personally picked by Rex Beach and is headed by the beautiful Rubye De Remer, Tom Powers, Florence Deshon and George Cooper. The picture will positively not be shown after this week's run, as the holiday picture "The Cinderella Man," with Mae Marsh at her best, has been booked to go on the Rialto screen. With Miss Marsh are seen Tom Moore and George Fawcett. There will be no advance in the regular Quinn prices.

Miller's.

If you are a worshipper of the divine in the human body there is a wonderful treat in store for you at Miller's Theater, where yesterday the new seven-reel revised edition de luxe of Fox's million dollar spectacle "A Daughter of the Gods" opened an engagement which is to last but one week. There you will see the perfectly fashioned and talented Annette Kellermann, in all her loveliness, besides a hundred or more odalisques and dancing girls, beautiful mermaids and attendants, every last one of them an artist's dream. If you are a lover of thrills you will see the intrepid Miss Kellermann perform feats of daring in the water never before equalled before the camera. A special musical score was written for this production and will be played by Miller's great orchestra which is under the personal leadership of Carli Densmore Elinor.

Sennett.

The management of the Sennett Theater has arranged with A. H. Woods, the noted New York theatrical-manager, for the first production anywhere of a new and altogether out of the ordinary photodrama, "Free and Equal," at the Sennett, commencing next Sunday. This is the first production that Mr. Woods

MUSICAL NOTES.

The Schubert Club held a meeting in the ballroom of the Alexandria Hotel, Wednesday afternoon. The next drama meeting is postponed until after the holidays. The first event after the holiday season will be the vesper organ recital at St. Paul's, January 4, 1918. All members of the club wishing to avail themselves of the illustrated lectures of Roselyn Madden Sargent are registering in that section.

Mrs. Grace Widney-Mabee with her accompanist, Mrs. Gertrude Ross, gave "Alluline" by Massenet. The Yuletide songs were sung in a pleasing quality, especially the Christmas Carol. Mrs. Mabee sang "Aria de Lia" (mother's lament for the child) with great expression. The group of "Art Songs of Japan," composed by Mrs. Gertrude Ross were taken from short poems written from 300 to 7000 A. D. and translated into English. The songs were admirably sung by Mrs. Grace Widney-Mabee.

Eugene Ysaye,

Famous Belgian violinist, who will play at Trinity Auditorium next Wednesday evening.

"The March" by Henrietta Hunt, a composer of Santa Monica, is full of life and brightness. "The Trumpet Call," Mrs. Mabee sang with emotion and patriotic feeling and enthusiasm. "Allegro Mederate" and Miss Davidson's group of three selections, "Legende," "La Captive" and "Serenade" gave a variety of movements and were artistically interpreted on the violin. Mr. Julius Bayler is widely known for his ability.

Bauer and Ysaye.

A real Hooverized treat—with tickets selling at slightly more than the average moving-picture admission price—will be the two concerts to be given next Wednesday, when Harold Bauer and Eugene Ysaye are heard in a programme of great beauty.

Both artists will play for the Southern California Teachers' Association, Bauer playing Wednesday afternoon, 2:30 o'clock, at Trinity Auditorium, Mr. Ysaye playing the same evening at Shrine Auditorium. These concerts will be open to the general public, and as the programmes are entirely different from either presented last week, many will no doubt avail themselves of the opportunity.

Harold Bauer,

Pianist, who will play at Trinity Auditorium next Wednesday matinee.

Dr. Shiels, superintendent of the public schools of this city, has announced that attendance at either of these concerts on the part of the teachers will be considered as a credit, the same as if they attended any of the regularly scheduled events.

The Bauer programme opens with the Beethoven "Sonata in C Major," with the lovely Schumann "Scenes from Childhood" which no one plays quite as well as this artist, the Chopin "Ballade in A Flat," a group of French numbers, Rameau's "Rondeau," Couperin "Les Barricades Mysterieuses" and Alkan's "Le Vent," closing with two Liszt numbers Etude in D Flat, and Rhapsody No. 12.

The Ysaye programme will include the seldom-heard Veracini Sonata A Minor, Beethoven's Sonata A Major, Viotti Concerto in A Minor and a group of shorter numbers including a new Ysaye composition, Saint-Saens "Rondo Capriccioso" and Chabrier-Loeffler "Scherzo-Valse." Mr. Beryl Rubinstein, the interesting young pianist whom Mr. Ysaye is presenting for the first time on the Coast, will also play a group of numbers.

Although the concerts are at different auditoriums, all tickets will be on sale at the Trinity Auditorium box office.

On Wednesday Morning.

The Los Angeles Music Settlement gives a benefit concert in the ballroom of Hotel Alexandria next Wednesday morning at 11:15 o'clock under the direction of Margaret Goetz.

The following artists will take part: Mme. Mariska Aldrich-Davis, Desider Josef Vecsei, pianist; Miss Blanch Ruby, lyric soprano; Mr. Oskar Seiling, violinist, and the Oriole Girls' Quartette; Mrs. Gertrude Ross and Miss Lorna Gregg, accompanist.

Guests of honor are Mmes. Jenny Kempton, Ann Hesse-Sprotte, Maggie Teyte and M. Eugene Ysaye.

Patronesses are: Mmes. Mariska Aldrich, Morris Albee, Edward Baremore, Constance Balfour, Thilo Becker, A. C. Bilicke, W. F. Botsford, L. Brannon, E. R. Brainerd, Clara Henley Bussing, Russell Ballard, Gertrude Cohen, J. J. Carter, Estelle Heartt-Dreyfuss, E. J. Eichelberger, J. Bond Francisco, Cora Foy, Cecil Frankel, James Tabor Fitzgerald, A. F. Riess, Ann Hesse-Sprotte, Oskar Seiling, Maggie Teyte, Karl Triest, Adolf Tandler, Helen Thorner, James Garfield Warren, B. W. Zena.

Matinee Musical Club.

The drama department of the Matinee Musical Club, under the direction of Mrs. Rowena Blincoe, is offering an unusually attractive programme for next Thursday.

Capt. Bonnar of the British and Canadian recruiting mission will give a short talk.

Frank Deshon, the famous comedian, late of the Gilbert Sullivan Opera Company, will contribute two or three comedy numbers.

Terese Van Grove, young protege of David Belasco, will read a short scene from "Chanticleer."

Ruth Hall Kennedy, soprano, will sing a number of Yuletide songs.

The meeting will be held in the tower-room of the Trinity Auditorium at 2:30 p.m.

KINEMA THEATER OPENS IN A BLAZE OF GLORY.

THE grand opening of the new Kinema Theater, as mentioned in the news section of this paper attracted one of the largest crowds of theatergoers ever assembled in this city, and the Kinema may be said to have opened its career in a blaze of glory. The DeMille photodrama, "The Woman God Forgot," featuring Geraldine Farrar, received its premier presentation in this city. For gorgeous settings and costuming, this photoplay has never had an equal. Miss Farrar's acting was all that could be desired, her characterization of an Aztec princess, who sold her father, people and nation for the sake of holding one man's love, was real and compelling. Theodore Kosloff was splendid as an Aztec prince and suppliant for the princess' hand. Wallace Reid and Hobart Bosworth portrayed the roles of the Spanish conquerors with finished art. Raymond Hatton was dominant and terrible as the historical Aztec king, Montezuma. "The Woman God Forgot" will appeal to everyone's sense of the artistic, and as an accomplishment marks a distinctive step forward in advancing the photodrama to a loftier plane. It is well worth being seen by all not conversant with the great civilization which existed in the twilight of American history, even before Columbus, among these same Aztecs. The Kinema announces positively only one week's run of this photoplay.

A list of prominent people who had parties includes Cecil B. DeMille, Mrs. W. C. DeMille, Mary Pickford, Thomas H. Ince, D. W. Griffith, Mack Sennett, Douglas Fairbanks, Messrs. NEW CONSTITUTION FOR LABOR PARTY.

NATIONAL EXECUTIVE HAS COMPLETED DRAFT OF PROPOSED LAWS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The national executive of the Labor party has completed a draft of the new constitution of the party, which will be presented at the conference at Nottingham, in January.

It is proposed that the name of the party remain unchanged, but that its scope be widened to include political interests of all producers "by brain or by hand" without distinction of class or occupation, and that it should be reorganized on the double basis of national societies and Parliamentary constituencies.

The societies eligible for affiliation will be as heretofore trade unions, Socialists' organizations, and co-operative societies, but it is planned to add in each Parliamentary constituency a local Labor party consisting of local branches of the affiliated societies and of individually enrolled members. It is planned that the party conference should remain the supreme governing authority of the party, declaring the general programme (by two-thirds majority,) giving decisions on party policy, and electing the national executive of twenty members.

Objects of the party are:

"To organize and maintain in Parliament and in the country a political Labor party.

"To co-operate with the labor organizations in other countries, to assist in organizing a federation of nations for the maintenance of freedom and peace and for the establishment of suitable machinery for the adjustment and settlement of international disputes by conciliation or judicial arbitration, and for such international legislation as may be practicable."

JAPAN'S SEAWEED INDUSTRY.

Highly Developed and Amounts to About $2,000,000 a Year.

A good deal may be heard in the years to come about the conservation of seaweed in the salt waters around the United States and the vast tonnage of this valuable vegetable matter which is cast up on the American coasts. The American people make little use of the numerous marine plants which generally pass under the name of seaweed. Some work has been done on the Pacific Coast in gathering that form of seaweed called kelp and in reducing it for the potash which it contains, and some seaweed is gathered from which iodine is obtained, but it was not long ago that the United States Commissioner of Fisheries said that, while the seaweed resources of the United States are equal to those of Japan, the seaweed products of this country are annually worth only $40,000, while the seaweed fisheries of Japan yield something like $2,000,000 a year.

The seaweed industry, curious as that phrase may sound to the average American, is highly developed in Japan, and the thrifty people of the islands find a commercial use for all varieties of the weed. After satisfying home wants, quantities are exported, China being one of the important purchasers.

Some seaweeds are valuable as human food, and that variety called kelp is one of the staple foods of Japan, being sold under the native name of "kombu." It is prepared in several ways, but principally by boiling. Reduced to the form of jelly, it finds a place in the menu of millions of Japanese, and long use has shown it not only to be palatable, but also wholesome and nutritious.

An old Japanese industry is that of making glue, and for 300 or 400 years the ingenious people have been making glue from several species of seaweed. From seaweed the Japanese also make an excellent starch for stiffening fabrics. A Japanese vegetable isinglass is another of the Japanese seaweed products. It is made from those seaweeds that are rich in jelly. They are boiled in fresh water and then the pulpy mass is strained through coarse cloths.

An important Japanese industry is the manufacture of jelly which is used throughout America and Europe as a culture media for bacteria. This is a seaweed jelly and it has been said that the annual export value of this product is in excess of $1,000,000. The seaweed from which the Japanese make this jelly grows on the American coasts, but no use is made of it.

One of the food seaweeds of Japan is that variety which Americans know as "laver." It is a red seaweed and is cultivated by the Japanese, one of the principal places for raising this crop being the Bay of Tokio. The government leases areas in that bay to the planters. The main plan of cultivation is to push bundles of brush or bamboo into the muddy bottom of Tokio Bay, as well as a number of other bays, for the purpose of intercepting seaweed spores, which cling to the brush. The plants grow rapidly and are harvested between January and spring.—[Washington Star.

Uniforms from Sample Cloth.

More than 67,000 soldiers can be clothed with the material which will be saved by cutting the sizes of tailors' samples 21 per cent., and this has been arranged at conferences between the Council of National Defense, the National Wholesale Tailors' Association and many large cloth dealers. Nearly a quarter of a million yards of cloth heretofore used as samples will be devoted to clothing.—[Washington Star.

Get a Big Crop on Sod.

A $10,000 crop raised on land that less than a year ago was all in native sod, is the feat of O. H. John and his two sons on 280 acres located eleven miles northwest of Hereford, Tex. This was accomplished by the use of a tractor. There is not a horse on the place.—[Capper's Weekly.

But here am I at Laguna, just dropped into the kiddle of one of our artist's pictures, majestic rocks, voluptuous seaweed, mighty breakers and adorable sunsets all complete. And just across the little canyon, who should have a bijou little doll's house but Gwen Nettleship—I mean Mrs. L. C. Shaw—who was married for just three months and is now a courageous war widow. You remember her at Santa Monica in the hockey-swimming-basketball-tennis days. Now she scales the cliffs with her dog and the other day the pair of them caught and skinned a skunk.

And round by the next clump of rocks in Cuperin, the artist, living all by himself and keeping house with the exactitude of an eminently correct spinster. He scorns inartistic straight lines and has a wiggly fence round his lot and is striving earnestly to make two blades of ice plant grow where none ever grew before. He is a big husky looking artist, though, and as a local resident remarked, "Ain't it funny a big chap like him don't do something useful!" Said local resident being the village strong man who practices dumb-bell exercises when he isn't digging, building, or driving mules, who regards art in any form as strictly effeminate.

And over at the grocery store they will point out the wealthy New Yorker who has violent spasms for the simple life and comes down here to wear overalls, smoke a musty-looking pipe, and sit on a grocery box. And although this is essentially an artist's colony, the real celebrity is Garvy Cravath, the baseball hero of the Phillies. Whenever he arrives he effectually cuts out that other local hero, Carn Bepson, the Swede, who came here a few years ago with 15 cents and a confident smile, and now owns real estate and a pretty wife. He loves to tell how he once worked for Mrs. Dolph, who has a strictly feminine household consisting of herself, a cook and a secretary. And Carl used to be called in to kneel on a $2000 prayer rug and help pray for the poor.

And there are Frank Hansen and Joe Skidmore, joint owners of the local paper, the former being a charming Hollander, an amazing linguist, much traveled, gentle and lovable, who minds everybody's dogs and children when they go away. He has just inherited a 200-year-old baronial hall in Holland from his father, and is wondering if he will ever see it. He paid a strictly neighborly call on us the first evening we arrived, armed with two immense logs for the fire in case we were cold—which is something like a visiting card.

And in the meantime we are collecting stacks of abalone shells, seaweed, and moonstones which mamma will certainly regard with an unwelcome eye when we return home and insist upon adorning the house with them.

We shall soon be home again, Mignon, dear, fortified for the saying of more poignant good-bys, and ready to dance our heads off for the Red Cross or anything else that demands such energy.

SOCIETY.

BY VIRGINIA WOODS.

Military Wedding.

Miss Elizabeth Helena Thorpe, grand-daughter of Mrs. Spencer Roane Thorpe of No. 971 Menlo avenue, became the bride of Lieut. Donald Sias at a real military wedding at Camp Doniphan, Fort Sill, recently. The ceremony was performed by the Catholic chaplain of the bridegroom's regiment in the officers' mess hall, which had been patriotically decorated by fellow-officers with American flags. The bride was given in marriage by the commander of the regiment. The dirt floor of the mess hall was covered with army blankets, and the bride and bridegroom knelt on a big silk American flag. The bride, who is one of the loveliest girls in the younger social set here, wore a bridal gown of white Georgette crepe. She also wore a long veil of white tulle, arranged with orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of white orchids and bride's roses. Following the ceremony a wedding supper was given for twenty-four officers and members of Lieut. Sias's mess and their wives and Mrs. Harry Lewis Dunnigan, aunt of the bride, who accompanied her to Fort Sill and who left shortly afterward for her old home in Louisiana for the holidays.

Lieut. Sias is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cunningham Sias of Corona and was at Stanford when he volunteered with the first contingent at the Presidio. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity and also is a member of the One Hundred and Tenth Company ammunition train.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Roane Thorpe of Vancouver, B. C., but has resided with her grandmother the past two years. Had not the war hastened her marriage she would have graduated in June from the University of Southern California college of music and from Manual Arts High School. Lieut. Sias and his bride will reside at Fort Sill until he goes overseas.

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Oriva of No. 1357 Bond street announce the engagement of their daughter, Flora, to L. Dale Roberts, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Roberts. The wedding has been set for January 17 and will take place at the residence of Miss Oriva's parents.

Marries in Chicago.

Word of the marriage in Chicago of Mrs. Sallie Ben Patton and R. M. Miller was received here with much surprise. The ceremony took place last week, and announcement of the nuptials was made by Mrs. C. Williams of No. 162 West California street, Pasadena.

For Governor's Wife.

Mrs. William D. Stephens, wife of the Governor, was honor guest at a tea which Mrs. Frederick B. West gave at her home, No. 2515 South Grand avenue. Because of war times the affair was as simple and informal as possible. Forty of Mrs. Stephens's and Mrs. West's intimate friends were there. Mrs. Stephens is being entertained during her stay her at numerous smart affairs.

Capt. Shaw's Dinner.

Capt. Walter Shaw of the British army, who has been received so cordially by society here, was host at a very interesting dinner party Friday night, at the Alexandria, which was followed by a theater party at the Morosco. Covers were laid for Capt. and Mrs. A. L. Bonner, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Webb, Mr. and Mrs. William Doran, Mrs. James A. Phillips of this city and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Grayson of New York.

Country Club Dinner.

Mrs. O. H. Churchill of No. 2201 South Figueroa street entertained at dinner Saturday at the Los Angeles Country Club for twenty-four guests. Mrs. Churchill was assisted by Mrs. David McCarthy, Mrs. Pierpont Davis and Miss Ida M. White.

Art Club Reception.

One of the most brilliant social events of the week was the reception which members of the California Art Club gave last night in their clubrooms in honor of the outgoing and incoming officers. During the evening Miss Mercedes Ciesielska presented several Russian folk songs and Miss Clare McGregor, noted pianist and former pupil of Jonas in Berlin, accompanied her. The California Art Club is comprised of the most famous artists in the West as well as a great many in the East.

Marriage Announced.

The marriage of Miss Margaret E. Macdonald and Milton C. Huntoon, both of Evanston, Ill., which took place at noon on Thanksgiving Day in Hollywood, was announced yesterday. Rev. J. A. Evans officiated and dinner followed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. Prior and their daughter.

Luncheon.

As a compliment to her sister, Mrs. C. P. Overton of San Francisco, Mrs. Frank Walsh entertained members of her bridge club and a few other guests at luncheon Tuesday.

Silver Wedding Anniversary.

In rooms beautifully trimmed in silvered magnolia leaves arranged in jardinieres and making a background against the walls, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Farrar celebrated their silver wedding anniversary with a reception at their handsome country place, La Sierra Heights. Rev. Theodore Uran, the pastor who presided at their wedding twenty-five years ago, officiated at the anniversary ceremony and Miss Ethel Farrar, their daughter, sang "O Promise Me." An elegantly-prepared supper was served to the following guests: Rev. A. J. Drury, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Cline, Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Mitcel, Rev. and Mrs. Uran, Miss Ethel Mae Farrar, all of Los Angeles; Miss Nellie Sanborn of San Pedro; Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Williams of Newport; Mrs. Anne Mitchell of Pomona; Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Farrar of Hemet; Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Wood and Mrs. D. Coldren of Riverside; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Andrews and Dr. and Mrs. Epperson of Long Beach; James Farrar and Miss Anne Farrar of Burbank; Rev. and Mrs. C. M. Crist of Pasadena; Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Farrar of Wintersburg; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Farrar and Keith and Maxine Farrar of Huntington Park and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Moore of Orange. Many gifts of silver were received.

Naval Ball.

The lobby of the Hotel Alexandria will be the scene of a picturesque auction at noon Monday at which boxes will be sold for the naval ball to take place at Shrine Auditorium on New Year's eve.

Vivian Martin, Winifred Kingston, Mary McLaren and Katherine McDonald form a quartette of screenland queens who are to assist Charlie Murray, the well-known comedian, who has volunteered to wield the hammer. They will be garbed as Red Cross nurses, and are expected to stimulate the bidding for the boxes for the big event.

The Executive Committee for the naval ball includes Lieut. and Mrs. J. L. Nielson, Lieut. and Mrs. F. W. Soanland, Lieut. William N. Quigley and Lieut. A. E. Montgomery, Mrs. Eugene Overton, Mrs. Samuel B. Thomas, Miss Alice Elliott, and Hugh Stewart is treasurer and director of finance.

Those directly in charge of the auction as appointed by Gurney Newlin, president of the local Red Cross are Edward Lyman, Louis M. Cole, Herbert Cornish, H. W. Frank, W. W. Mines and John P. Burke.

This ball will be the farewell appearance of many of the navy officers and enlisted men from the submarine base, as extensive sailing orders are expected shortly after the first of the year.

The following is the complete list of patronesses: Mrs. W. S. Hook, Mrs. Barbee Hook; Mrs. J. J. Hunker, Mrs. Hugo Johnston, Mrs. Eugene Overton, Mrs. Joe Neilson, Mrs. John T. Military Wedding.

Of more than ordinary interest to a host of friends here and in San Francisco comes the announcement of the marriage in Washington, D. C., last Thursday of Miss Therese Tag of this city and Samuel Ratliff, U.S.A., formerly of Kansas City. The young couple will be at home in Washington at the Cairo Hotel after a few days' honeymoon trip.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Louis Tag of No. 1185 West Adams street, and received her A. B. degree at Stanford University in 1915.

Bridge Luncheon.

Mrs. Harry James Brown entertained members of Las Amigas Club with a delightful bridge luncheon yesterday at her home on Carondelet street. Christmas colors with holly and Chinese lilies artistically arranged in vases brightened the rooms given over to the affair. Cards adorned with sprays of holly marked places for the hostess, her daughter, Miss Marion Brown, who assisted; Mrs. George Bush, Mrs. Robert Gortner, Mrs. W. D. Newerf, Mrs. Clinton Woodruff, Mrs. Jessie Shoebottom and Mrs. Robert Hardy. Games of auction employed the afternoon, Mrs. Woodruff holding high scores.

Marriage of Miss Boos.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Boos of No. 1668 South Ardmore street of the marriage of their daughter, Virginia, to Pryor Moore. Rev. J. M. Schaefle read the lines at the bride's parents' home on Wednesday at noon, in the presence of twenty guests. At the conclusion of their wedding tour the bridal couple will be at home to their friends.

At the Bird Cage Shop.

Every day at the Bird Cage Shop, over which Mmes. Samuel Storrow, Michael Connell, Ralph Williams and numerous other society women preside, Miss Katherine Banning and Mrs. Alfred Wright devote their time selling "Bill's Comfort Bags" and "Bill's Comfort Kits," which are designed and made by Miss Banning and her mother, Mrs. J. B. Banning.

Devotees of the tearoom are splendid patrons and usually purchase a kit as a present for some "uniformed" tea guest.

Numerous pretty girls assisted in making the tea and vaudeville programme there Friday a decided social success. Among those who poured tea after they had devoted hours to cutting surgical bandages were Misses Marion Denovin, Mabel Seeley, Byna Kinsley and Mmes. Theodore Cadwalader, Raymond Bradford and Edwin Janss. Others there and who work in the shop every day, included Mmes. Hancock Banning, J. W. Danziger, Franklyn Booth, Titian Coffee, Keating, C. H. Jeffras, Fawkner and numerous others.

At the "Dugout."

At her home, which she has named the "Dugout," in compliment to the army and navy men stationed near, Mrs. G. H. Meredith of No. 1848 Magnolia place, Hollywood, is at home every Sunday to twenty of these patriots, and as many attractive girls. She is always assisted by her daughter, Miss Miriam Meredith, who wrote the pageant, "Columbia Calls."

At the last "Dugout" party the following young folk were present: Misses Anita King, Leola Lorraine, Bernice Blinn, Marjorie Blinn, Ruth Taylor, Gladys Cosgrove, Helen Riley, Maude Adams, Florence Adams, Isiballe Percival, Mae Fallan, Mary Randall, Marjorie Riley, Carmel Meyers, Helen Jesmer, Zasie Pitts, Jean Melville, Miriam Meredith and Sergt. Robert Lee, Corp. Edward Morrison and Corp. Fred Burnworth, Privates Jack Whitney, Reddy Greve, Errol Wilson, Carl Ryder, J. Robert Turner, Earl Barton, Pete Bravender, Thomas Hossler, Sam Latta and Jack Tars Don Forker and LeRoy Carver.

Coronado Opening.

The opening of the winter season at Hotel del Coronado yesterday was one of the most charmingly-arranged affairs in the history of the famous watering place, where fashion, wealth and beauty assemble each year for recreation and pleasure. The tea tables arranged in the beautiful "lounge" of the ballroom were taken by leaders in the social world, who had arranged gay parties of friends, and at almost every table were one or more of Uncle Sam's men—army and navy officers from the aviation camp, cantonment and Naval Reserve, who had taken the opportunity to thoroughly enjoy the hour.

Among the noted guests were Col. and Mrs. Sidney C. Hedges of Boston, Col. and Mrs. Willard French, Mrs. Walter Hamlin Dupee, Mrs. Claus Spreckels, Mrs. John D. Spreckels, Mrs. Allan Olsen, Mrs. Whiting, Mrs. Dussand, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. William Barrie, Mrs. William G. Deveraux, Mrs. Frederick B. Hussey and Mrs. Kirby Crittenden of San Francisco, Col. Thornwell Mullally, Miss Susan Mullally, Mrs. Gale Thompson, Mrs. Percival Thompson, Admiral William F. Fullam, Col. and Mrs. George B. Pillsbury, Capt. and Mrs. Charles Snyder, Maj. and Mrs. Henry J. Damm, Maj. and Mrs. Hartz, Mrs. George H. Cameron, Miss Margaret Cameron, Miss Jean Boyd, Miss Marjorie Dilworth, Miss Lind Jessop, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney J. McDonogh, Lieut. and Mrs. Robert Gilpin Ervin, Mrs. L. C. Bertolette and hundreds of others, the ballroom and adjacent reception-rooms being taxed to their limit to accommodate the guests who crowded the halls and lobby.

There were numberless dinner parties given afterwards preceding the usual Saturday night ball, for which the Hotel del Coronado has made an enviable reputation, the dining-room presenting a most charming picture of daintily-gowned debutantes and exquisitely-garbed matrons, together with the officers of the army and navy, who always form a great feature of the pleasing picture. The music for the dancing was furnished by the prize band from the U.S.S. Oregon through the courtesy of Admiral Fullam.

Miss Jean Miller, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leaveritt Miller of San Diego, and Capt. Lapham Loomis Brundred, U. S.A., whose wedding Tuesday evening in St. Paul's Church will be one of the brilliant military events of the season, is being much entertained before the wedding day. John J. Hernan gave a "camouflage dinner" in their honor Friday evening, the table being arranged in the green banquet-room, which was "camouflage" from the exterior, interior, table and even the dishes served were shrouded in "camouflage."

Home Wedding.

A very pretty but quiet home wedding occurred on the evening of the 6th inst., when Mrs. Harriett Reed Harrell was married to Mr. W. W. Wiggins of Los Angeles at the home of the bride, No. 457 East Second street, with Rev. B. D. Snudden of the First Methodist Church officiating.

The house was decorated with a profusion of delicate greenery and white carnations, and the ceremony was performed beneath a beautiful white wedding bell. The bride wore a lovely gown of white lace and net. An interesting feature connected with the ring was the fact that it was made from gold taken from a mine once owned by her.

On the Saturday afternoon following the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Wiggins received at their home for their friends. They held a reception from 2 to 5 o'clock for the ladies of the W.C.T.U., the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. Church and the Sisterhood class, with the husbands, and in the evening for the I.O.G.T. and other friends.

For New Year's Eve Party.

Members of the Sierra Madre Club are making gala preparations for their annual New Year's evening midnight supper and dance, and already so many reservations have been received that it portends a larger crowd than ever. Many of the members are entertaining large parties at that special function.

Buffet Dances Discontinued.

Wishing to leave the way clear for patriotic enterprises, the management of the Hotel Alexandria has decided to discontinue the Monday-night buffet dances.

For Engaged Girl.

Miss Esther Lowe, a social favorite of the younger set, whose marriage to Howard H. Spencer will take place some time in January, was honoree Thursday evening at a theater and supper party, which Miss Annie Hook gave.

The supper was given at the Alexandria and the supper table was arranged with a profusion of flowers in the national colors. Tiny cupids marked places for Misses Lowe, Dorothy Hook, Margaret Smith, Lucile Spencer, Catherine Sanborn; Lieut. and Mrs. Spright Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Hook, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson O. Gibbs, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Wheeler, Jr., Mrs. I. Spencer and Messrs. Frank Farrell, Howard Spencer, Percy Howland, Willis Hunter, Shepherd King and William Alexander. Miss Hook will be one of Miss Lowe's bridesmaids. Since her engagement was announced Miss Lowe has been honoree at numerous prenuptial events.

Matinee Party.

Mrs. A. L. Swobdi Meade of No. 803 South Manhattan place entertained half a hundred kiddies from the Los Angeles Orphanage at a matinee party Saturday to see "Alice in Wonderland," which was given for the Orphans' Home.

Marriage Announced.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Alice E. Herron and Edmund C. Irion. The ceremony took place at the home of Rev. J. Irion, who officiated. Later, a wedding reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Herron on Second street.

Card party.

Mrs. A. L. Lewis was hostess recently at a charming card party at her home, No. 241 South Kenwood street, that was of two-fold interest. Thirteen tables of auction bridge were played, Mrs. George Mitchell winning high score and Mrs. A. W. Bridge, second. Aside from this pleasant diversion the affair was also a financial success, assuring the purchase of yarn from which sweaters will be made for boys who for any reason may not already be provided with them. This is a little private scheme under the supervision of Mrs. Cora Nichols, who has secured the voluntary aid of a number of ladies.

Wonderful yellow marigolds predominated in the floral decorations of the rooms, while the national colors were much in evidence, at the same time the plan of the afternoon was carried out on lines of simplicity in accordance with the patriotic idea of conservation. The following hostesses assisted Mrs. Lewis in entertaining: Mmes. C. O. Pulliam, Herbert Smith, D. H. Smith, Herman Paine, Stephen C. Packer, J. L. Flint, H. H. Faries, Everitt Barnes, W. E. Guthrie, Cross and Mrs. H. A. Strothoff of Los Angeles. Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Walter Purviance of Los Angeles and Mrs. An-

COMES TO MOROSCO; MASON TO GET "MISS SPRINGTIME."

Mason.

A worthy successor to "The Merry Widow," so said the New York Evening Telegram, and so said 447,000 people in New York and 375,000 people in Boston, who were enthralled by Klaw & Erlanger's musical comedy triumph of the past season, "Miss Springtime." This great production comes to this city for one week only, beginning Monday, December 24, and will be seen was presented for the long runs of New York and Boston. There are seventy-five people in the company that Klaw & Erlanger are sending us and at the head of this organization will be seen Frank McIntyre, Zoe Barnett, George Leon Moore, Harrison Brockbank, Hattie Burks, Frank Doane, Mae Hennessy, W. F. Nunn, Alice Gaillard, George Fox, Charles De Haven and Harry Braham. The chorus is abundantly supplied with pretty girls, who possess splendid singing voices. "Miss Springtime" is favored with a brisk, witty story, which with its haunting melodies carries a tremendous appeal to all lovers of light musical entertainment. Mail orders for this engagement are now being received and filled in the order of their receipt.

Bertha Mann in "Capt. Kidd, Jr." Morosco.

Jacqueline, Orpheum.

Zoe Barnett in "Miss Springtime," coming to Mason.

Carol Holloway in "The Fighting Trail," Pantages.

Pekin Imperial String Quintette, Burbank.

Morosco.

Beginning with today's matinee at the Morosco Theater, Oliver Morosco will offer for the first time in stock the famous New York comedy success, "Captain Kidd, Jr." For more than a year this remarkable comedy has been playing with tremendous success in New York. Practically everyone who is at all acquainted with theatrical affairs, knows of the unusual success won by "Captain Kidd, Jr." It was written by Rida Johnson Young, author of many other successes. Its story is suggested by its title, for it is based upon an earnest search for a supposed treasure. Fred J. Butler, stage director, promises a production and cast that will be the equal in every respect of its New York predecessor. The cast will include such well-known Morosco favorites as Bertha Mann, Harland Tucker, Richard Dix and others.

Orpheum.

Musical extremes will about meet at the Orpheum the week before Christmas, beginning Monday matinee. For in decided contrast to the dainty and fetching Kouns girls, Nellie and Sara, who remain over, comes the big, blatant and bizarre jazz act of Sophie Tucker and her five syncopation kings. Sophie, who is no stranger here, is the embodiment of ragtime and jazz, and her musicians exemplify it and nothing else. Sophie and her jazzists will top the Orpheum bill all alone. Max Cooper and Irene Ricardo, in a singing skit, "Aw Gimme th' Ring," will be another new feature. Frank Westphal announces that "he isn't a regular actor" and one is forced to believe it because he doesn't act; he simply comes on the stage and amuses himself—and the audience—at a great rate. Bert Baker, who writes as well as he acts, appears with his company in his newest skit, "Prevarication." Billy Lloyd and G. F. Britt have a double act, appearing in a mixture of vaudeville, and Roy Harrel and Jacquelina—a little beauty of whom you see a lot—appear on skates and show the latest turns and twists. The only holdovers are the Misses Kouns, who are a singing sensation here, and Jean Adair & Co. in "Maggie Taylor, Waitress." There will, of course, be the usual fine orchestral music and the Pathe exclusive news views. Trixie Friganza says farewell tonight, to the regret of everyone.

At the legitimate theaters

This week. "Miss Springtime" comes to the Mason, "Captain Kidd, Jr.," to the Morosco, Sophie Tucker to the Orpheum, and other clever attractions.

Pantages.

The sensational equestrian act presented by Lillian Aurora and her lion, d'Artagnan, will furnish the headline and the sensation of the bill at Pantages the coming week. Mlle. Aurora presents a remarkable "happy family," including a Nubian lion, the lion's poodle companion, Chocolate, a horse, and, of course, herself. Wilson brothers, two of the best-like comedians that ever toured Pantages circuit, will mark another emphasized turn on the bill. Lord and Fuller—here is a novelty offering combining nonsense and skill. Parsons and Irvin are two artists with a novelty comedy surprise. "The Fireside Reverie" is a merry musical comedy. Jack Princeton is featured in the lead, with an adequate supporting cast, including a number of lively and pretty chorus girls. She offers a number of sunny songs and sayings. Pearl S. Keller will present Merna and Merle Kahler, two tiny tots who are more than certain to please Pantages patrons. Pantages' popular screen queen, Carol Holloway, will be seen in an exceptionally interesting episode of "The Fighting Trail."

Burbank.

Vaudeville, written in big letters and worthy of more than passing notice, comes with the new variety bill at the Burbank Monday. There will be Roth, Rosse and company, four clever performers, presenting "The Music Master." Steamboat Stewart, bringing an inimitable "munetic monologue," includes in his repertoire every conceivable imitation. Hunter and Shaw are two clever young girls. Schock and his dog will also entertain. What will be the feature of the bill, however, is the engagement of the Peking Imperial Chinese Quintette, presenting one of the most gorgeous acts the Burbank has offered in many days. The feature first-run photoplay is "Fighting Mad," with the versatile William Stowell, supported by Helen Gibson and Betty Schade. December 24 is announced as the opening of the transcontinental vaudeville road show.

WATCHED FOR GUARD.

When Ray Griffith, Triangle-Keystone comedian, first saw the massive iron gates in front of the Triangle Culver City studios, to which the comedy forces have moved this week, he said he expected to see an armed guard pacing back and forth in front of the place.

Reviews.

FRAGRANT BYPATHS TO PLEASANT PLAYS.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, with his golden mane, his clear mind and iron will, went to the baths to see a man the people were talking about. Diogones lay upon a marble slab in the sunlight, his eyes fixed in the depths of the pool. At his side paused the great King. "What can I do for thee?" Alexander put the question as one possessed of every good thing, and Diogones, answering as one himself having nothing to ask, said, "Move a little out of my sunlight."

In "Pollyanna" at the Mason the past week there was a man with a grouch, and because his disposition was sick, he had a physician for his body. One day a little girl came and taught him the way of gladness. She unlocked the gloomy vaults of his heart and joy entered them. She opened the musty corridors of his brain and the fresh air of sanity swept them. She threw open the wide windows of his dark castle and the blessed sunlight fell in golden plenitude upon the long-dismal rugs that carpeted the dank floors. The man breathed again and looked up at the light. Now, light in itself is nothing, and cannot be seen, yet by it all else is seen. The girl set a prism in the open door in the sun, and the light threw a rainbow on the wall. The man's physician came in. "What can I do for you this morning?" he asked; and the man answered, "Step over there, out of my rainbow."

This little Pollyanna had a great knack for curing sick-mindedness by chasing away negative thoughts and feelings that invited the spirit of heaviness, through the simple process of inspiring the victim with positive thoughts of gladness. Gratitude is the first step in elevation.

"Pollyanna" was really a story and not a play, and its success demonstrates the manner in which moving pictures have prepared the public mind for story-telling in every form. Ten years ago no manager of spoken drama would have produced this play, and even five years ago it would have failed dismally. Today it comes to us a story in scenes without a single pertinent dramatic situation, and a story with a very distinct fault, yet it has pleased all America with its message of happiness.

Every drama on the stage or on the screen is to be enjoyed to that degree in which it has the power to arouse consciousness in us.

All plays invite the mind into many bypaths in which we may roam some little ways without diverting our attention from the plot and its unfolding.

In one play last week two of the characters were drinking a toast, and their glasses were laved with the light of melted rubies, which meant that the liquid delight contained grenadine.

Now this syrup is often made from crushed pomegranate seed, so for a minute the bypath in which I strayed was among the pomegranate groves at Tempe, between Mesa and Phoenix, in the beautiful and abundant Salt River Valley, beneath the great Tonto Dam, far up in the Hills of God.

So I sat there seeing the pomegranate blossoms that are like sound orchids, and I saw the flaming oleanders of a dozen colors and exquisite shadings; I saw the Arizona State Normal, which pomegranates, oleanders, date palms and umbrella trees surround at Tempe; I saw a girl in white steal down the dormitory steps in the moonlight and meet a youth, who was wearing that most becoming of all uniforms which our nation now toasts with its tears—and then I came back to the play, for the glasses clinked, and one of the actors said: "Here's to the ill-health of the village."

Probably this faculty of inspiring me with many outside thoughts was the chief factor in my hearty enjoyment of Isadora Duncan. Her mind was filled with wonderful pictures, and I saw them in her mind rather than in her work.

For me it was precisely like walking into a wonderful gallery with walls that were hung with many masterpieces of art.

Supping from one picture of flaming vision to the next I hardly knew that we were looking at a dance, and the next day I was perfectly astonished when somebody complained to me that the lady wore scarcely any clothes. It woke me up to the fact that I probably would not have noticed it had she worn no clothes at all, to the fact that I had watched the dance with my eyes shut, and had merely had a visit with her artist's mind.

Afterward I asked L. E. Behymer, who was responsible for bringing the attraction here, where she came from, and where the director of the symphony, Oscar Spirescu, belonged on the map.

Mr. Behymer's answer was something to remember and to think about. He said: "They both belong to the Republic of Art. This republic is above all others, having its place somewhere between the earth and the stars. In it kings are as good as citizens, and citizens are as good as kings, or they never would be there at all."

George Bernard Shaw is amazingly sane when he writes, but I wonder what he does to preserve his sanity when he sees himself acted.

All of you have seen "How He Lied to Her Husband," and you have noticed that the poet's way of making love to the wife, and the poet's embarrassment when confronted by the husband always get the emphasis.

This is very absurd, because the whole idea of the play is Shaw's tremendous joke on society in the way the husband takes it.

When the husband comes home with a bundle of the poet's poems to his wife he is not angry at all, but is bursting with pride. The only minute that he is in the least disgruntled is when the poet denies the dedication of the verses. Finally the poet is pinned down to where he admits his guilt and boasts his love, whereupon the husband is again radiant.

You see he really loved his wife, and could not understand why every other man would not and should not love and admire the lady of his selection. What he wanted to talk to that poet about was not how far the matter had gone between the poet and his wife, or how far it might go. Not for a minute. He merely wanted to arrange for the suitable publication of those poems with full and appropriate dedication to the lady of his pride.

Shaw's idea of a wife is not a veiled creature of the East, but a woman with shining face in the full revelation of its beauty, worthy of s" admiration and commanding it. His idea of a husband is a man who would be miserable unless his wife were the toast of the city.

Are we not by way of developing the one-act play in America to a state of rare perfection?

Ruth Comfort Mitchell's "Sweetmeat Game" is Chinese in atmosphere and character, but American in form, and a dramatic gem.

Susan Glaspell's "Trifles" is big drama, and approaches the greatness of Ibsen and of Synge. It demonstrates that a one-act play may be stark, naked and sordid, and still possess fire and wonder.

Such creations are hopeful signs of American form, vitality and inspiration.

ORPHEUM PLANS FOR NEW YEAR'S EVE.

The Orpheum announces two shows for New Year's Eve this year, besides the usual afternoon matinee, and as New Year's Eve comes on Monday, which means a forenoon of rehearsal for the incoming acts, it looks like an all day and night session for the troupers that day. The first night show will begin at 7:45 o'clock, and the second at 9:15 o'clock, and both will be the full and complete programme. Seats will be sold for each separately, and will be reserved as usual. These seats will go on sale a week ahead, or Monday, December 24. But meanwhile, the Orpheum will accept mail orders for New Year's Eve if those wishing reservations will inclose with their request a money order or bank draft (no personal checks;) the war tax, and a return stamped envelope. Also, they are asked to specify clearly which show they prefer, and the approximate location of seats desired.

ART BROTHERHOOD.

Krotona Organization is Founded at Headquarters of the Theosophical Society.

In Hollywood, at Krotona—the American headquarters of the Theosophical Society—a new and unique art club has sprung into being. Its name is the Krotona Brotherhood of Art. This new brotherhood of art is not a social organization, nor was it organized for financial gain; its motives are purely altruistic. Among other activities, free concerts are given every month at Krotona, by artists who render their services gratuitously. Love for art alone actuates both performers and listeners in the interpretation and reception of the messages of the master composers.

To realize these purposes monthly meetings are held at Krotona, at which papers on various arts are read by some professional member, after which the subject is thrown open to general discussion. Nonresident members also contribute papers and reviews. These meetings are open to members only. A resume of the more important papers and discussions will be published in The Messenger, the Theosophical monthly.

Membership in the Krotona Brotherhood of Art is open to all interested in its objects. Its officers are: Charles Wakefield Cadman, the eminent American composer, president; Frederick W. Kuphal, vice-president; Orlando D. Goerz, secretary; J. Henry Orme, treasurer, and Mrs. Hanny van Vliet, manager. Any information regarding the brotherhood and its activities will be gladly furnished by any of the officers.

The next programme to be given under the auspices of the K.B.A. will be a concert Wednesday evening, December 19, at 7:30 o'clock, in the temple at Krotona, by Mr. and Mrs. Thilo Becker, the popular artists so well known in Los Angeles. These will be assisted by Mrs. W. Yorke Stevenson of Philadelphia.

USEFUL INVENTIONS.

By a French invention naphthaline has been made available for automobile fuel, pipes conveying hot exhaust gases from a specially designed carburetor which has been primed with gasoline melting the napthaline.

A Frenchman has invented a watch on which a single hand, carrying a numeral to designate the hour, travels across a semicircular scale with the minute marks, then disappears and is succeeded by another hand for the next hour.

A brake for automobiles using mountain roads that an Oregon man has patented resembles a small harrow and drives spikes into the ground when a lever is pulled.

To clean the outside of ships an Englishman has invented a big scrubbing brush driven by an electric motor while vessels are in port without them being drydocked.

The first submarine cable was one that made communication possible between Calais and Boulogne, on one side of the English Channel, and Dover on the other. This experiment is interestingly commented upon by the London Illustrated News in its issue for August 18, 1849.

An electrical society has listed more than 3000 uses for electricity, embracing 109 trades and industries.

To double a freight car's capacity for automobiles a Kansan has invented a deck that, when loaded, is lifted by four pistons operated by an electrically driven oil pump, after which more automobiles can be loaded beneath it.

To enable those unacquainted with any sign language to converse with deaf-mutes a Frenchman has invented a device resembling a typewriter which raises letters to spell words as keys are pressed.

"The Auction Block."

REX BEACH NEVER WRITES A NOVEL SITTING DOWN.

FIGURATIVELY speaking, Rex Beach never writes a novel sitting down; he does all his work standing up. He is not a writing-desk novelist, bound by rules of plot or geometrically calculating patterns of story telling. When Rex Beach tells a story he must have lived the greater part of it with the characters and in the environment he pictures.

When you read his stories of the Northwest, of Alaska, of New York, of the plains, of the West, you need not be told that the people are living people, that his plot isn't plot, but life. Rex Beach fries his bacon or opens his wine with the characters before they ever reach the paper or the screen.

With this knowledge of his method of working it is interesting to analyze "The Auction Block," which today enters upon its second tremendous week at Quinn's Rialto. It is in this novel that Rex Beach has most successfully depicted a phase of life popularly supposed to be somewhat strange to his pen—the under side of life in a great city; the goings on in the back stairways of the swiftly moving, curiously fascinating existence of people who get into newspapers through scandal and the courts.

"The Auction Block" is a dress suit story piped with blackmail and thuggery—a story of greed, great love, temptation, faltering and redemption. It concerns the life in New York's night of the wondrously beautiful daughter of a crooked small town politician and a shrewd calculating mother. A beautiful flower sprung from the mud—a throwback to some effulgent generation submerged in a succession of tarnished ones, and it is with this girl's adventures in a world of money lust and woman lust that Rex Beach has concerned himself in his story. The impression that Mr. Beach must have probed deeply beneath the surface of life he wrote about is heightened as the story goes on. The visualization of this gripping tale on the screen leads one to believe that a girl had really lived the part, and that Rex Beach borrowed her rather than created her for his picture.

Reaching into actuality the author also molded the character of a steel millionaire, self-made by careful disregard for the rights and liberties of ordinary humans—a cool, cruel, cunning schemer with but one weakness—women. And it is this weakness which eventually brings him tumbling to destruction at the hands of one whose father, a poor steel mill workman, gave his life to feed the gluttony of the millionaire for achievement.

Rex Beach drew his other characters as faithfully. The young son of the millionaire, a drunkard, waster and debauchee, buying the young girl in a frenzy of drunkenness, dragged into the mire, and awakened at the borderland of [illegible] when the wonderful love of the girl fetches him to his senses; the girl he bought, lovely Lorelei, as fresh as dewy roses on May morning, honest in all dealings, and absolutely believing in the regeneration of her loved. And last, but not least, the enchanting little love story of Desiree, the dancer, who is engaged to the grouchy dramatic critic, who calls him down, and finds to her surprise that she is falling in love with him.

Washington's Greatest Factory.

One of the most interesting features of Washington's growth is the development of the great naval gun factory. This plant has been growing from the old navy yard, with its two towering ship-houses in which men-o'-war were constructed [illegible] was thirty or more years ago one of the interesting points of the capital. Its extension has been great and now it is one of the most important places of government manufacture in the country, a model institution. The personnel, [illegible] from 3000 to 8000 in the course of developments in the past year, [illegible] soon to expand to 12,000, and perhaps more as the war [illegible] require. An appropriation of [illegible] 000 is now being expended in enlargement that will carry the boundaries of the factory far beyond their old limits and gain a large group of new buildings.

Thus enlarged, the naval gun factory will be pre-eminently Washington's chief industrial center. Its expansion is only a type of what the war has brought to the capital in point of growth. Nearly every department has expanded, the Government Printing Office and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing feeling a heavy increase of work. The clerical bureaus have also been called upon for more people.

In one respect the capital is fortunate in its industrial development over most cities. The workers brought here from elsewhere or developed locally to man such plants as the gun factory are of a superior class. The community cannot but thrive through such additions to its working force, and Washington welcomes the prospect of the [illegible] of the gun factory's [illegible] ment.—[Washington Star.

SOCIETY.

derson of Chicago, who is the guest of Mrs. William Harvey.

Formal Dance.

Autumnal flowers in all their vivid coloring, against a stately background of palms, with the beautiful gowns of the ladies, lent charm at a formal dance given at the Sierra Madre Club Thursday evening. Many large parties were present, as many of the members take this means of entertaining their numerous friends. This was the second dance of the season, and the management promises to make them more frequent if so desired.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Baldwin, whose marriage was a recent social event, are expected here for the holidays from San Francisco to be guests of Mrs. Baldwin's mother, Mrs. Davis Richardson, and sister, Mrs. Lloyd Mills. Before her marriage Mrs. Baldwin was Miss Jane Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. Jasper D. Kellogg of Lincoln, Neb., have returned to Los Angeles, where they will spend their fifth winter. They are at the Huntley apartments. Others there for the winter are Mr and Mrs William Ely, Mrs. H. M. McGuire, and Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Alms of North Dakota; Mrs. D. H. Curry and daughter of Mason City, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs James Ryan, Jr., and family of Winnipeg, Can.

Dr. and Mrs. John S. Tanner of Pasadena, who have been in Washington and other points in the East, are now in San Francisco at the Fairmont Hotel.

Miss Frances Wagner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wagner of No. 423 West Adams street, who is a student at Stanford, will arrive here shortly for a ten days' visit during the holidays. A number of social functions will be given in her honor.

Mrs. Sheplar Ward Fitzgerald, formerly Miss Adeline Kellogg, daughter of the late Giles Kellogg and Mrs. Kellogg, is planning a visit here during the holidays. At present she is at the Kellogg place in Coronado. She is the wife of Maj. Fitzgerald, who when she married him was a lieutenant.

Miss Lucy Langdon, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Langdon of No. 841 South Alvarado street, will be here from Stanford for the holidays, and so will Miss Mildred Roome, who is a student there also.

Mrs. Frank Shrier and daughter, Miss Mabel Shrier of Seattle, have returned to this city on a visit and have taken apartments in the Westlake district. Mr. Shrier was well known here where he was a popular business man. Mrs. Shrier and her daughter have been traveling around the world.

Artist at Club.

Mrs. John L. von Blon entertained members of the Woman's Press Club at its meeting Tuesday, with a group of songs. This young artist possesses a voice of limpid quality and great carrying power, which she uses with artistic feeling. There is a varied play of tone color throughout her work, which makes for individuality and vividness. The "Ouvre tes Yeux Bleus" of Massenet and the "Spirit Flower" of Campbell-Tipton were lovely.

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY

Pasadena.

THERE was a large gathering of Pasadena society people at the home of Mrs. Albert Sherman Hoyt on Buena Vista street last Wednesday afternoon to hear the opera, "Cinderella," as presented by Sidney Francis Hoben. Advance interest had been aroused in this work by the success won by Mary Garden in the East, and all expectations were fully satisfied by the performance. Mr. Hoben left on Thursday for a visit in Santa Barbara.

An interesting recital was given in the palmroom of the Hotel Maryland on last Wednesday night by the pupils of Miss Grace Adele Freebey, pianiste, and Mme. Constance Balfour, soprano. Those taking part in the programme, with their instructors, were Misses Rubi Jones, Stella Seager, Miriam Hills, Leta Nash, Isabel Smith, Tiny Crouch, Ruth Foster and Bessie Crouch.

On last Thursday afternoon Albert Tufts, recently of Denver, gave an organ recital of more than ordinary interest and merit in All Saints Church. Mr. Tufts has been giving a series of these recitals through the State, principally in the northern section.

A number of personal friends gathered at the home of Mrs. J. A. Freeman, No. 1330 Hillcrest avenue, last Monday afternoon to hear a very interesting travelogue on Italy by Miss Marthine M. Dietrichson. Through extensive travel in that country and constant correspondence with friends, Miss Dietrichson was able to give her hearers an intimate view of the great drama now set in the Alps, and to pay an appreciative tribute to the spirit of the Italians during the time of overwhelming stress. Henry Edmund Earle complimented the speaker by giving the beloved "Spring Song" and the initial performance of one of his own compositions. Miss Genevieve Church Smith added a group of Italian folk songs.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Rau of No. 291 North El Molino avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Ella Louise, to Harold Hammond Cozens of Encinitas, Cal. The young people graduated from the University of California in 1915 and took their masters' degrees the following year. Since that time Mr. Cozens has been supervisor of history in the University High School until called into the government service. He is now located at Camp Lewis and the wedding will probably take place at Tacoma during the Christmas holidays.

In order to participate in the Halifax relief work, Mrs. H. J. Webb of No. 335 North Lake avenue gave a benefit five hundred party last Thursday afternoon. There was as large an attendance as could be accommodated, and a considerable sum was realized for the sufferers.

Miss Lucy Cutler of No. 725 South

The Tuesday musicale regular monthly recital was given at the accustomed time in the auditorium of the Neighborhood House. Scandinavian composers and their music was the especial theme for this occasion and from this rich field some of the finest numbers were culled. The programme was in charge of Miss Elizabeth Streeter and Miss Mabel Patton.

South Pasadena.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE and its life formed a most interesting topic of conversation at a luncheon given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. David A. Vail of No. 1830 Spruce street in honor of her niece, Miss Mary Foster, a graduate of Wellesley. Pink was the color motif of decoration. Cecile Brunner rose-

SOCIETY.

Santa Monica and now of Sherman, were given a double surprise party Saturday evening on the occasion of their twentieth wedding anniversary. A party from the beach found a party in Sherman bound on the same mission and the two joined forces and thus doubled the fun.

Venice.

MISS LAURA ANDERSON, daughter of W. H. Anderson, was married very recently to Lieut. Lee Slessinger. The wedding took place in Palo Alto. The bride was a senior at Stanford and had planned to finish her course there, but government orders to Lieut. Slessinger determined the young people to be married immediately. Mrs. Slessing is a great granddaughter of John C. Calhoun, and Lieut. Slessinger, who is with the artillery branch of the service, is the great nephew of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Miss Gladys Hunter is receiving congratulations on the success of the bi- soldiers' and sailors' benefit given Saturday evening in the Elks' clubhouse in Santa Monica. Miss Hunter planned and carried out all the arrangements for the patriotic affair. Miss Katrine de la Monte was wonderful as a soprano soloist, especially in the "Arabian Love Song." Miss Taylor rendered some exquisite music from a fine old Cremona violin. Little Cherub Heap was unusually sweet and graceful in a spring dance. Paul Taylor was pleasing in his rendition of Schubert's "Serenade." Miss Edna Bryant proved to be a most accomplished piano soloist, and Mrs. Horace Taylor's readings were well received, her description of an old Dutchman interpreting the scriptures being especially amusing. Some forty dollars was cleared.

The children's Saturday parties at the Venice dance pavilion are being made more merry these days by the addition of attractions furnished by Al Barnes, whose circus is wintering in Venice. The kiddies love to ride up and down the pier on the Arabian ponies and to caress the baby animals that the keepers bring over for their amusement. A clown carnival is soon to be given for the Bay Cities' children.

On the evening of December 5 the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs of the San Fernando Lodge had an entertainment in honor of home-coming night. Five of the lodge members are now members of the United States Army, four of whom sent letters to be read at the meeting, while Lieut. Glen Chamberlyn, who was present, gave a very interesting talk on army life. Other splendid talks were given during the evening. Rebekahs furnished one of their prize banquets.

Tuesday night the Rebekahs of the San Fernando lodge gave another of their most enjoyable parties. Dancing and cards, besides a delightful musical programme, was enjoyed by the large crowd that attended.

On Thursday evening Miss Lucy Prince, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Prince of Lankershim, became the bride of Howard S. Shimmin of Fort MacArthur and a graduate of the U.S.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Shimmin of San Fernando. The house was beautifully decorated in carnations, ferns and flags. The bride and maid of honor, Miss Margaret Herron, were gowned in military dresses, both carrying carnations and ferns. The groom and best man, Arnold Schaetzae, both wore their uniforms. The wedding march was played by the bride's sister, Mrs. Henry Myers, while Rev. Otis D. Ironmonger of the Presbyterian Church of San Fernando performed the ceremony. The Ecclesia and Anthenaeum literary societies of the High School entertained for the Lyceum and Forum on Saturday evening, and a programme of great merit was given. Harold Scott gave a piano selection, Alden Holmes made the welcoming talk, Miss Helen Ward gave a reading, and a short play was given by Ruth Cruickshank, Dot Pray, Harriet Herrin, Hope Clock, Helen Nelson, Marjorie Putnam, Louise Lambert, Stanley Ferguson, Warren Roach, Frank Rothganger, William Woodruff, Raymond Gaston and Charles Holmes.

Clinton Connick, the grand master of the Odd Fellows of this State, visited the local lodge Tuesday evening, and he was greeted by the Odd Fellows and their families. A programme of talks and music was given and the grand master was the honor guest at a delightful dinner.

The Kappa Sigma frat of the university entertained with a party for their girl friends at Forest Home, the resort in Mill Creek Canyon near here. The trip was made in automobiles in time for a trout dinner at 6 o'clock in the evening. Green and gold were used in the decorations, and the place cards were hand painted in these colors. Those present were Prof. and Mrs. S. Guy Jones, Misses Margaret Wilkes, Ruth Johnson, Ruth Blowers, Florence Wright, Margaret Curtis, Ora Wattenberg, Anne Campbell, Elizabeth Collins, Claire McPhee, Lorraine Murphy, Irene Finley, Dorothy Mitchell, Mabel Dye, Helen Barker, Clara Weber, Vernon Farquhar, Leesyl Trine, Curtis Sawyer, Stanley Silke, Leo Sievert, Raymond Untereiner, Leonard Cooper, Harold Loper, Perry Maynard, Merle Waterman, Rogert Truesdall, Emmanuel Jacobson, Horace Smith, Richard Lackey, James Leonard and Homer Gould. At the table there was a vacant chair draped with an American flag for the boys in the service. They are William Lockwood, Fred Fagg, Jr., William Backlun, J Walker Abbey, Don Mitchell, Louis Riggelsberger and Allan Whitney.

Miss Mildred McFarland, daughter of Mrs. George Lockwood of this city, and Jack H. Flinspach, the son of Mr. and Mrs. L J Flinspach of Fresno, formerly of this city, were married here yesterday. Mrs. Lockwood and Mre Horace Sternbergh attended them. They will make their home here.

Mrs. W. W. Tara entertained a group of her friends on Wednesday afternoon and the time was spent in working for the Red Cross. Those present were Mrs. H. N. Meacham, Mrs. W. W. Taylor, Mrs Charles Shallenberger, Mrs. Alex Wilson, Mrs. D. H. Frazer, Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. Collins, Mrs. F. Munhall, Mrs. Shaw and Mrs. Apgar.

Monrovia.

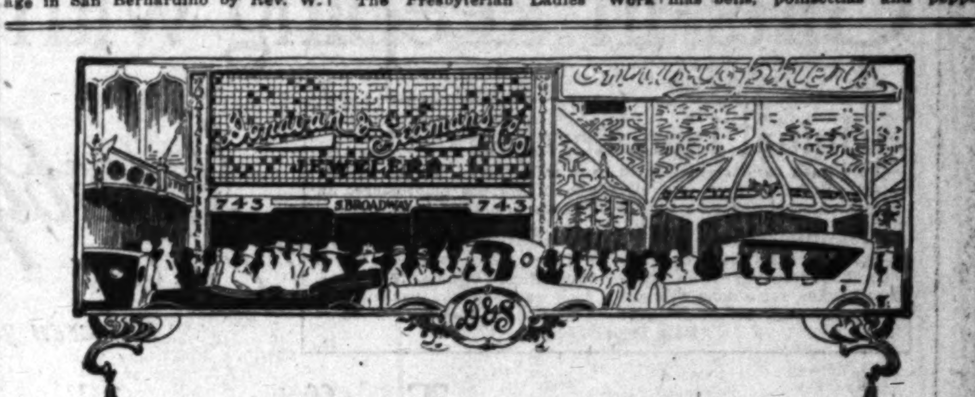
THE members of the Alpha and Foothill Bridge clubs were charmingly entertained on Tuesday by Mrs. J. Allen Munro at her home on West White Oak avenue. The approach of the holiday season was indicated by the use of holly in the pretty decorations. Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock, followed by an afternoon of bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. James Reynolds and Mrs. H. M. Lemons left on Tuesday by auto for Imperial Valley. They expect to return the latter part of the week.

Mrs. Catherine Garner of South Mayflower avenue and John Bulger of Colton, formerly of Monrovia, were quietly married at noon on Wednesday at the Methodist parsonage in San Bernardino by Rev. W. C. Geyer. Only a few immediate relatives were present to witness the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Bulger will make their home in Colton after February 1.

Mr. Charles Wooley of Los Angeles is spending a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Moon of North Magnolia avenue.

The Presbyterian Ladies' Work Society met on Thursday afternoon in the church parlors. Hostesses were the members of the society whose birthday occur in December, and included Mmes. J. R. Cutting, Byron Clark, M. L. Hutchinson, C. Loops, H. A. Fisk, C. H. Pierson and Miss May Robison. In evidence of the holiday season Christmas bells, poinsettias and pepper



Diamonds Are Incomparable Gifts

—and they are especially so if they come from the carefully selected Donavan & Seamans Co. stock.

Our holiday display of super-creations in diamond jewelry will keenly interest every discriminating gift-seeker.

More artistic designs in combinations of precious stones have never been shown in this city.

Included in the stock are exquisite ring creations in diamond and pearl combinations, and also diamonds combined with sapphires, with rubies and emeralds.

Our position as a buyer in the diamond market is quite unusual—we are one of the few concerns in America that buys on a strictly cash basis. We buy diamonds direct from the cutters at bed-rock prices—at the very lowest figures that ready cash will command.

Every purchaser of a Donavan & Seamans diamond reaps the benefit of our experience and diamond-buying ability. We have only one diamond standard—absolutely perfect blue-white stones.

MRS. A. L. BARBER,

Well-known Beauty Specialist, has a new and scientific method of removing wrinkles and facial blemishes, without the dangerous deep-wrinkle or paraffin filling. Massage and cosmetics, deep-wrinkle and filling have become antiquated since the introduction of this newest achievement.

The Barber treatment fills hollow cheeks, tightens the muscles, removes brown spots and freckles, giving you a skin like that of youth.

The treatment is original, scientific and painless. It does not keep you at home. The price is within the reach of all, and it takes ten years from your age.

mechanics engaged in building the scenery, the painters, the costume makers, and various members of the big staff of the New Amsterdam Theater, in New York, there were about 200 people devoting their entire time to the making ready of "Miss Springtime."

WHO'S WHO?

Let us peek into "who's who?" Guy Boltón is a prolific writer of musical comedy libretto and in four years of endeavor has a dozen important successes to his credit. Kalman is one of the foremost of European composers, being best recalled here for his "Sari" score. Wodehouse, a short story virtuoso, needs no introduction to readers of current magazine literature.

Julian Mitchell, it is said, has staged half of the big musical shows and spectacles New York has seen in the past decade. Joseph Urban knows no superior in America as a scenic artist.

Klaw and Erlanger, comprising that long and solidly established firm that has given America so many of its big musical productions, are particularly well and favorably known to every patron of the theater in the United States. And so to the cast:

Frank McIntyre, a comedian of Brobdingnagian proportions, under the direction of the late Henry B Harris, created the leading role in "The Traveling Salesman" and starred in the part for three years. Four years ago he cast his lot in musical comedy in "Oh, Oh Delphine."

Zoe Barnett, a native of Los Angeles, landed in the spotlight at the Princess in San Francisco, where she appeared in leading ingenue rôles in musical stock for two seasons, following the fire. For four years she has played important roles in light musical shows in the East, including the title part in "The Red Rose."

Hattie Burke relinquished the prima donna role of the Cocoanut Grove Review at the Century Theater, New York, to sing in "Miss Springtime." She was, previously, the prima donna of "The Blue Paradise" for a year on Broadway.

Frank Doane is a favorite Broadway comedian, "always found where the laughs are thickest," according to an eastern critic. He created, among other well-liked parts, that of the rooster in "Woodland."

Harrison Brockbank, the English baritone, who came over to this country to sing at one of the Cincinnati musical festivals, remained here to create roles in several of Victor Herbert's latest operetta successes, including "Sweet Sixteen," "The Enchantress" and "The Purple Road."

PRO AND CON.

When "Miss Springtime" made its great success in New York I read a story by P. G. Wodehouse in which he highly praised the ability of his co-writer, Guy Bolton, and it is worthy of repeating here.

"Bolton has revolutionized musical comedy to such an extent that all the other authors will have to improve their stuff or go back to box-stencilling. I feel a slight diffidence about growing enthusiastic about 'Miss Springtime.' The fact is, I contributed a few lyrical bijoux for which I am drawing a royalty which has caused the wolf to move up a few parasangs from the Wodehouse doorstep.

"Far be it from me to boast—through sordid motives—an entertainment whose success has meant the increase of my meat meals per week from one or two. But candor compels me to say that good as the Kalman music is, and artistic as the urban scenery, the bedrock upon which the success is founded is Bolton's book. It is sane and sincere and the humor with which it is crammed is distributed evenly instead of being laid on in isolated chunks."

Mr. Wodehouse is discreetly modest about his own activities. So I will give my opinion. P. G. Wodehouse is the most prolific and humorous writer of the stage today. When not turning out lyrics, novels or short stories, Mr Wodehouse—familiarly known to his intimates as "Chickens"—writes under six different signatures for a New York paper. One of his drollest and most entertaining serials was "Piccadilly Jim," which ran in the Saturday Evening Post. The wolf that hungrily stalks about the Wodehouse habitat is not likely to grow fat, unless the entertaining penman develops writer's cramp.

MY ONE HOPE.

I have constantly lived in the hope that at least one musical show would come to Los Angeles with a real chorus. Not that I prefer the chorus girls to the principals, but after witnessing the feeble attempts of some of the time-worn candidates for the bald-headed row's approval I have wished above all things that we might have a chorus that retained all the vim and vigor. Klaw & Erlanger promise an entire New York show of pep and action.

Walter Hearn adds his confidential tip, so I guess it is best to prepare for something exceptionally good.

Aye! Santa Knows!

—That if every woman was given an opportunity to express her real wishes about Christmas, we are sure that those wishes would be for something to wear, to dress up and look pretty in.

—She would probably say that she did not want a lot of useless hairpin holders, candlesticks, subscriptions to "Household Wonderful" and whats not. —Aye, Santa knows that!

But the Question Is—

Does Father, Brother, Husband, Uncle Know?

—In any case they should be tactfully reminded at once that the lov eliest gifts to give a woman are at the New York Store and some of the best things are greatly reduced. For example:

A New Coat

—And here we might say that the best way is to give the lady a merchandise order and let her come in and see just what she wants. —There are so many, many pretty styles that unless you know just what would please her most, you would be more safe in allowing her to pick it out.

—$29.75 Coats for $16.75, $35.00 Coats for $19.75, $75.00 Coats for $45.00 are Good Examples of the Savings.

A Party Frock

—No matter if she is sixteen or sixty, a woman always wants a fussy little dress to wear to social functions and with the holiday season coming she would be doubly as pleased to get one.

—There are Some Very Pretty, Youthful Party Frocks at Reduced Prices, $16.75, $18.75, $22.50 and $24.75.

All the Pure Silk Sweaters are Reduced 1/3

—The very best styles, received within the last ninety days.
—Most of them have large collars and wide belts.
—Rose, gold, lavender, green, white, pink and Copen. are the colors.

$35.00 Silk Sweaters	$23.35
$37.50 Silk Sweaters	$25.00
$39.50 Silk Sweaters	$26.35
$45.00 Silk Sweaters	$30.00
$55.00 Silk Sweaters	$36.65

A Pretty New Dress

—There is such a satisfaction in knowing that one does not always have to wear the same dress—that there is a fresh, stylish, becoming one hanging up in the closet ready for you to slip on when an invitation comes to go out for supper or to an informal gathering.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks will build the first great hospital in America for the rehabilitation of wounded men—where maimed and disfigured soldiers and sailors may receive the best of expert attention and occupational instruction.

The government has accepted a gift of $250,000 from the Elks for the establishment of the institution, the money having been taken from the $1,000,000 war fund raised by the membership of this organization. The site will serve as the model for similar plants to be established throughout the United States. The buildings will be thoroughly modern in architecture, light and cheerful, and will have a well-trained and efficient professional staff.

The Boy Scouts of America went well over the top in their campaign of "Every Scout To Save a Soldier." The youngsters in khaki raised just $101,132,600 in the second Liberty Loan Bond canvass in 525,527 subscriptions. This means $1 out of every $46 and one application signed out of every eighteen.

Five hundred dresses for girls between the ages of 6 to 14 years will be given to the poor little girls of San Antonio, Tex., as a Christmas gift from the Emil Blum Company. This is the fouth season that Mr. Blum has made such a gift to the children. The dresses will be turned over to the Christmas Cheer Association for distribution.

A sacrifice is being made by the Westover School of Connecticut. The girl members of this fashionable establishment have taken the pledge to eliminate all candy during the school year. After figuring up the expenditure for a year the girls came to the conclusion that a luxury which amounted to hundreds of dollars, besides using up sugar which should be conserved, was an extravagance of which they were ashamed. Several other fashionable schools are considering the same sacrifice.

The New York Hippodrome was crowded at the annual benefit performance for the New York American Christmas Fund, the purpose of which is to provide holiday cheer for the poor. Including the sale of programmes, the receipts were $9700, it was announced by the Hippodrome management.

Raymond Hitchcock was master of ceremonies. He announced that Fritz Kreisler, who was scheduled to apear, was suffering from a cold that affected his heart. Mme. Louise Homer and her daughter, Miss Louise Homer; Leopold Godowsky and Oscar Seagle, as well as many theatrical performers, provided the entertainment.

Chris Balfe, known in evangelistic circles as "Lucky Baldwin," who gave up a shiftless life on New York's Bowery to preach the gospel, has been going from place to place, helping in missionary work, since a night, nine years ago, when he dropped in at the McAuley Mission, near the Brooklyn Bridge, New York, and was so moved by the service that he decided to devote the remainder of his life to the work of lifting up "the down and outs."

"Lucky" is preparing to go to France to continue his work among her private apartments in the Quirinal Palace at the disposition of refugees from the invaded provinces, and especially of those children who have been separated from their parents.

Christmas will be carried into the hospitals this year by members of the Kansas City Community Chorus, who agreed to divide into groups and to give an hour's entertainment to the patients. Only songs of a seasonable nature and the national anthem will be sung. Following the singing of the carols, the chorus will assemble in Convention Hall and render the carols again for the public. Everybody will be invited to join in the "singfest" planned.

MARGUERITE CLARK'S SUB-DEB DELIGHTS.

"One of the greatest pleasures I have had while working on my 'sub-deb' pictures has been that I really portray upon the screen incidents that have actually happened to me as a girl." Thus spoke winsome little Marguerite Clark as she cuddled up onto the rear seat of the studio "location" car and prepared herself for a journey to "shoot an enterior" scene somewhere in New York State.

"Yes," continued the dainty miss, "I enjoy those little stories more than I can tell you. For instance, my first 'sub-deb' was Bab's Diary. Now nearly every girl has kept a diary and nearly all of them are filled from tip to bottom with sweet things pertaining to 'Him.' I still have my own diary, and by the way, it's not so old, either," smiled the charming Miss Clark.

"After 'Bab's Diary' came 'Bab's Burglar.' I can well remember the night when Mr. Burglar visited our home in Cincinnati and how the cold chills crept up and down my spine while I lay smothering beneath the bedclothes and father proceeded to remonstrate with Hon. Burglar. All I had to do in 'Bab's Burglar' was to think of that night and everything else was easy.

"Last, but far far from least, is the picture I am working on now—'Bab's Matinee Idol.' Not every girl has had the pleasure of a visit from a bold, bad burglar, but I would sincerely doubt if there is a girl in this land today who has never been "stage struck" or has never fallen helplessly in love with some hero of the footlights. Personally and at the age of 15, I fell violently in love with a handsome leading man. My own diary is filled with descriptions of "Him" and imaginary interviews that were really so screamingly funny and made such good reading matter that I thought seriously of publishing them, had not Mrs. Rinehart's Bab so paralleled them."

BAD MEN'S RECORDS.

Fatty Arbuckle Vows to Show the Western Gun-players how to Use a Six-shooter.

Fatty Arbuckle is going to hang out his sign reading "Contractor and Builder of Towns" after he finishes his new Western comedy, which is being filmed at Long Beach, Cal. Not that he wishes to go into business, but he feels that he deserves the title after the founding of the village of Jazzville in "A Country Hero," and now "Mad Dog Gulch."

Fatty is building this Western town on the early-day plan, which includes the saloon and dance hall, cafe, provisions store, Salvation Army headquarters, and such. There's no church in Mad Dog Gulch. It's a wild, bad town with a record that will put Dodge City, Cripple Creek and other enterprising but unhealthy communities in the shade.

Mad Dog Gulch is secreted in a prison of encircling mountains. Barring airplanes, the only way to get out of the town is through the canyon whence you came. Fatty Arbuckle superintended the construction of Mad Dog Gulch, and he says that all the well-known Western characters—Nugget Nell, Bad Bill Bullhorn, Red Eye Ike, the Faro Parson—figure in the activities of the mining camp.

Warning is issued to Bill Hart, Doug Fairbanks and all the two-gun men. When Fatty Arbuckle starts his gun play in cleaning up Mad Dog Gulch there's going to be such hard fighting and riding that these redoubtable heroes will have to get Bat Masterson, or Al Jennings or the doughty Colonel to uphold their bad reputations.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

WHEN Mrs. O. Shepherd Barnum presided at the Friday Morning Club in Mrs. Lobingier's stead on Friday she tickled the susceptibilities of the members by assuring them that the club was a breeding ground for leaders, citing the fact that the presidents of the national, State and district federation; to say nothing of numerous women prominent in other ways, were all Friday Morning Club members.

This is a positively superwoman idea to encourage. Think of a club of nearly 2000 members, all imbued with sumptuous consciousness of superwomanhood. As name after name of prominent Friday Club members was mentioned, one observed the responsive glow of prideful exaltation that permeated the audience. Every woman there must have felt she was a leader in the making, a leader whose leadership was merely postponed, owing to an embarrassing scarcity of more worlds to conquer. In fact, it would seem that our Friday Club is a sort of Presidio, an officers' training camp, in which the vast majority can be relied upon to qualify for at least a lieutenancy, later, with luck, rising to the dizzy distinction of captaincies and generalships.

At present, of course, the smaller clubs have an old-fashioned notion of electing their president from among themselves and when she has attained to any federation significance, she joins the Friday Club, and superwomanhood, as a matter of course. But it might reasonably prove much more effective and efficient and all that sort of thing, if presidents of other clubs were appointed by the Friday Club, guaranteed trained and equipped for their jobs.

Otherwise we shall have to create such a vast number of new cults to accommodate the embryo leaders with leaderships. The war is proving very helpful in this direction, of course, but there is going to be an awful slump when peace is declared and departments created for the duration of the war are automatically abolished.

Woman's City Club.

"The War-time Christmas Spirit" will be the subject of Rev. E. Stanton Hodgin's discourse at the Woman's City Club, tomorrow. Miss Margaret Lagrange will also give a brief talk on the needs of the Woman's Training Home, and Gurney Newlin will expound the subject of the next Red Cross drive.

Luncheon will be served at noon in Hamburger's Cafe and the programme will begin promptly at 1 p.m., in the auditorium on the fifth floor. This will be the last meeting until after the Christmas vacation.

Settlement House Benefit.

A large card party will be held in the Friday Morning clubhouse, Wednesday morning, for the benefit of the Los Angeles Settlement House, beginning at 2 p.m. A short programme will also be given by the little children of the settlement, as well as a timely sale of toys and needlework.

Highland Park Ebell.

Prof. Mars Baumgardt gave a discourse on "The Political Background of the War" at the meeting of the Highland Park Ebell Club Tuesday. It proved highly interesting, and the speaker drew a clear distinction between the Teuton and the Prussian, and traced the building of the German Empire from the numerous petty states. The lack of the genius for colonization in the Germans, commercial jealousies and interlocking political considerations were clearly set forth.

Next Tuesday's programme will be a Christmas concert, the last meeting before the New Year.

Women's University Club.

By special request of Mrs. Frank A. Gibson of the Americanization Committee of the State Council of Defense, the women of the University Club will undertake to aid in this work in their respective towns. A questionaire has been prepared by the Chamber of Commerce, and the following ladies have been appointed a committee: Mesdames Birnie Donell, Margaret Phillipson, Lloy Galpin and Anne Mumford. Their chief work will be the interviewing of employers of foreign labor and opening up avenues for educational activities.

The drama section of the club is studying American drama, and on Thursday took up the play "Plattsburg," under the leadership of Miss Amy Phelps and Miss Clara Berryman.

More than 100 needy little children will receive Christmas presents as a result of the Christmas party held last week.

Friday Morning Club.

Next Friday will be devoted to Christmas programmes at the Friday Morning Club. At the morning session there will be patriotic singing and the presentation of William De Mille's clever skit on food scarcity, with three professionals in the cast, Louise Huff, Raymond Hatton and Herbert Rawlinson. The Scottish Rite Women's Quartette will furnish a musical interlude, and the vested choir of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral will sing some of their famous Christmas carols. The afternoon will be devoted to a children's entertainment, including a nursery rhyme revue and tableaux depicting three eras of child life.

A Christmas festival of folk music will be held in the clubhouse next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the immigration department of the Y.W.C.A., the proceeds of which will be used to purchase wool and materials for Red Cross work.

The City Teacher.

The Liberty Cook Book is proving to be one of the "best sellers" of the season. Already 25,000 copies have been sold, 5000 of which have been purchased by city kindergartners alone. Parent-Teacher associations, woman's clubs, Red Cross auxiliaries in the city and suburbs, are availing themselves of this handy booklet, which helps Uncle Sam save food and win the war.

Within its twenty-seven pages, one finds recipes for wheatless breads, meat substitutes, suggestions for menus, cake, cookie and candy recipes, all tested by teachers of domestic science and practical housewives, and compiled by the Women's Committee of the State Council for Defense. Published in small size, with an attractive cover and envelope to match, this booklet makes a useful Christmas gift. Opening night at Grauman's will be an event long remembered in the theatrical history of the city.

In accordance with a policy maintained consistently and successfully in other ventures, Sid Grauman and his father, D. J. Grauman, have set a standard in films and artists. While plans for the screen features are not completed sufficiently to permit of final announcements, negotiations now are pending to insure the highest class of films. Only stars who have proved their popularity with the public will be signed. Musical programmes for the new theater will be molded on similar lines.

Probably in no other motion-picture house west of New York has so much care and money been lavished to create a brilliant and harmonious artistic atmosphere. The treatment of the entire auditorium has been on broad and dashing lines. Gold, bronze, green and yellow in countless and startling designs have transformed the gray walls into a place of mystic beauty.

William L. Wollett, in personal charge for Architect A. C. Martin, has drawn the architectural scheme from the cathedrals of Old Mexico, from the treasures of Byzantine constructive genius and from Greek and Spaniard. Every effort has been worked out toward the general aim of a "Temple of Mirth," the dominating motif of the structure. Sculptures, mural work, lighting arrangements and every convenience that ingenuity can suggest seek to surround the theater-goer with a sense of enjoyment, a proper mood for the greatest pleasure getting in following the programme.

Installation of the great organ, placing of the sculptures, which are the work of a Los Angeles artist, Burt W. Johnson, and the hanging of the screen curtain within a few days will bring the million-dollar theater to a stage of completion that will await only the final touches of decorators before all will be in readiness for the opening.

Speedy progress of construction, under the energetic personality of Managing Director Sid Grauman, brought surprise and appreciation from his father, D. J. Grauman, who is here from San Francisco on a trip of inspection. Mr. Grauman, Sr., in this, his first visit to the Southland since work was begun on the building, affirmed his faith in Los Angeles as a leading theatrical center, and declared no pains and money will be spared to give this city the highest standard of entertainment, in keeping with the magnitude of the building itself.

Accommodation will be provided in the new theater for 2300 persons, which gives the Graumans one of the most commodious theaters in the city. The main floor of the auditorium is approximately 108 feet long and 102 feet wide and seats about 1300 people. There is one balcony, seating 1000. By the use of six great cantilever reinforced trusses, supported on a reinforced-concrete arch, it was possible to eliminate entirely all supports under the balcony, thus affording the entire lower floor an unobstructed view of the stage. The balcony view is regarded as one of the chief accomplishments of the architects and is considered one of the best in American theaters.

The Girl Water Boy.

Three thousand workmen at Camp Stuart, Va., paused in their work the other day and stood with bared heads at the hour when the body of Florence Kelley was being lowered into its grave. Reading in the newspapers how women and girls were taking the places of men who had gone to the front, kindled the fire of patriotism in the heart of Florence, and several weeks ago she disappeared from her home in Greenville. She sought the Red Cross, but found she could not go abroad; then, wearing the clothes of a man, she applied to Camp Stuart for work, and was given the job of water boy. She worked hard and received two increases in her wages, so that she was drawing $2 a day when a motor truck ran over and crushed her, and her identity became known.

Given a bunk in a cabin with a "fellow-workman" at the camp, she had conducted herself as a boy, listening to the jokes of the man and taking part in their discussions. But her identity was never suspected until Dr. W. J. Knight, who attended the girl at the hospital, made the announcement.

The most calloused workman in the camp was touched by the finding, in a small satchel owned by the girl, of a lot of little trinkets such as girls like to have about them. There were several well-thummed books in the satchel on what can be accomplished by women if they work hard to develop their minds and their bodies. In one book found in the girl's room was a torn page telling why women do not make as good fighters as men.

But Florence Kelley was a real girl in her last moments on earth. She lost her desire for war. Just before she died she regained consciousness and piteously begged that her father be brought to her.—[Capper's Weekly.

Found Rock but no Rye.

It was simply another instance of "rock and rye" without the rye.

Special Agent Jeffries and Scott of the District Attorney's office suspected three men of being bootleggers. They "framed" to "get" them.

Accordingly, in the guise of souls athirst, the agents contracted with the men under suspicion to purchase for $75 a suit case filled with strong drink, which, of course, violates the prohibition law directly.

The liquor was to be delivered to them at Tenth and Flanders streets Saturday.

"We will just open up this suit case to see what kind of whisky we are getting," observed the canny sleuths. They did.

It was full of large rocks.

Then the agents arrested M. Silverman, Terry Nelson and Allen Brown on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The three were locked up in the County Jail on $1000 bail. Attorney Wolf was summoned to get them out, and he got the bail reduced to $100 each for Silverman and Brown and to $250 for Nelson. They were able to raise this.

Jailers and other attaches of the Sheriff's office were inclined to think whatever joke the situation had developed was distinctly "on" the special agents.

Two-passenger airplanes are now for sale at $3000 each. It is said that the manufacturers expect to sell 2500 machines within the year.

Studio.

she might be, must have witty lines to speak, and that she must appear in interesting situations as well as in interesting costumes, and then the making of real plays began.

Col. J. E. Brady, manager of the manuscript department at Universal City, himself a writer of note, declares that it is possible to get clean stories, yet stories full of real strength and humanness, for production on the screen, and that he means to have them.

"Pictures are a business, not a game," said Col. Brady, "and the day has gone by when we buy and build stories to suit the star, instead of selecting the star to suit the story. Also the day has gone by when the star who is drawing $1000 a week can walk into the studio at noon, after keeping the whole company made up half a day, and give the airy excuse that she was up late the night before and didn't feel like coming earlier.

"Also the day of inflated salaries has gone by, or the picture business is ruined. Only first-class stories, well acted, can save the film business from ruin during these war days. I believe that, as a matter of fact, amalgamation of the companies will have to come in order to eliminate waste in the making of pictures, and to tone down the tendency toward inflated salaries to players. In any case, a good role will make a star, just as is the case on the stage, the author of the play being the real keynote of success."

Col. Brady has been proving to the world through the Bluebird, Butterfly and other Universal productions that the screen can produce clean, wholesome, yet absorbing and human, stories. He has recently acquired the film rights to a number of well-known books, including Honorie Wilsie's "Heart of the Desert," several tales by James Oliver Curwood, and many others.

Cecil de Mille, director-general of the Lasky-Famous Players Company, is another producer who, while he does not believe in doing away with the star, does believe in featuring the play itself above the star.

Mr. De Mille has recently begun the making of a series of what he terms "all-star or no-star productions, just as you please to call them."

"'The Whispering Chorus,' on which I am at work at present," said Mr. De Mille, "is an example of a photoplay which, instead of starring a player, stars the production itself. It is one of those stories which embodies largely outstanding characters, and only such pictures justify a nonstar production. The character of this particular play is such that unusually strong roles are given to several players of all-star caliber. In making this production I especially desire to emphasize the strength of the story—in fact, we are centering our attention upon the direction and the story itself.

"When Mr. Griffith staged 'The Birth of a Nation' he did not feature Henry Walthall; he featured 'The Birth of a Nation.' Of course, it is always our desire to present big stars in big plays, which is to my mind the ideal combination."

Chip-of-the-Old-Block Item.

Col. E. J. Brady, who served in the United States Army for twelve years, has two sons in the army fighting for the Allies. One of them, George K. Brady, already has the rank of sergeant, and is in France, he having enlisted immediately on graduating and obtaining his degree at Harvard, last June.

"The other son was in college," said Col. Brady the other day. "I wrote him when the United States went into the war, saying, 'Well, Jack, the country's at war now; what do you mean to do?' Jack came right back at me. He wrote across my letter in red ink and sent it back to me—'Your letter is a damned insult. Have enlisted already.'"

Comedienne Visits Universal.

Universal City was invaded by Trixie Friganza yesterday—and the city fell for Trixie without an effort at resistance.

Preparing for the onslaught, Miss Friganza first visited the restaurant. Outside is a weighing machine.

"Oh, you weigh in as you enter, do you?" said Miss Friganza, "and I suppose you weigh again as you come out, and they charge you by the pound. Well, me for the beans—light, cheap and filling."

Mae Murray and Robert Leonard were working on a set. Miss Murray was weeping and Mr. Leonard was shouting his instructions through a big megaphone, while outside somebody was playing sad music on a harp.

"Say, young' un," exclaimed Trixie, "you'll have a wet time when you get to heaven, won't you?"

Down at the zoo they were taking a wild animal picture, and Trixie insisted on going into the camera cage which sits in the middle of the animal arena, with the cameraman and the camera.

"My Lord, sardines have a loose time compared to us, don't they?" demanded Miss Friganza. "Well, here's the gang! Did you hear the lion say, 'Welcome to the zoo?' How could I have the heart to bite a lion after that?

"Look at that poor old simp of a hero in there! That's my idea of collecting life insurance quick. The director said, 'Hurry, please,' to the hero. Was that necessary? Wasn't it quite likely the hero would hurry, anyhow? Well, just look at that Helen Gibson! Some girl! Look! She's patting the lion's head. Hope she charges about $10 a pat. They're poking up the old boy so he'll be mad at the villain! Look at the villain jump! Right over that ten-foot wall! Well, boy, that's easy. I could do it myself if I had a large, healthy, peevish lion after me with nothing on his mind but the desire for my heart's blood. Yes, sir, you'd see Trixie climb right up over Eiffel Tower if that beast was after her! Look! He's coming right his way! Safe in here, did you say? Well, I'm not going to wait to ask the lion."

Reclamation Note.

A. H. Woods, Dustin Farnum and H. H. Van Loan were in the lobby of the Alexandria the other day, and they were discussing the war.

"Wonderful thing, that fall of Jerusalem, wasn't it?" exclaimed Farnum.

"Wonderful old place," responded Woods. "Don't suppose there's a show in town. Say, I'll have to go and look that place over."

Van Loan Visits.

H. H. Van Loan is spending a few days in Los Angeles preparatory to resuming his trip around the world. Mr. Van Loan is writing for the Motion Picture Magazine in serial form what promises a frank statement of film conditions throughout the world as regards popularity of stars, manner of distribution of film, etc.

Already Mr. Van Loan has visited the Hawaiian Islands. Here he declares the greatest favorites to be Marguerite Clark and Theda Bara, Sessue Hayakawa, Charlie Chaplin and Thomas Meighan.

Mr. Van Loan declares the film manufacturers are being bilked by exhibitors in some parts of the islands, an exhibitor frequently subletting his film to exhibitors in remote towns.

From here Mr. Van Loan will go to New York, thence to South America, Australia, New Zealand, South Sea Islands, Japan, Egypt, India, and he even expects to reach France. He will be gone a couple of years.

The next number of the Motion Picture classic will contain the first installment of what promises a sensational serial novel, as it deals with the inside workings of motion picture manufacturing concerns. Mr. Van Loan has been connected with the picture-making business for seven years, and the story promises to unveil many things which will be most interesting to the public. The story is entitled "Mr. Biggs Puts It Over," and the principal character is a sort of picture "Wallingford."

"Bluebird" an Artcraft.

Artcraft is making a celluloid production of Maeterlinck's "Bluebird" at the Fort Lee studios, with Maurice Tourneur directing.

All in the Family.

A daughter and sister of patriots is Mrs. Grace H. Price, private secretary of the Universal publicity manager. Mrs. Price's great grandfarther was Matthew Hough, who served in the War of 1812. Her father served in the Civil War, and her brother has the rank of sergeant in the United States Army, and is now in France.

Griffith Reports Progress.

D. W. Griffith is taking over his old studio in Hollywood, the Triangle comedy companies having moved to Culver City. Mr. Griffith is working on the final scenes of his big patriotic film, with Dorothy and Lillian Gish and Robert Harron in the leading roles.

Busy Triangle.

The feature companies at the Triangle plant have started three new plays during the past week, and the production department is working a day and night shift to keep pace with the nine directors working. Under the supervision of Production Manager O. L. Sellers, the planing mill, technical art department, paper hangers, painters, property and wardrobe forces are humming two full shifts out of each twenty-four hours.

Frank Borzage will have as his next Triangle offering "Iron and Lavender," from the Green Book Magazine story by the same name written by Hapsburg Liebe. Director Raymond Wells will next do "Work and Its Worth," a screen adaptation of William Slavens McNutt's magazine story prepared by Jack Cunningham. Director Jack Conway has begun work on "Little Red Decides," a screen adaptation of the American Magazine story by William McCoy. The name part, which is a child role, will be played by 3½-year-old Barbara Connolly, while Goro Kino, a Japanese actor, will be seen in a comedy role, playing a Chinaman.

Director Walter Edwards has begun work on "Real Folks," the story by Mrs. Kate Corbaley, which won first prize in the recent Photoplay Magazine contest. J. Barney Sherry, Francis McDonald, Fritzie Ridgway, Alberta Lee and Marian Skinner will play the leading roles.

High Art Item.

Texas Guinan, Triangle favorite, who has just completed her latest subject, a thrilling and unusual western story written by Alvin J. Neitz, and which has been named "The Gun Woman," has the other women players at the Triangle studio green with envy over her attractive new dressing-room, where she serves tea to visiting celebrities. It is finished in yellow and black, is handsomely furnished in wicker and has a yellow iron parrot for a knocker.

Behold the Mote—

Never carry a closed-face watch. This is the warning of Roy Stewart, Triangle western star, as the result of an argument between Stewart and Bill Patton, Triangle cowboy, who is included in the star's supporting cast, who was championing the open-faced timepiece.

"I must have wasted several months already in carrying a closed watch," declares Stewart. The discovery came when Stewart found it took him a second and a half to get the time and return the watch to his pocket. Patton, owner of an open-face, performed the same operation in half a second.

"At least twelve seconds lost in a day, eighty-four in a week—and, well, figure it out for yourself," was Patton's crushing close to the debate. Then as the argument subsided, Stewart drew out a ready-made cigarette and Patton started to "roll his own." A laugh went up from the audience who had heard the argument on time saving, but Patton couldn't see that the joke was on him.

Coals to Newcastle.

Rowland Lee, former leading man at the Triangle studio, is now one of Uncle Sam's boys in olive drab, and is stationed at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, and simply can't get away from Triangle, according to his letter to Studio Manager E. G. Patterson. But at any rate he's sure of seeing some good acting once in a while.

"'They're Off,' a Triangle picture I did while at your studios, was shown in the large Y.M.C.A. auditorium here in camp last night," wrote Lee. "It sure is funny, now that I am a soldier, to sit and see myself as an actor back at the Triangle studios."

Went Up in the Air.

Now that the Triangle-Keystone companies are making comedies at the Culver City studio, Purchasing Agent L. H. Buell is having his hands full securing outlandish "props" for the funmakers. One of the things demanded of Buell on a moment's notice by Director Baudine was a nice, gentle bear, which would lick a man's face without biting. The animal was secured at $15 per day in spite of the fact that William V. Mong, whiskers and all, offered to double for $10 a day. Then Baudine called for a bowl of soup with alphabetical noodles, so that one of the comedy heroes might send a letter to his best girl in the bowl of soup. Buell decided the director had gone crazy and phoned for the cop.

Deserts Art for Country.

Another star will be added to the service flag at the Triangle Culver City studios this week. J. R. McGlone, better known in the motion-picture world as "Mac," who has been working in the employment bureau, has enlisted in the United States Cavalry. Although under 21 when the draft law went into effect, "Mac" could no longer withstand the lure of the olive-drab.

They Were in Halifax.

Wallace MacDonald, the well-known actor who recently joined the Triangle forces, was a mightily worried man for a few days following the Halifax disaster. Mr. MacDonald's father, mother and brother were all in the ill-fated city, and it was not until last Friday MacDonald was able to get communication with them, when he received the comforting word that all three were safe.

Philology Item.

A mastery of the fine distinctions of the Japanese tongue is really necessary to its proper lingual handling, take it from E. Mason Hopper, Triangle director, who has been filming "Mr. Butterfly," and who has been spending his spare time picking up bits of Japanese from the oriental actors.

"Sure I can speak Japanese," was Hopper's confident reply to a question propounded by a member of a crowd of visitors who were watching him work at the studio the other day. "Watch me make Tom Kurihara take off his hat." Then ensued a few grunts and whistles which sounded like Japanese and with a grin Tom started to disrobe right before all the guests, and Hopper had to halt him with threats of bodily violence.

An investigation showed that Hopper had it nearly right—the only mistake was that he had grunted and whistled "clothes" instead of "hat."

Olive Busted a Fence.

Pretty Olive Thomas had some real thrills during the filming of her fifth Triangle picture, "Limousine Life," a magazine story by Ida M. Evans. In it, Olive carries on a wooing with her favored suitor while at the wheel of a powerful limousine, flagging the road in a way to instill terror in the hearts of all other motorists, and winding up by crashing through a fence. In the earlier scenes Olive succeeded in hooking up with a wagon and tearing the radiator off her car, and Director Jack Dillon felt rather dubious (for the car and not for Olive) when he told the star to drive the machine through the fence. Olive succeeded in the stunt, however, without even cracking her make-up.

New One for Fatty.

Mrs. Thomas Bell, Balboa's official nurse, took her little 10-year-old Kathleen to see Roscoe Arbuckle in his latest picture, "A Country Hero." The child studied the printed programme a moment, and then looking up exclaimed:

"I just love that fat Rascal Arbuckle, mamma!"

GREAT AMERICAN AUTHOR WHO IS REMEMBERED AS A CLOWN.

Collection of Mark Twain's Lifelong Correspondence will do Much to Perpetuate that Folly Because of His Spontaneous and Continuous Humor—Emphatic Denial Expressed of Faith in the Cant that the World is Growing Better.

MARK TWAIN LETTERS. Arranged with comment by Albert Bigelow Paine. (2 vol.) Harper & Bros., New York.

I HAVE never yet seen the collection of letters that I thought was worth the time it took to read, but there is much of interest in this life-long correspondence of Mark Twain, and more amusement to be had from it than from the serious efforts of many latter day humorists. The public still insists on regarding Mark Twain as a clown, as a funny man. The bigness of the man as revealed in many of these letters will make no difference, as the publication of "The Mysterious Stranger" made no difference in the mob estimate.

But it seems a pity that the assiduous compiler should crowd and jam every epistolary fragment into the collection, pursuing the will o' the wisp "Complete." Letters, particularly life-long letters, are bound to be harum-scarum, jumpy reading; and the compiler says "necessarily such a collection does not constitute a detailed life story, but is supplementary to it."

There is much less than one might naturally expect in the letters about Mark Twain's own books. He evidently did not write much about them even to close friends; and probably the closest of his correspondents, and the longest continued, was William D. Howells, who was a perpetual source of encouragement, assistance and valuable criticism.

I would not go so far as to say that Mark Twain was an unconscious humorist. He was too sensible a man to be insensible to his own powers; but there is probably not to be found anywhere, as in his writings, so much effortless and such continuous humor.

Is he writing a friendly letter and casually mentions family hotels in England, behold:

"The once spacious rooms are split up into coops, which afford as much discomfort as can be hand anywhere out of jail for the money. All the modern inconveniences are furnished, and some that have been obsolete for a century. The prices are astonishingly high for what you get. The bedrooms are hospitals for incurable furniture. I find it so in this one. . . . Some quite respectable Englishmen still frequent them through inherited habit and arrested development; many Americans also through ignorance and superstition. The rooms are as interesting as the Tower of London, but older I think. Older and dearer. The lift was a gift of William the Conqueror, some of the beds are prehistoric. They represent geological periods. Mine is the oldest. It is formed in strata of old red sandstone, volcanic tufa, ignis and bicarbonate of hornblende, superimposed upon argillaceous shale, and contains the prints of prehistoric man."

On Henry Mills Alden's seventieth birthday (Mr. Alden had then been editor of Harper's Magazine for nearly forty years) Mark Twain among other things wrote:

"Alden—dear and ancient friend—it is a solemn moment. You have now reached the age of discretion. You have been a long time arriving. Many years ago you docked me on an article because the subject was too old; later, you docked me on an article because the subject was too new; still later, you docked me on an article because the subject was betwixt and between. Once when I wrote a letter to Queen Victoria, you did not put it in a respectable part of the magazine, but interred it in that potter's field, the editor's drawer. As a result, she never answered it. How often we recall, with regret, that Napoleon once shot at a magazine editor and missed him and killed a publisher. But we remember, with charity, that his intentions were good."

The following letter to Elinor Glyn is quite interesting in other than a humorous way. Mrs. Glyn, having met Mark Twain, and being fascinated by his wonderful talk, was anxious to print an interview. She wrote out what she could remember of it and sent it to him for approval.

He answered bluntly: "Dear Mrs. Glyn—It reads pretty poorly—I get the sense of it, but it is a poor literary job; however, it would have to be that because nobody can be reported even approximately, except by a stenographer. Approximations, synopsized speeches, translated poems, artificial flowers and chromos all have a sort of value, but it is small. If you had put on paper what I really said it would have wrecked your type-machine. I said some fetid, overvigorous things, but that was because it was a confidential conversation. I said nothing for print. My own report of the same conversation reads like Satan roasting a Sunday-school. It, and certain other readable chapters of my autobiography, will not be published until all the Clemens family are dead—dead and correspondingly indifferent. They were written to entertain me, not the rest of the world. I am not here to do good—at least not to do it intentionally. You must pardon me for dictating this letter; I am sick abed and not feeling as well as I might."

Another and deeper side of Mark Twain is revealed in many letters—often in those to the Rev. J. H. Twichell, also a long-time friend.

In one written in 1905 he scorned the optimism of "the steady progress from age to age of the coming of the kingdom of God and righteousness."

"From age to age?" he wrote. "Yes, it describes that giddy gait. . . . The source of 'righteousness' is in the heart? Yes. And engineered and directed by the brain? Yes. Well, history and tradition testify that the heart is just about what it was in the beginning; it has undergone no shade of change. Its good and evil impulses and their consequences are the same today that they were in old Bible times, in Egyptian times, in Greek times, in Middle Age times, in twentieth century times. . . . Well, the nineteenth century made progress—the first progress after 'ages and ages'—colossal progress. In what? Materialities. Prodigious acquisitions were made in things which add to the comfort of many and make life harder for as many more. But the addition to righteousness? Is that discoverable? I think not. The materialities were not invented in the interest of righteousness; that there is more righteousness in the world because of them than there was before is hardly demonstrable, I think. . . . Money-lust has always existed, but not in the history of the world was it ever a craze, a madness, until your time and mine. This lust has rotted these nations; it has made them hard, sordid, ungentle, dishonest, oppressive."

LETTER TO SHERLOCK HOLMES.

In spite of war and censors, Anna Katharine Green succeeded in getting across to her publishers this interesting bit of correspondence between two famous detectives. Detective Gryce first employed by her in "The Leavenworth Case" proves himself more ingenious than ever in her new story, "The Mystery of the Hasty Arrow," recently published by Dodd, Mead & Co.

N. Y., U.S.A., Nov. 12, 1917.

My Dear Sherlock Holmes:

It is with regret that I learn from a recent notice in one of our papers that you have become afflicted with rheumatism. I trust, however, that it may not seriously interfere with the continuance of your illustrious career. I know whereof I write, for the malady has clung to me ever since I was entrusted with the solution of "The Leavenworth Case" by my friend Anna Katharine Green. I had no choice but to go on in her service, she kindly permitting me to engage as assistant such a clever fellow as Sweetwater. And on one occasion when "That Affair Next Door" gave me unusual concern, Miss Butterworth not only helped me during a severe attack of my, permit me to say, our enemy, but aided in the disentanglement of a complicated situation by her astuteness.

I am just through with the case of "The Hasty Arrow," an extremely involved matter and rather unusual since it aroused my sympathy and at the same time gave me no end of concern before it was cleared up. Now that the whole matter has been settled to the satisfaction of the authorities and Miss Green, I understand that the affair with its intricacies, love, pathos and tragedy is to be published in book form with such additions as will make the report more full than the papers made it at the time it took place.

As soon as a copy of the book is to be had, it will give me pleasure to send you one. At the same time, may I express the hope that your rheumatic affliction has not unduly influenced you to determine to make your "Last Bow." Try to induce Conan Doyle to give you some clever fellow as an assistant, for now that we have a bond of sympathy, let us proceed to end our days in the harness and help our friends Doyle and Green out of their various difficulties as occasion may demand.

With keen appreciation, I am,
Yours truly,
EBENEZER GRYCE.

To Mr. Sherlock Holmes,
Care Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, England.

LEADING BOOKS OF THE YEAR.

A jury of fifty critics composed of the literary editors of the principal daily papers of the United States, ten or twelve professors of literature and an equal number of men of science were asked to check up 300 titles of the best new books for 1917 for the annual book exhibit of the National Arts Club, New York. "The Life and Letters of Edward Everett Hale," for which all but seven of the fifty jurors voted, received the largest number of ballots cast for any one of the 300 books. Ernest Poole's "His Family," received the greatest number of votes in fiction, thirty-two, as compared with twenty-nine each for Kipling's "A Diversity of Creatures," Eden Phillpott's "The Banks of Colne," and Alice Cholmondeley's "Christine." In biography, thirty-nine ballots were cast for Mark Twain's "Letters," and thirty-eight for Viscount Morley's "Recollections." Brander Matthew's "These Many Years," and Garland's "Son of the Middle Border," each received thirty-six votes; Fabre's "Life of the Grasshopper," thirty-seven; Gosse's "Swinburne," thirty-eight, and Gorkey's "In the World," thirty-five.

ARTIST AUTHORS.

BY GERTRUDE E. DARLOW
Of the Public Library.

To some readers books of travel have a never-ending interest. The strange scenes, the experiences and escapes, the amusing vagaries of people unlike ourselves, the morals and manners—or the absence of them—need little skill in the telling to be sufficiently diverting. But at intervals appear pieces of description so vivid and unusual that they produce an impression comparable to that made by a picture, and things heard become equal to things seen. The writer's imagination has been kindled and the glow suffuses the reader.

It may be the rich hues of the Orient as in "The East I Know" of Paul Claudel, or Chevrillon's "India," or the mysterious dawns and eves of the African scene in the books of Scully, where the burning sky and the parched earth oppress you with a sense of reality. It is present everywhere in the pages of Pierre Loti, a mirage of words from which rise buildings and monuments, vistas shimmering in the heat, garish colors, brightest light and sternest shade, even sounds and odors. Fielding Hall can steep you in the brooding quiet of Burmah, the gentle gestures, the musical voices, the unhurried calm, teal from the book to you. Doughty's "Wanderings in Arabia" is one of the great traveler's volumes, an absorbing picture of life among the wild Bedouins, giving the golden world of the wilderness.

Maupassant will take you "Afloat" with him, or Edmond de Amicis "On Blue Water" where sun and wind, sea and sky are spread on the surface of exquisite prose. Arthur Symons will show you "Cities" with souls, where life and art are one, where the past still dominates the present. Theophile Gautier with a thousand cunning strokes paints "Russia," his vocabulary as vast as his theme, his words glittering and smoldering like her palaces and plains. It is good to have Synge conjure for us his bleak "Aran Islands," to gaze at the low-lying fen land with Belloc, to wander with George Gissing "By the Ionian Sea," to look at the tranquil English landscape, its low tones and gleams of pastoral beauty in Hudson's careful studies, to see "Wild Wales" with George Borrow, and to view our own California with the vision of John Muir.

RODIN'S ART.

In "Rodin: the Man and His Art," her sumptuous new study of the great sculptor's life and work, Judith Cladel describes Rodin's flight to England during the German drive toward Paris in the early days of the war. Mlle. Cladel herself conducted the sculptor and his aged wife across the channel. "He did not wish to remain in London," she says. "Too many relationships would have hindered him from collecting himself and from preserving that dignity of solitude, that reserve of a refugee, which was proper to his situation. He preferred to accompany us to a small country town, where for six weeks he lived a modest life, very retired, interested only, but passionately interested, in the reading of English newspapers, which we translated for him. When we apprised him of the burning of Rheims Cathedral, he replied with a laugh of incredulity. For two days he refused to believe it. It seemed to him an invention of the press designed to stir the public and increase recruiting. At last, convinced, he said, with inexpressible sadness: "The biblical times have come back again, the great invasions of the Medes and the Persians. Has the world, then, reached the point where it deserves to be punished for the egotistical epicureanism in which it has slumbered?" After this he became absorbed in his own thoughts."

HAROLD MACGRATH'S TRAVELS.

Harold MacGrath, whose new novel of adventure, "The Luck of the Irish," takes the reader from New York to Singapore, has traveled extensively in Europe and in the East. Yet, he admitted the other day that he has never managed to get to the British Isles, not from lack of trying, but because he always planned to go on from Italy, and when he was in that country was so held by its charm that he could not make up his mind to leave it until it was time to sail home to America.

each other, in each other, with their round gray caps whose red edge is hidden with a gray band, their yellow-gray jackets and their green faces. I look for the features of one of them. From the depths of his neck up to the tufts of hair that stick to the brim of his cap is just an earthy mass, the face become an anthill, and two rotten berries in place of eyes. Another is a dried emptiness flat on its belly, the back in tatters that almost flutter, the hands, feet and face enrooted in the soil."

Such passages as that will end war, all wars, when the people of the earth are brave enough to read and honest enough to believe.

BOOZE QUESTION.

An earnest, judicial, fair-minded study of the question of whether or not the drinking of alcoholic liquors lessens the fighting efficiency of soldiers and of the nation behind them is made by Marr Murray, an Englishman, in "Drink and the War" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) He is concerned with the matter as it affects the British nation and he explains at the beginning that he has no special interest on either side of the question, that he is just "an ordinary person who is fond of an occasional glass of beer." Under the subjects, "Russia and Drink," "France and Drink," "Drink and Frightfulness, "Women and Drink," "Drink and the Soldier," "Drink and the Next Generation;" "Drink and the Worker," he studies these phases of the matter, quoting at length from any authorities and considering the arguments pro and con. Other chapters take up different phases of the problem of drunkenness. His conclusions are emphatically against the idea that benefit is gained by soldier or nation from the drinking of alcoholic liquors. In the final chapter he deplores the failure of the British government to take drastic measures against the drink evil and the liquor traffic.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

BY JAMES M. WARNACK.

THE LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN. By Ida M. Tarbell. The Macmillan Company, New York.

It has not taken the people of the United States fifty years to discover that Abraham Lincoln was the greatest figure in the history of America, but it remained for Ida M. Tarbell to write, compile and edit what is perhaps the most comprehensive study of the humble rail-splitter that has ever been put into book form. "The Life of Abraham Lincoln," in two volumes, and comprising 885 pages in all, was begun seventeen years ago, at the suggestion of the editors of "McClure's Magazine," and a great deal of the matter contained in the present edition appeared in that publication in 1895 and 1896. In this remarkable work, an everlasting monument to the patience, energy and patriotism of the author, no attempt has been made to cover the history of Lincoln's time save as was necessary in tracing the development of the great emancipator's mind and in illustrating his moral qualities. It is Lincoln, the man, as known by his contemporaries and revealed by his own acts and words that Miss Tarbell has pictured for the student. One of the outstanding facts in the wealth of fresh contributions gathered for this tremendous work is that the ideal Lincoln of the people is not destroyed, nor his goodness and greatness lessened by the presentation of the facts concerning him and his life. His little faults and weaknesses are presented unflinchingly, but his faults are proved to be so insignificant in comparison with his towering virtues that they can hardly be seen for the glory of his inherent nobility. One interesting phase of this excellent work consists of the documents which clearly establish that his mother was not the nameless girl which she has rather generally been believed to be and that his father, instead of being a "shiftless white," as he has often been termed by the ignorant and the malignant, was an honest, hard-working man, a pioneer well worthy to be the progenitor of America's foremost citizen of history. Every page of Tarbell's "Life of Lincoln" bristles with facts, which the author wisely deemed of greater consequence to the reader than her own comments thereon. The book starts with an account of the lives and characteristics of Lincoln's ancestors, several generations preceding his birth, and closes with a graphic account of the assassination which struck terror and consternation to the hearts of the people in both the North and the South. The appendix, constituting nearly half of the second volume, includes hundreds of Lincoln's letters, telegrams and speeches, none of which are to be found in Lincoln's "Complete Works," edited by Nicolay and Hay, or in any other collection of the martyred President's writings. Throughout the entire work Lincoln's humor, tenderness, courage and all his moral, religious and intellectual qualities are dealt with at length, although, as previously stated, the value of the work lies in the fact that the reader gets these insights into the man's character through either his own words or the accounts of notable men who knew him instead of through the comments of the biographer. "The Life of Abraham Lincoln" is a work worthy of a place in any library and will prove of inestimable value to the conscientious student of United States history.

MAJ. BEITH'S LECTURE RECORD.

Readers of "The First Hundred Thousand" and "All in It" (just published by Houghton Mifflin Company,) who have heard Maj. Ian Hay Beith lecture on the war, will be interested to know that during 1916 and 1917 Maj. Beith has delivered more than 175 addresses throughout the United States. For ninety-one of these addresses he received a fee which enabled him to give the remaining eighty-four gratuitously to training camps, workingmen's clubs, etc. After paying personal expenses, hire of buildings, royalty on films and advertising, Maj. Beith was enabled to hand over to various war relief societies, such as the American and British Red Cross and certain British regimental benevolent funds, the sum of $8667. This sum represents Maj. Beith's personal contribution and does not include sums raised by public meetings in aid of various war charities at which he happened to be the speaker or one of the speakers of the evening. Maj. Beith receives no allowance or traveling expenses of any kind from the British government.

AVIATION.

Albert H. Munday, whose book, "The Eyes of the Army and Navy," was published recently, was born in Australia in 1892. He has lived much in Canada and has done journalistic work for Canadian and American newspapers. The interest he had always taken in aeronautical subjects helped him to secure his commission in the Royal Naval Air Service. After training in England he was attached to naval squadron No. 10, and left for duty at Dunkirk early in this year. There he had much interesting duty and several narrow escapes. Later he was transferred to the Belgian front.

Exciting Fiction.

acceptable; 350 pages are required to lay the foundation for one explosive surprise. "The Man Who Killed" is merely a dramatic short story elaborated into a novel by an author that chanced to be familiar with Constantinople and with very frank realism has described life among the attaches and Europeans, doing particularly good character work with Prince Stanislaus Cernuwicz. But the author should have devised a plot that suited this excellent material instead of expecting a bombshell in the last chapters to justify the circumambulations and diversified interest that went before.

"The London Nights of Belsize."

How Vernon Rendall came to write the unconvincing, tedious exploits of Belsize I cannot imagine. Belsize is the old, old figure of a wealthy, slightly ennuied, unusually deductive, highly-bred gentleman dabbling in crime; one of those hybrids by Raffles and Sherlock Holmes, superficially clever, the deus ex machina of the author's conspiracy against other characters.

All this is in "The London Nights of Belsize" (John Lane Company) which has chapters done into short stories dealing with the exploits of Belsize. These exploits—as exploits—are neither interesting nor fair, for Belsize makes his most brilliant strokes and deductions from evidence that is not furnished the reader until afterwards. The great feature and joy of Sherlock Holmes is that, though Conan Doyle does not always lay the complete evidence upon which the mystery is solved before the reader, Conan Doyle always makes the reader think that he has been taken into complete confidence.

But Vernon Randall has other gifts, and a book may almost be made eminently worth while by one such epigram as this: "Patience and a mulberry leaf will make a silk gown."

"Our Square and the People in It."

Samuel Hopkins Adams hereby announces that he, too, is in the "sweet" class, that he has joined the Pollyanna brigade, and with sentimental melancholy will do joyful uplift and leave the readers the happier for his pen-pushing. Anybody desiring to be left happier should trot to "Our Square and the People in It" (Houghton Mifflin Company.) Our Square is in the poorer quarter, where lives MacLachen the tailor, who gets drunk, where the Little Red Doctor flits administering, were Terry the cop watchfully paces his beat—and all the venerable sentimentalists are there, including the sweet girl with artistic ambitions and the society man who has slumped to the depths and recovers his manhood for love of the sweet girl sculptress. And MacLachen has no business to get drunk, because his daughter is married to a fine man who is in the movies, and the day her father saw her with a painted face, she was only wearing her make-up. Everybody is good in Our Square, even Pinney the rat, and most of this goodness is due to the ubiquitous Bonnie Lassie (sculptress) and the Little Red Doctor. "Our Square and the People in It" ought to be quite a delightful gift book for convalescent old maids and others who enjoy the quavering melancholy that is thought to be the happy medium between tears and laughter.

"The Years of the Locust."

"The Years of the Locust" by Albert Payson Terhune (Robert J. Shores) is an entertaining and exciting story, with an ingenious twist in the concluding chapter that leaves the reader as breathless and almost as bewildered as Lorraine Mead, who has fled the world over to escape the relentless Yankee detective.

But Mr. Terhune has also dealt in anticlimaxes; he has sacrificed a rattling good adventure and mystery story for a touch of the supernatural as represented by the stranger—a sort of a servant-in-the-house and Wandering Jew combined—who benignly haunts the deserts and towns of Arabia. Said stranger appears out of the nowhere and dispels the Bedouins just as they are about to massacre the tourists and fugitives in the old ruins, and he plays upon the heorine, Lorraine, until she is ready to return to her beast of a husband in Chicago.

Lorraine fled from him with Dirck Mead, whom Roth, the husband, had threatened to pursue to the ends of the earth. They hear that Roth has been killed, but a day or to later a letter from him reaches her, and the two lovers scurry frantically from one country to another, knowing very well that the police of many cities and detectives from all over the world are after them.

The solution is surprising, and but for the pious stranger—who is as much out of place in the story as the devil at prayer meeting—it might be recommended strongly for satisfying entertainment.

ADVENTURES OF PHRA.

Among the books of fiction published during the past decades few can challenge in strangeness, few open to speculation so attractive a vista as that rare combination of atmosphere, stirring incident and thoughtfulness which Edwin Lestern Arnold produced in "The Wonderful Adventures of Phra the Phoenician," a new edition of which recently appeared under the Putnam imprint. Phra's several existences covered a span of over a thousand years, from a time antedating the Roman conquest of Britain to the stirring days of good Queen Bess. Phra sat in Britain at the tables of Roman Centurions, and the last of her Saxon Kings died in his arms. He swore hatred of foreign tyrants in the wassail bowls of serfs, and bestrode Norman chargers, in tilt-yards and battlefields. His enormous span of years was packed with adventure and romance. Truly does Edwin Arnold in his introduction to the volume say:

"While renewing in each existence the characteristic passions and sentiments which constitute Phra's individuality and preserve the unity of the narrative, the author seems to me to have adapted him to varying times and places with a vraisemblance and absence of effort which are extremely effective."

GEORGE INNESS.

LIFE, ART AND LETTERS OF GEORGE INNESS. By George Inness, Jr. The Century Co., New Cork City.

In "The Life, Art and Letters of George Inness," lovers of both art and literature are given something refreshing in biographical history.

One of the chief charms of George Inness, Jr.'s work is in the fact that he describes his famous father as he was, admitting the great painter's faults and shortcomings without pretending either to explain or to apologise for them. Of the renowned landscape artist's virtues and genius, it is but natural that his son should write, as would any other biographer, in the most colorful and praiseworthy terms. Of the elder Inness himself the author tells us, as the world long has known, that he was an individualist in every line of thought, and especially in the realm of art, through the mediumship of which he expressed, not so much the things he saw as their effect upon him. To Inness, art was, indeed, "as natural as nature" and his effort to create the beautiful was not prompted by the desire to copy the thing that he saw, but to place upon canvas something of the inner, intangible beauty of earth's symbolical phenomena, a beauty the very essence of which he felt had its home both in the heart of God and in the soul of man. It is said that in him there was something of Corot, of Rousseau, of Daubigny and of the English artist, Constable, but he was neither a copyist nor the product of any school. He was George Inness. Because he was not of the schools, because he painted to satisfy George Inness, recognition came late to him and it was not until after middle age that financial success began to crown his efforts. He had few pupils, for, like all great individualists, he neither wished to follow a school nor to found one. His sole idea in art seemed to be to express the highest and noblest that was in him and to inspire all other beauty-lovers to do the same. His idealism naturally led him to the study of philosophy and religion, yet always he was more the devotee than the thinker. With the artist this seems to be invariably the case, because it is the unknown quantity—and quality—which he seeks to glimpse and portray, whereas the logician must deal mainly, if not entirely, with what is known as empirical knowledge. In religion Inness was a Christian and a Swedenborgian and was somewhat intolerant of those who could not agree with him upon theological subjects. In politics he was a Henry Georgite, believing in and arguing for the single tax. If he was wrong in this he should not be censured, for politics was merely his bobby, not his forte. Inness wrote a great deal, both prose and poetry, but his writings while revealing something of his fine natpre and depth of thought, are lacking in that expressive genius so characteristic of his wonderful paintings. His letters to his own beautiful wife, for instance, could never be compared, as literature, with the pulsing, flaming letters of the plowboy Burns to another man's wife. The parents of the famous Inness either did not know or did not worry themselves about birth control, as Inness was the fifth of a family of thirteen children. He was born in 1825 and died in 1894, passing away with the glory of a Scotland sunset, the beauty of which, as he gazed upon it, seemed to overpower and paralyze his senses. As he gazed upon the flaming orb as it sank below the horizon he suddenly exclaimed in ecstacy, "My God, how beautiful!" and sank almost unconscious to the ground. A few minutes afterward he passed away in the arms of his beloved wife. "His spirit had joined the ranks of that immortal host who find their home in the infinite."

RUTH COMFORT MITCHELL.

Ruth Comfort Mitchell, whose book, "The Night Court and Other Verse," contained some of the most poignant poetry written in recent years, has arrived in New York from her bungalow in California. She informed her publishers, the Century Company, that she will sail shortly for Europe with the intention of penetrating into Germany in an endeavor to ascertain the present conditions there. Mrs. Young's husband, William Sanborn Young, the talented artist, will accompany her on this trip, and will illustrate any material she may gather.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAPSES.

THE PRESIDENT'S CONTROL OF FOREIGN RELATIONS. By Edward S. Corwin. Princeton University Press.

There are more gaps in the Federal Constitution in the sections dealing with foreign relations than in any other part. Developments of the last hundred years have revealed that the framers of the Constitution were more deeply concerned in questions arising out of the unity of the States than in those of relations with foreign countries. In fact, the sentiment of the founders of the American republic was that the less the new government would have to do with foreign governments the better it would be for all concerned.

Edward Corwin has pointed out some of the gaps in the Constitution in relation to war and peace and gives an interesting resume of the manner in which they have been bridged over. He points out that:

"Congress is given the power to declare war, while treaties are made by the President and the Senate. Suppose that the President and the Senate make a treaty with another government by the terms of which the United States becomes obligated at a particular moment to declare war on a third power; is Congress under constitutional obligation so to declare war? Or, suppose that before a treaty made in due form by the President and the Senate can be carried out, Congress must vote an appropriation: is it constitutionally bound to do so?

Mr. Corwin shows that the gaps alluded to have been bridged over in actual practice on the theory that "the control of foreign relations is in its nature an executive function, and one, therefore, that belongs to the President in absence of constitutional provision to the contrary."

There is an interesting chapter devoted to "Topics and Precedents" which shows how custom has written into the government of the republic certain principles that do not appear in the Constitution. Two main principles continually recur: the declaration by President Jefferson that "The transaction of business with foreign nations is executive altogether" and that Congress is not to be prejudiced constitutionally in the exercise of its powers by what the executive has done in the exercise of his. Mr. Corwin's book is ably written and the authoritative documents which he quotes add to its value to those interested in the complex subject of Federal diplomacy and foreign relations.

BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG.

A MAID OF OLD MANHATTAN. Bonnie Busenn Knipe and Alden Arthur Knipe. The Macmillan Company, New York.

After selecting a picturesque period—the days of the Dutch domination of Manhattan, with broad-bottomed houses out Greenwich way and manor houses and apple orchards beginning almost with the battery, the authors of this book find themselves in devious mazes lost. They show a lamentable inability to either write English correctly or understandably. The theme is a girl of title who becomes separated from her people and is brought up, first by the Indians and then by a Dutch "Vrouw." Ere long she performs a service for the Governor in true story-book style, the mystery of her origin is resolved and all ends happily with a prophecy of wedding bells.

THE BOYS' BOOK OF SPORTS. Grantland Rice. (Ill.) The Century Company, New York.

Experts in the field of sport have combined to make this book one that every boy will appreciate. For instance, the only Christy Mathewson tells "How I Became a 'Big-League' Pitcher" and Billy Evans tells of "Freak Plays and Superstitions." It is a readable book, with chapters by authorities on tennis, swimming, golf, hockey and other sports, as well as baseball. There are also pictures to show you how to do it.

CARPENTRY FOR BEGINNERS. John D. Adams. (Ill.) Moffat, Yard & Co., New York.

An invaluable book for boys who like to make things, illustrated with more than 200 sketches and diagrams of articles ranging from swing-boards and coat-racks to flower boxes and bird houses. Grown-ups may also get some valuable hints from this book

THE BOY SCOUTS' YEAR BOOK, edited by Franklin K. Mathiews, chief scout librarian, Boy Scouts of America. (Ill.) D. Appleton & Co., New York.

With Theodore Roosevelt, William Howard Taft and Dan Beard among the contributors, and half a hundred subjects treated, this book epitomizes the activities of an organization that is engaged in making better boys by getting them out into the open, and at the same time keeping them in touch with the best thought of both the city and the country.

THE ROMANCE OF KING ARTHUR, illustrated by Arthur Rackham, abridged from Malory's Morte D'Arthur, by Alfred W. Pollard. The Macmillan Company, New York.

Some of the most delightful tales in the world, told in the good, old sinewy English that makes Malory's books and the great Elizabethan translations without a peer among prose. As for Rackham's illustrations, they are gems of color, and make one want to lift them out of the book and put them in a frame for the library.

THE SAFETY FIRST CLUB AND THE FLOOD. W. T. Nichols. (Ill.) The Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

A boy makes good when the valley is swept by flood, and all boys that read the book will get some valuable instruction on what to do when in the face of emergencies.

SHOOTING FOR BOYS. A. Frederick Collins (Ill.) Moffat, Yard & Co., New York.

Beginning with an interesting history of the various old-time weapons as an introduction to the more modern gun, the author gives detailed and valuable instruction on the mechanism and use of rifles, shotguns and other weapons. It is a book that every red-blooded boy will read with eager interest, and it is not unworthy of the attention of all Nimrods.

THE DAYTIME STORY-BOOK. Ruth O. Dyer. (Ill.) Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company, Boston, $1.

A companion to the popular "Sleepy-time Story-book," which it supplements. As the author so well states, it is "for the times when the mother is closest to her child," that is, when making the little one ready for the day.

TRUDY AND TIMOTHY. Bertha Currier Porter. (Ill.) The Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia. $1.

Delicious memories of sugar time and of long lazy summer days in the country, together with a real story, make this book one that the kiddies will clamor to have read to them.

"Glenmore" is a carefully conducted boarding school at which Dorothy is for the first time "out in the world." It is the latest in that series of books that has made "Dorothy Dainty" a household word.

WITH THE CHILDREN ON SUNDAYS. Dr. Sylvanus Stall. (Ill.) The Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

Gives a fund of information on how to entertain the children, and, incidently, impart some merited Christian instruction, in connection with the Sabbath day.

THE ADVENTURE CLUB AFLOAT. Ralph Henry Barbour. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

Barbour, whose books for boys have won him a deserved clientele, has put a club of boys aboard a launch and a smaller craft, and sent them sailing northward along the New England coast. Naturally they have no end of fun, and also adventure aplenty.

HEROINES OF SERVICE. Mary R. Parkman (Ill.) The Century Company, New York.

A companion book to the same author's "Heroes of Today." The women treated are Mary Lyon, Clara Barton, Frances Willard, Julia Ward Howe, Anna Shaw, Mary Slessor, Madame Curie, Jane Addams, Alice C. Fletcher and Alice Freeman Palmer.

MONEY MAKING FOR BOYS. Frederick Collins (Ill.) Dodd, Mead & Co., New York, $1.

This book fills a long-felt want. Most of us have our livings to make, so why not give the adolescent boy an early start on the highway to prosperity by initiating him into the mysteries of money-making? This the book under survey attempts to do. It shows how any body, anywhere, may coin his spare time into money, and it also grounds him in business essentials.

ST. PAUL THE HERO. Rufus M. Jones. (Ill.) The Macmillan Company, New York.

A representation in fiction form of the life and works of one of the greatest heroes of Christian history. Dr. Jones has given considerable time to the study of the man and his message, with the result that the book is one that should appeal to even grown-ups.

CAMP JOLLY. Frances Little. (Ill.) The Century Company, New York.

Two men, three boys and a dog make camp at the foot of the Grand Canyon, and proceed to seek adventure, which they find aplenty. It is a book of pleasant descriptions and headlong chapters that boys will read with eager interest.

ACQUIRING WINGS. William B. Stout (Ill.) Moffat, Yard & Co., New York.

A book on the basic principles of aviation, written by an expert who is now in government service. The original draft of this volume was prepared by the author for the use of a small class of men who were sent abroad to study aircraft production and its problems, at a certain stage in the war's development. It is an informing book in little.

THE SAMPO. James Baldwin (Ill.) Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

A gleaning from the great Finnish epic, the Kalevala, of such stories of wonder and adventure as will appeal particularly to children. Here we learn of the forging of the Sampo, of the courting of the Maid of Beauty, the field of serpents, the tree of magic and other wonderful things. The illustrations by N. C. Wyeth are unusual, and worthy of such a wonder book of the North.

HEROES OF TODAY. Mary R. Parkman (Ill.) The Century Company, New York.

Gives in crisp narrative the struggle for achievements, and their attainments in the line of service, of such well-known modern day persons as Herbert C. Hoover, Rupert Brooks, John Burroughs, John Muir, Samuel Pierpont Langley and Bishop Rose. It is a book that adults can read with benefit.

PIANG, THE MORO JUNGLE BOY. Florence Partello Stuart (Ill.) The Century Company.

Differences between the Moro and the Filipino are clearly pointed out in this story, which deals with a rich but hitherto unexploited field of stirring life and incident, drawn from the author's personal experience while sojourning with her father's command in Borneo and the lower Philippine Islands.

THE POLAR HUNTERS. Francis Rolt-Wheeler (Ill.) Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company.

Books in Dr. Rolt-Wheeler's "U. S. Service Series" have long been in the front rank for juveniles, and the present is no exception to the rule. Considerable is said of the deeds of our Arctic explorers, with Peary's exploits given foremost rank. It is a book that breathes the fascination of the frozen North, and holds your attention with facts that read like romance.

MYSTERY TALES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS. Selected by Elva S. Smith (Ill.) Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company, Boston.

A selection that ranges from Poe's incomparable "Gold Bug," which begins the book, to "Fisherman's Ring," by Selma Lagerlof, and from "The Ancient Mariner" to "The Admiral's Ghost," by Alfred Noyes. I am glad to see that the editor has not forgotten that Washington Irving wrote some of our best mystery stories of the old-fashioned type.

THE ENCHANTED BIRD. Antoinette de Coursey Patterson. (Ill.) The Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

Modern fairy tales with all the old accessories, to'd in a pleasing way and sure to delight the little folks.

STORIES FOR THE HISTORY HOUR. Nannie Niemeyer. (Ill.) Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

Augustus, Trajan, Alaric, Clovis, Cuthbert, Charles the Great and others move in a procession through these pages and instruction is imparted with an air of "Well, it all happened this way."

OLD CROW STORIES. Katherine B. Judson. (Ill.) Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Indian folk tales and myths about the animals who inhabited earthland before the "Great One" made real people. Old Crow and Raven find the all-pervading darkness isn't to their liking and they scheme to get Gull's box of light and make a little daylight. They succeed, and in succeeding make a story that is the first link in a chain of many.

PEGGY OF ROUNDABOUT LANE. Edna Turpin (Ill.) The Macmillan Company, New York.

Of a piece with the books that we used to get from the Sunday-school library, and that we read with avidity until we found that Charlotte Bronte gave us more thrills per page than any or all of them. However, the story is a pleasing one.

SLANG OF THE TRENCHES.

Napoo is a bit of argot that the Flanders trenches have produced. "We thought we was napoo when we 'eard that little bundle of wun a-coming," explained the sergeant.

For the benefit of the puzzled lover of etymology, Sapper, in his new book, "No Man's Land," traces the corruption back to its original and pure source.

Il n'y en a plus. There is no more: French phrase signifying complete absence of. Largely heard in estaminets (cafes) near closing time.

Naploo. Original pure English phrase signifying the perisher has run out of beer.

Napoo. Vulgar and bastardized shortening of original pure English phrase; used to imply that a man, thing, person, animal or what not is "finished."

RUSSIAN STORIES.

THE HOUSE WITH THE MEZZANINE, AND OTHER STORIES. by Anton Tchekoff. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

Russian life, querulous, plaintive, vodka-cursed and caste-shackled is faithfully and graphically depicted by Anton Tchekoff in "The House With the Mezzanine," a collection of short stories and sketches, translated from the Russian by S. S. Koteliansky and Gilbert Cannaux. He who cannot read between the lines of these boldly drawn narratives an explanation of Russia's present troubled condition is blind indeed.

The title story, "The House With the Mezzanine," is perhaps the least effective offering of the volume. It is related in the first person by "Mr. N.," a young artist who becomes enamored of one Missyus, a maiden of wealth living on a neighboring estate, only to have her spirited away from him forever through the agency of Lyda, a jealous sister.

Throughout this story and the entire volume, there sounds that undertone of morbid, introspective questioning of the mysteries of existence so inherent in the Russian mind.

"My life, the Story of a Provincial," stretching almost into novelette lengths, is among the best pieces of workmanship in the collection. This tale is related by Polyneiv, a youth of the upper class who, tired of a life of inanity, renounces his inheritance and becomes one of the canaille, painting roofs, gilding altars and papering the club rooms of his former companions. From his station in the lower classes Polyneiv witnesses sickening bribery and corruption on the part of his so-called "superiors." There is Dolyhikov, the railway engineer who built his station five miles from town because the municipality would not agree to a bribe of fifty thousand rubles to bring it nearer and the bloated stewards who forced the painters to sign receipts for twice the amount of money paid them. Then, of course there is a love affair—between the outcast Polyneiv and pretty Maria Victorovna, a society butterfly attracted to the young painter because of his sheer audacity. The pair marry and settle down in the country to live a simple life as tillers of the soil, but Maria soon hears the call of her former companions and leaves the luckless Polyneiv to his own devices.

"Typhus," "In Exile," and "Goussiev" are cleverly carved cameos of contemporary Russian life while "Gooseberries" and "The Lady With the Toy Dog" aspire to the dignity of short stories, the latter treating the risque theme of illicit love.

JAMES STEPHENS.

James Stephens, whose delightful story, "Mary, Mary," has just been added to Boni & Liveright's series of modern classical reprints, the Modern Library, is one of the leaders of the new Irish literary renaissance. He was one of the four founders of "The Irish Review" in 1911—Padraic Colum, David Houston and Thomas MacDonagh being the three others. "Mary, Mary," which was written in 1910 just after the appearance of "Insurrections," ran through the first twelve numbers of the "Review" under the title of "Mary; A Story;" and from the publication of its first chapters the appeal of "Mary" was felt in two or three countries.

James Stephens brought a fresh and distinctive element into the new Irish literature. His work began to appear about 1906. Like the rest of the young Irish writers he made his appearance in the weekly journal Sinn Fein, contributing to it his first poems and his mordant or extravagant essays and stories. At once he made a public for himself. His first poems were published in a volume, called "Insurrections," and his public became a wide one.

"Mary, Mary," brought out in 1912, was his first prose book. His next, the unclassifiable "Crock of Gold," was given the De Polignac prize in 1914. Since then he has published two other prose books—"Here Are Ladies" and "The Demi-Gods," and three books of verse, "The Hill of Vision," "Songs from the Clay" and "The Rocky Road to Dublin." The new edition of "Mary, Mary" in the Modern Library contains an introduction by Padraic Colum.

Such writers as these — Booth Tarkington, Edgar Lee Masters, Owen Wister, Gouverneur Morris, Charles Hanson Towne, George Ade, Julian Street, Gertrude Atherton—these and many more authors, poets, painters, musicians, sculptors and actors have joined together in a magnificent tribute to France. It is a gift book of rare beauty.

BOOK REVIEW SECTION

CONDUCTED BY GORDON RAY YOUNG

SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 16, 1917.

MOST HIDEOUS AND GREATEST BOOK ON WAR EVER WRITTEN.

Henri Barbusse's "Under Fire" Destroys the Conspiracy of Lies that has Cloaked National Butchery in "Glory"—The Finest and Winning Soldiers those that can Face the Truth and Fight on—Graphic Articulation of those Sentiments that will Destroy War, All War.

IT IS A GOOD DEAL, but not too much, to say that Henri Barbusse's "Under Fire" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) is the greatest book that has been written about this war; but it shows not so much the greatness of Barbusse as of the French people, and it does not show that greatness in textual adjectivism, but in the manner in which the French people have received the book. A seventh edition printed in this country since August, indicates that we of America, too, may have in us that quality which keeps France honest and invincible. Its wide-reaching popularity in England shows also that Britons, with true traditional pluck, are willing to fight on and on without any of those glamourous illusions that must need inspire the Hun.

M. Barbusse has told the truth about war, and that truth has been translated into English by Fitzwater Wray. Now it happens that the chosen of the earth have always been the people who could face cold facts and not flinch—stare into the lidless eyes of truth and stand firm. If I had read "Under Fire" in manuscript I would have suggested to the author that he reconcile himself to a long term of imprisonment if not to the firing squad; for it was—and still is—inconceivable that the agencies of martial law and of the hysterical patriots would not fly to crucify one who in these days dared to say that those "whom fatigue had tormented, whom rain had scourged, whom night long lightning had convulsed, these survivors of volcanoes and flood, began not only to see dimly how war, as hideous morally as physically, outrages common sense, debases noble ideas, and dictates all kinds of crimes, but they remembered how it had enlarged in them and about them every evil instinct save none, mischief developed into lustful cruelty, selfishness into ferocity, the hunger for enjoyment into a mania."

The heroism of war—forsooth! Here is a man who has been through it speaking honestly as he feels. He avoids that conspiracy of liars which tries to convince men of all nations that there is something heroic, noble, lofty in butchering other men simply because one risks one's own life to do it. For forty years German professors and publicists dinned the "glory" and "beauties" of war into the thick heads of the Kaiser worshipers; and when the war broke, the Allies, and later the Americans, tried and are still trying to delude their own people into the folly that there is something "glorious" about war.

"Heroes?" says one of Barbusse's comrades. "Some sort of extraordinary being? Idols? Rot! We've been murderers. We have respectably followed the trade of hangman. We shall do it again with all our might, because it is of great importance to follow that trade, so as to punish war and smother it. The act of slaughter is always ignoble; sometimes necessary, but always ignoble. Yes, hard and persistent murderers, that's what we've been. But don't talk to me of military virtue because I've killed Germans."

"Nor to me," cried another, "nor to me, because I've saved the lives of Frenchmen! Why, we might as well set fire to houses for the sake of the excellence of life saving!"

"It would be a crime to exhibit the fine side of war, even if there were one!" murmured one of the somber soldiers.

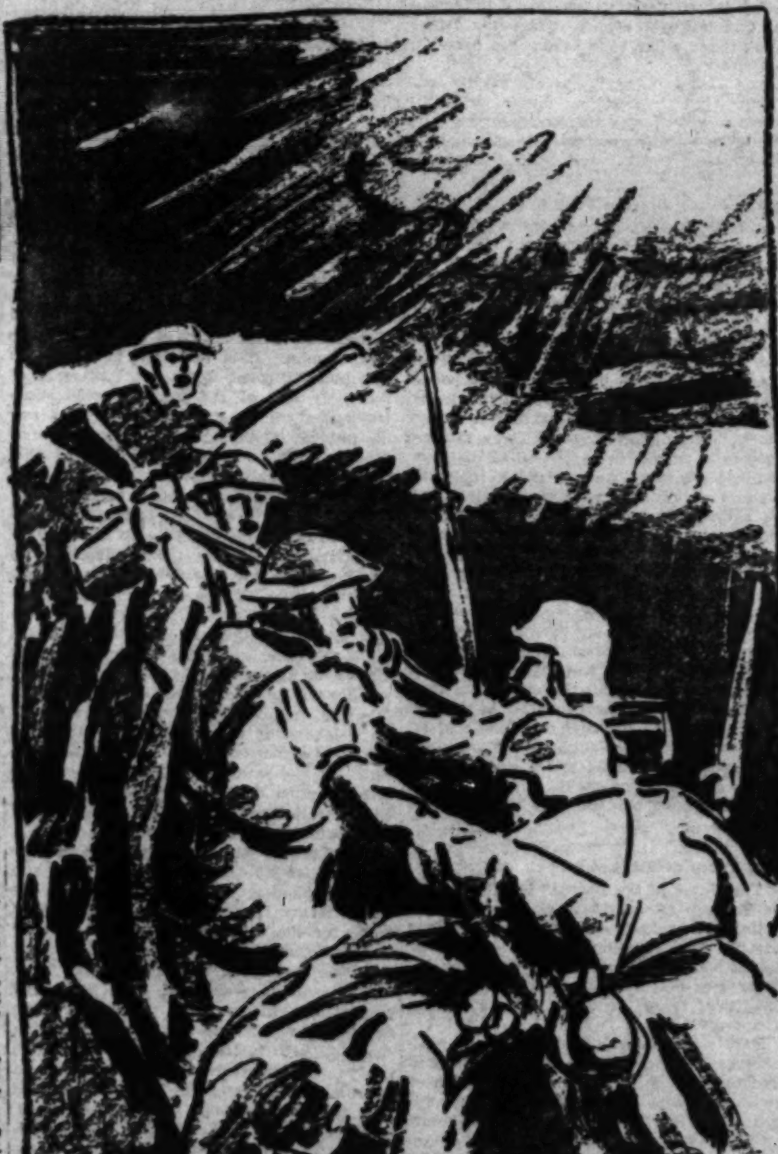
The first man continued: "They'll say those things to us by way of paying us with glory, and to pay themselves, too, for, what they haven't done. But military glory—it isn't even true for us common soldiers. It's for some, but outside those elect the soldier's glory is like every other fine-looking thing in war. In reality the soldier's sacrifice is obscurely concealed. The multitudes that make up the waves of attack have no reward. They run to hurl themselves into a frightful inglorious nothing. You cannot even heap up their names, their poor little names of nobodies."

"To hell with it all," replies a man, "we've got other things to think about."

"But all that," hiccupped a face which the mud concealed like a hideous hand, "may you even say it? You'd be cursed and shot at dawn. They have made around a marshal's plumes a religion as bad and stupid and malignant as the other!"

Heresy! Pro-German! Traitor! I can see the patriot's blood boil as he reads those quotations—that is, it is the blood of the man who thinks he is a patriot. He is the sort of a man who must be fighting mad, and maybe half-drunk, to show even a fragment of courage. M. Barbusse set down actual conversations. His companions told him that he did not dare; but Barbusse is one of those Poilus who flung to the Hun at Verdun the immortal challenge: "They shall not pass!" and his daring, moral and physical, is not to be questioned.

What has been the result of "Under Fire"? This: The conspiracy of lies about war has, in France, somewhat in Britain, to an extent in America, been broken. The French have fought as well since "Under Fire" was awarded the prize of the Academie Goncourt for the best book of the year, and nearly a quarter of a million copies were sold, as they fought before. The fallacy that people must be hoodwinked to make them stand to duty was born of witchcraft in the Stone Age. And as the Allies stood up and fought back when the Germans were victorious, they are now beating and will continue to beat the Germans, because there is within them that grim stubbornness which keeps them steadfast and indomitable without wearing belt buckles inscribed, "Gott Mit Uns," without the illusion that war is "glorious" and "heaven-inspired;" and the soldier that can stick in the trenches when he feels toward war as Barbusse feels toward it, is far more dangerous and invincible than the poor dupe who must have preachers, statesmen and poets shouting how "glorious" war is, and how grateful is the nation.



And it is the sentiments which this book, "Under Fire," has articulated that will do more than anything else to end war. War will not only never end until the bunk about its "glory" is wrapped in moth balls and stored away with other superstitious draperies that were, in times long past and recent, used to adorn and disguise the hideous and revolting. I do not pretend to intimate that "Under Fire" will end war, for if the people of France and England and America had not already in their conscious and unconscious minds discredited the conspiracy of "glory," the book would have fallen flat, though it is easily the most vivid and intimate presentation of war that has been published. Nothing more vivid and intimate can be written, because every minute of the day, of many days, is described; his companions are described to the last detail of personal appearance and actions, their conversation is stenographically reproduced. But more than that, M. Barbusse has an epical—and an awful—power for the larger passages.

"Groups of men are moving about, identifying the dead of last evening and last night, turning the remains over, recognizing them by some detail in spite of their faces. One of these searchers, kneeling, draws from a dead hand an effaced and mangled photograph—a portrait killed.

"In the distance, black shell smoke goes up in scrolls, then detonates over the horizon. The wide and stippled flight of an army of crows sweeps the sky.

"Down from below among the motionless multitude, and identifiable by their wasting and disfigurement, there are zouaves, tirailleurs and foreign legionaries from the May attack. The extreme end of our lines was then on the Berthonval Wood, five or six kilometers from here. In that attack which was one of the most terrible of the war or of any war, those men got here in a single rush. They thus formed a point too far advanced in the wave of attack, and were caught on the flanks between the machine guns posted to right and left on the lines they had overshot. It is some months now since death hollowed their eyes and consumed their cheeks, but even in those storm-scattered and dissolving remains one can identify the havoc of the machine guns that destroyed them, piercing their backs and their loins and severing them in the middle. By the side of heads black and waxen as Egyptian mummies, clotted with grubs and the wreckage of insects, where white teeth still gleam in some cavities, by the side of poor darkening stumps that abound like a field of old roots laid bare, one discovers naked yellow skulls wearing the red cloth fez, whose gray cover crumbles like paper. Some thigh bones protrude from the heaps of rags, stuck together with reddish mud; and from the holes filled with clothes shredded and daubed with a sort of tar, a spinal fragment emerges. Some ribs are scattered on the soil like old cages broken; and close by blackened leathers are afloat, with water bottles and drinking cups pierced and flattened. . . . The Germans who were here yesterday abandoned their soldiers by the side of ours without interring them—as witness these three putrefied corpses on the top of

EXCITING FICTION AND OTHERWISE.

"The Case of Mary Sherman," "The Man Who Killed," "The London Nights of Belzise" and Other Stories.

"The Case of Mary Sherman."

"THE CASE OF MARY SHERMAN" by Jasper Ewing Brady (The Britton Company,) is melodrama, but with the highbrow conflict of religion, politics and law. Col. Brady nearly yielded to the impulse to write a serious, as distinguished from an entertaining, novel. However, being the brother of an extremely successful novelist, Cyrus Townsend Brady, as well as at the head of a large scenario department that specializes in what the public wants, Col. Brady very deftly evades highbrow tedium without giving up his highbrow purpose, which is, primarily, to show that a bishop, a fighting, upstanding, broad-minded bishop may be very bigoted, uncharitable and unjust toward a divorced woman who, though innocent of sin, has been branded as guilty in the courtroom.

The triangular complications are heightened by Dudley, a newspaper boss who makes politics his handmaiden, or rather his concubine, and engages in a franchise fight where the bishop is the opposition leader. The divorced woman in the case is not only Dudley's private secretary—though he doesn't know it—but also is engaged to the bishop's brother. Dudley knows that, however, and plans to make the relationship as scandalous as possible in order to ridicule and discredit the bishop.

So the woman, behind the veiling alias of Mary Sherman, is pitted against two strong-willed, stubborn, hard-fighting men; one of whom is ready to throw her among the outcasts, the disgraced and unforgivable women of the world; and the other is anxious to stone her even as a Magdalene in the hope that one of the stones may ricochet and hit the bishop.

But neither of these men has reckoned sufficiently on Capt. Anderson, her fiance and the bishop's brother, formerly of the army and also of the secret service. At the appointed time, however, Capt. Anderson forces the hour of reckoning, and with a series of quick, dramatic strokes, breaks the boss's political power, confutes his brother's bigotry, establishes the girl's innocence, and leaves the rather bewildered bishop and boss clasping hands in friendship and wondering how they could have been so inhuman as to fight an unfortunate girl.

The plot is built with care, dexterously manipulated; but it has one decidedly weak spot, and Col. Brady has skilfully camouflaged that weak spot in the hope that nobody would see it. But it isn't entirely clear whether Mary Sherman became the boss's secretary by sheer coincidence (which would be rather stretching the "long arm of coincidence" out of joint) or whether the astute Capt. Anderson, who doesn't—not by a long shot—depend on accidents and coincidences for his effects and information, put her into that job, which of all jobs in the world was the one where he most needed her.

But as Capt. Anderson does not come West to the city of Presidio, where the plot is laid, until Mary has the job, and does not learn of the fight between the bishop and the boss until after he arrives, it appears that Col. Brady did risk the "long arm of coincidence" to swing an otherwise perfectly motivated and consistent plot. But the joke of it that this defect has been so cleverly skimmed over, hedged around and dismissed as to be in itself an artistic feat—though not a commendable feat in a novel that has dispensed with clap-trap and cheap effects to get its big, dramatic, percussive punches.

"The Man Who Killed."

Claude Farrere's "The Man Who Killed" (Brentano's,) translated from the French by M. C. Schuyler, redeems somewhat the slow movement of the opening chapters by giving intimate and seemingly authentic—at least convincing—descriptions and discourses on life, particularly among the Europeans, at Constantinople. The story is told in diary form by Colonel the Marquis Renaud de Sevigne Montmoron, an attache to the French Ambassador. The colonel unexpectedly finds that a fugitive he aided some ten years ago is now chief of the Sultan's spy bureau and retains grateful remembrance of that assistance. The plot slowly develops around the colonel's love for the wife of Sir Archibald Falkland—a hound himself, who flaunts a mistress in his own household and calls her a "cousin."

Then, most conveniently, Falkland is found dead, murdered, robbed; and suddenly, unexpectedly the denouement is exploded under the reader's eyes.

The story is cleverly worked to the climax, but the proportions of the plot are not

brush-seasoned, cynical, slit-eyed veterans with bars and stars and the weight of the world on their shoulders.

Hip-booted mining men from Alaska, sombreroed cattlemen from South America, high-hatted oriental diplomats, soldiers, sailors, actors from all parts of the world rub elbows as they hurry past. The big man with the beetling brows in the giant trench coat is Prince Troubetskoy, the sculptor; the tall, keen-eyed Scandinavian looking into the very souls of the passing crowd is Carl Oscar Borg, the artist. Maurice Bamberger, the New York banker, en route to Southern California, is feeling the commercial pulse of the West as he sits there. Carroll, the theatrical man from Australia, is learning to spot and classify American types. Baron Long walks through, looking, it is rumored, for a site for a new Sunset Inn. Behind him an archbishop jostles an Orpheum actress, and you have just begun some vers libre on "Lobbility" when the friend arrives and you hurry down to the studio, which is a fascinating place where you meet lots of interesting people and everybody pays for his own lunch but can't get in without an invitation or an introduction from a friend. When we arrived, Edith Haines Kuester, formerly of Los Angeles, was just finishing one of her own musical compositions. Charlotte Powers of Los Angeles and Bessie Abbott, whose people live there, gave charming reading and vocal numbers, and pretty soon in strolled George Sterling and Charles Keeler, and a little later Charmion London. We had poetry with our soup, drama with our salad and a hot discussion on Dreiser with our tea and rice cakes, all of which (the edibles, I mean) were served in quaint little Chinese bowls and by a dainty Chinese girl en costume. And every one of us there was looking for friends, fame and fortune all tied up and labeled in one parcel! And there were those there who also sat and knit.

It was hard to tear oneself away from this interesting group, but, having promised a sick friend in Oakland to attend a woman's "reciprocity" affair in her place, there was no getting around it, and there one heard all about the Y.M.C.A. war work in the prison camps of Europe and the women weep and knit copiously and tell the man how very, very much they have enjoyed it all and one feels sure that the sweaters they are knitting have shrunk several inches from the dampness.

And then off to the grand event of the day, the promenade concert and tea at the Palace of Fine Arts, where people look for culture and bow of recognition from Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, or Mrs. Arthur Murray, or Mrs. William Hinckley Taylor, or Mrs. Benjamine Ide Wheeler, who were actually there in the flesh and in their very best bonnets. And there one absorbs such a conglomeration of fugues, barcarolles, murals, caviar canapes and highbrow ravings of the musically initiated that one scarcely knows whether one's auditory perceptions are coming through the eyes or is visualizing through the eustachian tubes.

Back to the St. Francis in time for tea at the height of the fashionable hour, 5:30, where a friend points out Mrs. Eleanor Martin, Mrs. C. O. G. M[illegible], Mrs. Jared How, Mrs. Etien[illegible]s. Jackling and a number of [illegible]nent society matrons, most [illegible] whom had soldiers in their party. Then a hurried scramble into some dinner clothes, not evening dress, for everybody dines in cafes and formal clothes are not worn as much as they were, and the party this evening is a little group of friends among whom were Mrs. Annie Franklin, who has just published a book of charming stories, and Helen K. Williams, who doesn't mind at all if you laugh with her about submerged canines, and Raine Bennett, who has just written the libretto of a Hawaiian opera for which, it is said, Puccini is writing the music, and Cruse Carriel, who has just had the good fortune of a commission to Japan. And then, after you have had eight or ten courses and think it is a lovely party and about time to go home, you find that the evening's entertainment has scarcely begun, and that for pleasure, hospitality, comradeship, San Franciscans believe in piling Pelion on Ossa. At 10:30 you go to the Palace to dance and there somebody makes you do a fox trot that you knew you never could do, and you forget you have any feet and just float around on little, heavenly, rhythmic clouds, that pick the music up and carry it right along with you. And then somebody discovers somebody else who has never seen Chinatown or real Bohemia, and the whole party dashes off in a couple of taxis and finds the Chinamen having their midnight revels in a community kitchen. Verily, something new under the Chinese moon! Over a mammoth, long, community iron stove, each Chinaman is cooking his own batch of chow mein or fried rice, and chatting chummily to his neighbor, and one 90-year-old one insisted on telling our fortunes. He had to be paid in advance, and if you gave him a dime you would live to be 75 and have eight children, but if you gave him two-bits you would live 120 years and be the parent of nineteen!

Then there is a pisco punch drunk at Duncan's, and the red paint man lets us in to have a look at the future life of art, and we descend into Neptune's palace and look at the sailors who are listening to the spangled circes, and they are a husky lot, the sailors, and look like they would make nice fat swine.

Then back to the taxis and out to the beach, where there are more dancing places, and here you see every variety of the "fox" from the wiggly-waggly, hippety-hop to the nice, smooth gliding kind, and here the music just lifts you up and carries you around in a sort of rainbow waltz of ecstacy or an aurora borealis one-step, for verily you are keeping step with Aurora now as she drags in the dawn—and you wonder why! for you feel as though you could dance on and on forever—but next morning

About 10:30,
When you are sure
It is your head
On the pillow,

you know that they did pile Pelion on Ossa and that you've got to tunnel out! But you jump up and go blithely to your desk, for up here we both play and work San Franciscopiously.

Last Week's Question and the Answer

Last week's query: "What was the value of the gold presented to Solomon in one year?" is answered in the First Book of Kings, Chapter 10, Verse 14:

"Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred three score and six talents of gold."

Six hundred and sixty-six talents is the equivalent of about [illegible].

IN A CHANNEL PORT.

Pathetic Procession Seen in a Foreign City.

There was some noise along the jetty, and yet more noise in the wide and narrow streets of the town—clanging trams, whip-cracking fiacres, yelling newsboys, honking taxis and soldiers and sailors tramping the pavements. Noise enough and of the kind befitting a Channel port in wartime, but for a time at least we heard the noise let down, and the bustle softened.

In a wide street of shops appeared a white-haired priest with a white crucifix held high before him. Behind him was another priest reading from a book of prayer. Two laymen came next, bearing a little white painted table with a little white coffin—a cheap board coffin—resting on it. There was a canopy of plain white boards over the little coffin. There were a few white blossoms on the canopy, and beside the coffin a few lilies of the valley—only a few.

Two other laymen followed the coffin-bearers. All the men were bareheaded. Three women—young women and young mothers to look at—followed the two men. One of the young women was in deep black. A group of little girls followed the young women. Two very old women came last. No more than that, walking through a crowded street at 2 o'clock of a bright day!

It was on us almost before we saw it. Men took off their hats as it passed; women blessed themselves. Sometimes men's lips murmured a short prayer; always the women did. The soldiers and sailors, when they were French, saluted nearly always; the British sometimes. The officers, if anything, saluted more profoundly than the enlisted men, and when they did not stop dead, held a hand to their caps for eight or ten paces in passing.

Two soldiers were talking with two girls of the streets. One of the soldiers took off his cap. One of the girls stopped talking to say a little word of prayer. Both soldiers faced about, and all four gazed in silence for long after the little cortege had passed on. Then the first soldier put on his cap, all faced about, and resumed their talk, but more slowly and not quite so loudly as before.

An English Tommy was driving a tram—a swearing Tommy that you could hear a black away. He came on the mourners from behind. He was in a hurry, and by clanging his bell he could have crowded by. But he held the tram in check, nursing it so as not to frighten the two old women in rear—until they came to a wide square. Here there was room. He clanged his bell, not too loudly, turned on the juice, and hurried to make up for lost time.

Men are being killed by the million over here, and other men who have been there—these very men on these streets—will tell you that they hardly turn their heads to see one more killed. But a child is different.—[James B. Connolly, in Collier's Weekly.

THE CITY OF VENICE.

Saved Christendom from the Turks Several Times.

No city of Venice can be discovered on the maps of ancient Italy. It was founded in the decadent days of the Roman empire when the Italians had lost the art of defending their homes against the barbarians from the north. The site of the city was a peppering of sandy islets along the Adriatic coast. None of them was very big and none far from the shore, but the channel was wide enough to protect the refugees from the invaders, who had neither boats nor guns.

The barbarian host which now surges down upon Italy has both guns and boats and Venice is no longer secure upon her sea-girt site. In days of old she was a proud city with the strongest navy in the world and a wide colonial empire. Two or three times Venice saved Christendom from the Turk by her valor. Her bankers held the purse strings of the nations. Her artists painted pictures which were the joy and despair of other climes. Her palaces even in their decay move travelers to wondering delight.

In her glorious prime Venice was a republic, after a fashion, with an elective doge, or president, and an executive council of ten which really governed. The doge was a good deal of a cipher, though he made a splendid show of himself. The activities of the council of ten were secret, swift and wise. The citizen who kept his tongue quiet and merely drank, fought and diced, found their government mild. The citizen who meddled with public matters walked over the Bridge of Sighs and was heard of no more.

The power of Venice fell into decay after a time and was finally wrecked by the League of Cambrai which the Pope engineered for her ruin in 1508. Since then Venice has been only titular queen of the Adriatic. She has been more loved for her gondolas and pictures than respected for her power. It is feared by many that if the Germans capture Venice they will restore it to the Hapsburgs, who were expelled when Italy was unified into a kingdom. The Hapsburgs are not likely to make a long stay in the palace of the doges, but neither does it take such people long to do a world of mischief.—[Portland Oregonian.

The Frau.

Coolidge Gardiner of the Boston Red Cross was talking about the hardships of Germany.

"Soap is almost nonexistent," he said. "Clothes are made of paper. Shoes are constructed of felt, with wooden soles. Stockings and underwear are rationed.

"In short," he ended, "with their paper dresses, their wood and felt shoes, their rationed stockings and their lack of soap, Germany's fraus are pretty frowsy."—[Washington Star.

Much the Same.

"On what platform were you elected?"

"I don't remember," replied Senator Sorghum. "Every candidate was trying to promise everybody everything. As near as I can recall, I was elected on pretty much the same platform as the one my opponent was defeated on."—[Washington Star.

Neōlin Soles Preserve Style—and Wear Longer

YOUR new shoes always have style and shape when you first wear them, but how soon they lose their graceful lines if soled with ordinary leather soles. But your Neōlin-soled shoes preserve their style, because Neōlin Soles are waterproof.

Ordinary leather soles are not waterproof. After one thorough wetting they become spongy and porous, so that they easily soak up—literally breathe in—the moisture from snow underfoot, from muddied crossings, and even from the thin film of water on pavements after thaws and showers.

This moisture soaks into the uppers and the pressure of your walking foot causes the shoe to stretch and lose style and shape.

But waterproof Neōlin Soles make shoes last long because they protect the vital welts and seams from moisture underfoot—and do it more comfortably and more neatly than "rubbers."

And Neōlin Soles last from two to six times as long as ordinary leather.

With Neōlin Soles, thin and light as they are, need for re-soling disappears, for even though they make the uppers last longer they often outwear them.

And Neōlin is so naturally flexible that shoes soled with it require no breaking in.

You can get Neōlin-soled shoes in black, white or tan—at any one of the dealers listed below.

And remember that every Neōlin Sole bears the brand Neōlin. Mark that mark—stamp it on your memory—Neōlin has essayed in the field of motion pictures and he ventures the assertion that the Sennett patrons will find it to be a picture that for sheer dramatic intensity and suspense never before has been surpassed by the product of other film makers. The story is by R. Cecil Smith who took Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg announcement to the effect that all men are created free and equal and has fashioned therefrom a play that abounds in thrills and unexpected twists and turns. The chief players in "Free and Equal" are Jack Richardson and Gloria Hope, whose screen efforts are supplemented by those of more than a score of experienced and capable actors. Mr. Woods has determined to enter the film producing field in earnest and presents "Free and Equal" for his first venture, selecting Los Angeles as the city to have the initial view of his product because he asserts, the theater goers of this city are keener and better critics of a picture than are to be found elsewhere.

Broadway at Eighth Screen.

Tally's Broadway.

Great tales of adventure and daring and love—narratives of rough men whose guns were notched many times, who would "shoot on sight," yet imbued with some gentler strain that impelled them to give up their lives for the women-folk or playfully ruffle the soft locks of a child—this is the old West that Alfred Henry Lewis immortalized in print in his famous series of "Wolfville" stories. "The Tenderfoot," the second story of this series, with William Duncan and Carol Holloway in the leading roles is to be the feature at Tally's Broadway Theater next week. There are more thrills in each one of the five reels of this fast moving drama than is ordinarily found in an average feature and it will no doubt prove a welcome relief from the long run of serious dramas that have held the screen for some time. A new news weeks of timely interest and another "scenic beautiful" will complete the new bill at Tally's.

Superba.

Richard Harding Davis's well-known story, "The Scarlet Car," has been made into a ripping good photoplay, and Franklyn Farnum, the Bluebird matinee idol, takes the leading role with Edith Johnson as his feminine support. The production comes to the Superba for the pre-holiday week attraction, and as a special added feature, Acting Manager Frank V. Seaman has booked the first exclusive pictures of California's heroes in the famous Rainbow division, taken just before that well-known military unit sailed for France. Critics who saw "The Scarlet Car" in the East say that Farnum has never done a better piece of acting, and that William Parker, who wrote the scenario, lost none of the famous author's punch in translating it for the screen. Action is crammed in every foot of film, and there is plenty of heart interest and human touches that make it one of the really worth while photoplay efforts of the entire year.

Garrick.

Another red-blooded drama of primitive passions in the famous mining camps of Alaska where Rex Beach, Jack London, Robert W. Service and other noted authors were wont to find their locale will be shown at the Garrick during the coming week. "The Hell Cat of Alaska" is its title, and an all-star cast headed by Belle Bennett, Jack Livingston and Jack Richardson is to be seen in the production. It is a story where red blood defies the conventions; where men settle their own disputes without recourse to the courts; where women live and love as their heart dictates. A battle royal in a northern dance hall, that is said to be second to none of the famous fights of the screen, is only one of the many thrills. The action centers around Belle Bennett, who is known as the "hell cat," and who finally comes to learn that love is the all redeeming quality of the world, and that when compared to revenge as to sweetness, is as honey to gall. The same type of picture as "Hell Morgan's Girl" or "The Queen of the Barbary Coast," which broke all house records at the Garrick, it is expected by the management to prove no less of a magnetic box office attraction.

Symphony.

Harold Lockwood will be a delightful surprise to Symphony patrons today when he appears in his second comedy, "The Square Deceiver." Those who have been wondering who Lockwood's new leading woman will be must greet pretty Pauline Curley. William Clifford, Dora Mills Adams, Betty Marvin, Kathryn Hutchinson and Dick L'Estrange are in the cast. If you like Harold Lockwood in his first comedy, "The Haunted Pajamas," you will like "The Square Deceiver" even more. To make the programme an entire comedy success, Manager Gates will present another hilarious Drew comedy.

Majestic.

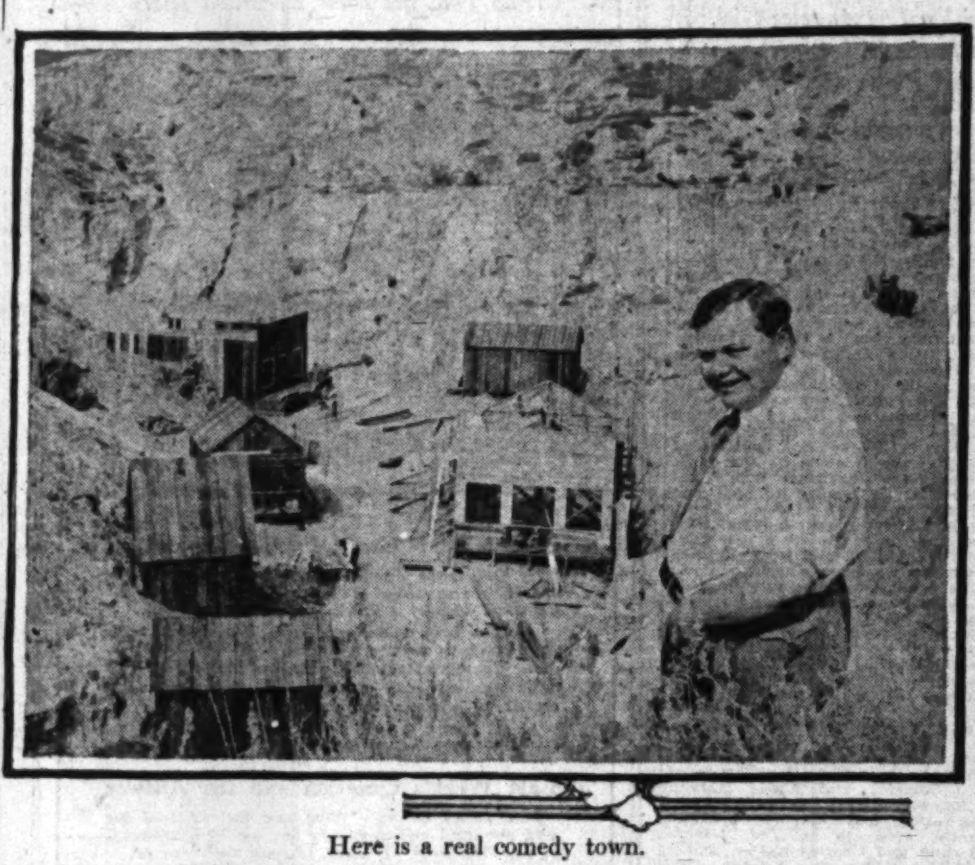
The celebrated Italian war pictures will begin their second and last week at the Majestic with today's matinee. For some time these pictures have been inspiring the greatest interest in New York and they have been constantly added to with fresh scenes from the battle fronts, which have been rushed to this country, so that the spectator sees the character of the country and the fighting conditions along the famous Italian front where the Allied troops are now holding the giant smash of the Austro-Hungarian and German forces to keep them out of the Venetian plains. The Italian war pictures will be shown at the Majestic twice daily during the second and last week.

Alhambra.

George Walsh's latest thriller "The Pride of New York," which is to open today at the Alhambra Theater for a week's run, is promised to be the most exciting story of adventure and love that has been turned out in many moons. The picture was written and produced by R. A. Walsh, George's famous brother, and he has filled it with "punch," "pep" and rapid action that is certain to keep any audience keyed up from first to last. Official government war films of the battle of Arras, showing actual scenes of the great conflict, the added feature to the Walsh film. These war pictures continue to attract many thousands to the Alhambra Theater for they are the real thing and the public knows the best war reels that come from Europe will always be found at this theater.

FOUNDING :: OF :: MAD :: DOG :: GULCH.

Fatty Arbuckle Superintends the Construction.



Here is a real comedy town.

Jovial funster is establishing a western mining camp for his new side-splitter, "Out West," in which gun play and laughable situations run neck and neck.

FISHER APPRECIATES ANNETTE KELLERMA

Here is what Harrison Fisher, noted artist, said of Annette Kellermann in "A Daughter of the Gods which in its seven-reel revised is now being shown at Miller's Theater:

"Here, truly, is the picture tiful in theme and presentation picture at last for the million American women and children picture of pure fantasy and of story for all clean-brained ple.

"'A Daughter of the Gods' the beauty of life, makes use of the loveliness of the wonderful woman in all the makes elves and fairies and real and blends them story of gigantic proportions entirety here is a story as filtered air and as cleansed deep sea.

"This is a picture destined new converts to the screen out the world. It beckons to ers and children, saying:

"Wonderful is nature and kind dwelling amid it. Amazing the virtues of beauty.

"The cause of modern art much to William Fox, the of this charming spectacle."

PADDY M'QUIRE'S NEW DRESSING-RO

There were numerous when the Triangle-Keystone dians moved to the Triangle at Culver City. When Paddy Quire was asked why he melancholy he replied that he been allotted a dressing-room spotless woodwork and cretonne the walls. At the old Keystone dios Paddy took pride in that he had the most dressing-room in the studio idea of a place for everything everything in its place is all Paddy's order of things.

"SLIM" ST. CLAIR DISREGARDS S

Unmoved by countless "the-grass" signs that are on the Triangle studio lawns ver City, Mal St. Clair, Keystone comedian, had to four times what the sidewalk for the first day he was on the lot.

BITS OF VERSE.

While Summers Pass.

Summer comes and summer goes,
Buds the primrose, fades the rose;
But his footfall on the grass,
Coming swiftly to my door,
I shall hear again no more,
Tho' a thousand summers pass.

Once he loved the clovers well,
Loved the larkspur and bluebell,
And the scent the plum blooms yield;
But strange flowers his soul beguiled,
Pallid lilies, laurels wild,
Blooming in a crimson field.

So he plucked the laurels there,
And he found them sweet and fair
In that field of blood-red hue:
And, when on a summer's night
Moonlight drenched my clovers white,
Lo! He plucked Death's lilies, too.

It may be that e'en tonight,
In the Gardens of Delight,
Where his shining soul must dwell,
He has found some flowers more sweet
Than the clovers at my feet,
Some celestial asphodel.
—[Aline Michaelis in Beaumont (Tex.) Enterprise.

Fireflies.

When twilight drops a purple veil
O'er dusky wood and wold,
The velvet shadows scintillate
With tiny stars of gold.
They flash along the winding road
And twinkle through the park,
And glitter in the garden walks
Like jewels in the dark.

They are the souls of motorists—
Those little points of light
That fill with incandescent sheen
The drowsy summer night—
Condemned to haunt forevermore
The evening dews and damps,
Because as mortals here on earth
They failed to light their lamps.
—[Minna Irving in Milestones.

The "Y."

Out where the fight is thickest,
Out where the cannons roar,
Out where the hearts beat quickest
Out at death's open door,
Comfort and solace bringing,
Prayers for the boys who die,
Easing the bullet's stinging,
That's where you'll find the "Y."

Keeping the home touch near him,
Sharing the soldier's sorrows,
Sharing the joys that cheer him,
Planning his new tomorrows;
Being his next of kin,
Ever his welfare viewing,
Serving through thick or thin,
That's what the "Y" is doing.
—[Detroit Free Press.

The Mother of a Soldier.

He stood before me—oh, so big and strong!
I scarcely could believe he was my child—
My little boy who never had grown up—
Who always seemed so care-free, young and wild.
But his grim khaki and its solemn thoughts
Had brought a world-old sorrow to his eyes
As tenderly he whispered, "Dear, be brave!
The mother of a soldier never cries!"

And all alone, in ceaseless agony,
I try to hope and work, to wait and pray.
But oh, how hard it is to sit at home
With all my fears and hopes so far away!
Then comes a letter—what a wondrous joy!
And tremblingly I read, with tear-dimmed eyes:
"Just keep on smiling, honey. Don't forget
The mother of a soldier never cries!"

He's dead—just numb, I sit and try to think;
All I can realize is a big, dull pain.
The world's so empty, robbed of all life's joy,
How can I go on living, just the same,
And keep up courage, when my heart is lead,
With nothing left to live for, or to prize?
But hark! His dear voice whispers,
"Don't give up!
The mother of a soldier never cries!"

No, I will not give up! For there's a thought
That gives me strength to live my empty life:
A man must die some day. The noblest death
Is surely in the glorious heat of strife
Where man, by courage and true sacrifice,
Can prove to God his manhood as he dies.
And so my heart is glad, and I see why—
The mother of a soldier never cries!
—[Rosalind Goldsmith in Washington Herald.

In the Relay.

They are coming down the centuries, the runners, breathing hoarse,
I am waiting for the scurry of the dust above the course.
I could run—my feet are eager—but I watch them turn and trim,
Till a token that one brings me I may carry after him.

I can see the goal before me, but it is not mine alone.
I must bear the scroll he gives me to a waiting wayside stone.
Other hands then swiftly take it, other limbs then urge and strain
For a farther lure of distance, for the purple prize of pain.

They are cheering on the benches, more than thousands as I run;
I am not my own wild heartbeat, but their herald to the sun.
On we rush and, rushing, gather still new strength to press and climb,
For we sweep to man's forever through our little stretch of time.
—[Lewis Worthington Smith in Youth's Companion.

The Willow Whistle.

You made a willow whistle yesterday,
Where we sat resting, and gave it to me,
Not knowing how acceptable 'twould be
Because of recollection; what a day
Of golden sunshine, what a water way
By willows skirted, I again should see;
No, nor what children, smiling happily
Beside me, making whistles in their play.
I thanked you for it; but my thanks were cast
In too few words. My mind had wandered o'er
The borders of the present, and my heart
Had gone back with it, back into the past.
You did not know I was a boy once more,
Pleased with a trifle of a playmate's art.
—[Ralph H. Shaw in Boston Trans

NOTE—This corner is not written, nor advised by the management of J. W. Robinson Co. It is rather the effort of the writer to express, to some degree, the ideals of the institution from the viewpoint of a comparative outsider.—Ed.

As the Christmas Rush approaches the way Robinson's prepares to handle it is interesting.

There is no excitement; no hurry. One sense a plentiful reserve force that takes on easily any new tasks.

Extra help and new salespeople there are, but all have been thoroughly trained and in the general air of helpfulness and co-operation that is the very life of the institution, new members quickly develop the confidence and quiet effectiveness that is characteristic of Robinson's.

STORES AND HOMES.

HINTS, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray.

things in quality which will be certain to make Christmas genuinely "merrie in ye good old-tyme way" for those who receive them. In fact, they are of a quality as high as the tearoom is high in air, and that is near the top of that blackish building which is not far from ninth in its own estimation, although its record as a first-class store is very far from black.

In Christmas Red.

Those recipe files, put forth by a big flour-making establishment, are A-1 Christmas gifts, made as they are now, with a lovely scarlet, gifty binding. They are most convenient too, for filing away Christmas recipes and for use throughout the year. Each month, in fact, recipes are sent to you through the mail, to add to the store in those accommodating files. The cost of the file and recipes is but a trifle through the mail.

Thoughtful and Inexpensive.

A woman who has little or nothing to spend upon Christmas gifts has devised a way of remembering her friends. She has made out a list of all the places advertised which send out samples or handsome catalogues, and to these she has sent the addresses of those she would compliment. Thus they will be surprised, and in many instances greatly pleased, to find in their mail a continuous stream of samples or information, and in many cases, the name of the thoughtful one who ordered them mailed will accompany the inexpensive souvenirs.

Practical.

The new negligee corselette is dainty, comfortable and practical. For wear when one is playing golf or tennis, riding horseback or on a hike, this recently thought-out protector to the feminine form is as easy as the merest girdle and yet it keeps one in good shape, supporting hips and waist and holding up the stockings. Of pink satin, in a handsome finish, it is something not to be ashamed of, and is moderate in price. That voguish shop is first to bring it out, and Madame la Corsetiere the first to expound its merits.

Marshalled by Fashion.

Crowns are mostly high.

Fur collars are worn very high.

The waistcoat blouse is the latest.

Never were street clothes more chic.

Evening clothes are extremely quiet.

Lingerie waists are promised for spring.

Small vanity cases are made of ribbon.

Sailor hats are trimmed with ostrich.

Some of the new fur coats are very short.

Leather coats are popular for motor wear.

Black and silver is a fashionable combination.

The very small hat appears to be coming back.

Narrow skirts and fitted jackets are hinted at.

The white satin collars that have dots of color are the newest.

Velvet is a great favorite for afternoon and evening gowns.

The ruffles of the new petticoats are usually very finely pleated.

Heavy shoulder trimming is found on the new French waists.

Most of the pretty lingerie is made of flesh pink crepe de chine.

Black satin is the most becoming fabric for the gray-haired woman.

Now and then we see a velvet Tam O'Shanter worn with great chic.

Some spring suits boast the closely-fitted back with many seams.

Hemstitching continues to be the chief decoration of the finest waists.

A becoming bodice is cut in slim points that hang gracefully over the skirt.

It is a novel idea to make the sash form the train of the evening gown.

BEAUTIFUL MERMAIDS EVADED THE SHARKS.

With newspapers throughout the United States printing stories about the loss of life along the Atlantic Coast during the past summer, caused by attacks on bathers by man-eating sharks, William Fox's company of 20,000 players, who were making his cinema spectacle, "A Daughter of the Gods," which in its seven reel revised form is now being shown at Miller's Theater, was in Jamaica, and threatened with the same horrors that befell American bathers.

In "A Daughter of the Gods" there are numerous water scenes in which hundreds of pretty mermaids appear and other scenes in which Annette Kellermann, world's greatest swimmer and star of "A Daughter of the Gods," appears.

When Mr. Fox selected St. Anne's Bay for the scenes in his picture he believed that his company would be free from danger at the hands of the sharks that inhabit the water around Jamaica.

In spite of the calmness and apparent security of St. Anne's Bay sharks molested the girls playing mermaids. To provide protection for the girls, Mr. Fox ordered motorboat patrols be established at the mouth of the bay. The men in these boats exploded heavy charges of dynamite and in this manner killed many of the sharks, but some of the huge man-eaters did not even become stunned.

West Indian negroes were engaged to battle the sharks. Armed with long harpoons, scores of negroes patrolled the bay and killed sharks in large numbers. After the first few weeks of working among the sharks the girls became used to the danger and did not fear the destroyers of human beings and in many scenes of this great spectacle the fins of sharks are seen moving through the water quite close to the girls.

FORTY CLUBS TO MEET AT THE LOG CABIN.

The next get-together of the Forty Club, the most exclusive motion-picture social organization in the city, will be the latter part of this month at the Log Cabin in West Adams. George Beban, president, is authority for the statement that this party will be the most unusual yet staged by those demon celebrators.

The magnificent Illustrated Midwinter Number of The Times, out January 1, 1918, is carefully and studiously read by persons in every State in the Union, and it affords classified advertisers splendid opportunities to exploit everything that can be bought, sold or exchanged. Five cents a word. All classifications close December 24, 1917. Display advertising rates furnished on application.

Women's Clubs.

There will be no regular meetings on the 19th or the 26th inst.

The Christmas dinner to 100 soldiers from San Pedro will be given on the 20th inst., followed by a dancing party at the clubhouse. On the 22nd inst. the Christmas party for the children of the club members will be given at 2 p.m.

The dancing party for the older sons and daughters of the club members will be given the evening of the 27th inst.

An urgent appeal is made to all club members and their friends to give at least one gift for the inmates of the County Farm. Small pieces of money, caps, white aprons, shoulder capes, handkerchiefs, sox, pipes and tobacco, in fact, anything acceptable to old people, also toys for children. They should be taken to the clubhouse before December 21.

Altadena Woman's Club.

Mrs. Louise P. Wells, president of the Altadena Woman's Club, has written to the editor of The Times in connection with a recent comment anent a resolution adopted by the club. In the course of the letter she makes the following statement:

"The Altadena woman's circle does not meet in the grounds of Mrs. Gartz's home, and it is not 'a pet hobby of hers.' It meets at the homes of its members, and Mrs. Gartz, while a member . . . was not present when the petition referred to was presented and signed by, I believe, every member present. . . . As to Mrs. Gartz, I want to say that, while many of her neighbors and friends deplore her activities along certain lines, they do not for one moment doubt her patriotism and intense charitableness."

The petition referred to follows:

"We, the undersigned, citizens of California, because of our intense patriotism and our great desire to aid the government in its huge task of conservation, ask that when the next draft of troops is called they be ordered to bring with them to camp, whenever practicable, their civilian woolen underwear, overcoats, sweaters and blankets. Let them bring their overcoats, however grotesque they may look, and four or five blankets, as heretofore two have proved quite insufficient. We also suggest that those already in camp, often cold and wet, be allowed to send home immediately for their discarded woolen clothing. These measures will conserve our man power, as many soldiers are dying in our camps of bronchial pneumonia. It will also conserve woolen clothing and release needed supplies to be sent to France. We earnestly urge that each day in our leading newspapers a casualty list be published, giving the name, the State and the cause of death of each soldier who has died in our home camps. This is due to the men who give their lives to their country as truly as if they died upon the battle fields of France. The knowledge that their names will be enrolled among the nation's heroes will sustain them in their dying moments. It is also due to the parents that they see their sons' names honored by the people of America."

At Glendale.

The programme of the Tuesday Afternoon Club at Masonic Temple Tuesday was given by the California Operatic Quartette under the direction of Edgar F. Vance, which gave selections from the operas of "Lucia," "Il Trovatore," "La Boheme," 'Cavaleria Rusticana," "Rigoletto," "Tales of Hoffman" and others. Miss Margaret Goetz talked on what is being accomplished at the Los Angeles Music Settlement among the children of the Italian and Russian quarters, and promised to bring some of the children to the club and give a demonstration of the results obtained.

The club decided to donate a sum to the Y.W.C.A. war work, leaving the amount to the discretion of the executive board. The members were urged to assist with the National Red Cross drive the week beginning today, and were also asked to contribute toward the purchase of the flag pole from which will hang the American flag, Glendale's municipal service flag and the Red Cross flag.

Church of the People.

The women's organizations of the First Unitarian Church, First Universalist Church, the B'nai B'rith synagogue, the Theosophical Society and the Church of the People, will meet at 1 o'clock next Thursday in the headquarters of the Church of the People, Blanchard Building. Mrs. Abbie Norton Jamison will speak on "Democracy in Music" and Mrs. Jessie Edwards will read a symbolical war play, "The Dawn," by Emile Verhaeren, the great Belgian poet. All women are invited.

Congress of Mothers.

Mrs. Clarence Dougherty, chairman of philanthropy for the First District, Congress of Mothers, makes a plea for food and clothing for the the undernourished children in the city and county.

"The high cost of cereals, butter, eggs and milk, has brought about a condition of undernourishment in both babies and school children, which if allowed to continue will eventually make these families county charges, who are otherwise self-supporting," she says.

Mrs. Dougherty asks that we pull together at this Christmas time for the saving of the little children, that their health and happiness may be assured. The work of this department covers the entire county, and brings to light the suffering of many families who otherwise would be overlooked, not coming in contact with social agencies.

Dr. Maud Wilde, also an officer in the Mothers' Congress, has donated her office for the campaign; all donations are to be sent to her, 518 Chamber of Commerce Building.

Election of Officers.

DRINKS ARE PLENTY ON WATER FRONT.

Prohibition has not struck New York, especially around the water-front streets, where the longshoremen, wealthy with war-rate wages, make the saloons prosperous despite war taxation. Billy Lloyd of the team of Orpheum comedians, Lloyd and Britt, was not very familiar with the neighborhood when he stepped off a coastwise vessel that had brought him to the metropolis recently. He did know, though, that he had a thirst and he asked the first man he met for the nearest location to melt it. The longshoreman looked at him astounded and then pointed across the street.

"You see that woman's hat store over there?" he asked.

"Yes," responded Lloyd, "but surely they don't sell drinks there."

"No, that ain't what I mean," said the other. "That's the only place in the block where they don't sell it."

RAY GRIFFITH PICKS OUT A SOFT SPOT.

Ray Griffith, Triangle-Keystone comedian, is always on hand with an idea and he usually puts it into affect. When he first entered the large commissary building he noticed that the walls were lined with enlarged portraits of the various dramatic stars in the studio. He remembered an enlargement of himself that was used by Director Reggie Morris in a recent picture, and promptly picked out a conspicuous spot for it in the Triangle studio commissary, between the portraits of Olive Thomas and Margery Wilson. Ray thinks that he has picked good company, but so far the actresses thus honored have not committed themselves.

CAROL HOLLOWAY.

Patrons of Pantages who have joined the big following of Carol Holloway, heroine of the serial there, will have an opportunity to see this charming star in a five-reel picture at a local playhouse the coming week. Miss Holloway made the film between serials.

•IN THE REALM OF ART.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

In Tuscany.

Dost thou remember, friend of vanished days,
How, in the golden land of love and song,
We met in April in the crowded ways
Of that fair city where the soul is strong,
Aye! strong as fate, for good or evil praise?
And how the Lord, whom all the world obeys—
The Lord of light to whom the stars belong—
Illumed the track that led thee through the throng?
Dost thou remember, in the wooded dale,
Beyond the town of Dante the Divine,
How all the air was flooded as with wine?
And how the lark, to drown the nightingale,
Pealed out sweet notes? I live to tell the tale.
But thou? Oblivion signs thee with a sign.

Lithographs of War Work.

Only a few short years ago Joseph Pennell attained to a fair degree of fame—and, let us hope, also to a fair share of fortune—by going in search of the picturesque to the very centers of great cities, and by recording, with pen, pencil and needle, their cathedrals and skyscrapers, their factories and smokestacks. He found their docks and their canals, telling us of the multiform and bizarre activities of those who go down to the sea in ships. He discovered the romance of labor in mill and mart, announcing his find with an energy as tireless as his theme, and with a clearer utterance than has been vouchsafed to any other artist of our time. Later he pictured the Panama Canal, his first great opportunity.

He remains the illustrator par excellence in the field of man's daily work for wage, and once he was strictly urban in his outlook and sympathies. Others have followed him, men far more artistic in interpretation than he, but he loomed big among the many because of his fine and undeviating veracity. He saw clearly, and he could say what he saw. He is a superb draughtsman, though not so imaginative a one as Whistler, or even Brangwyn.

All this was yesterday, when all the laborers of the world trod paths of peace. But the clarion call to war has sounded, and there is no peace anywhere. The factories belch forth blacker smoke than before, for the fires within them have been kindled to a fiercer heat, and workers are welding plowshares into bayonets.

Joseph Pennell's second great opportunity came with war. A year ago the Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George permitted him to show, in a series of some fifty graphic lithographs, one phase of the wonder of the world's work of today—the most stupendously important phase, as we must agree—those vast preparatory activities of war-making, the moulding of cannon, the building of war ships and destroyers, the framing of airplanes. Pennell admits that he does not believe in war, but he does not see why some pictorial record of what is being done to carry it on should not be made, and that from an artist's standpoint, for artists, being of the world, are in the war with the rest of us.

When Pennell's work in England was completed—as much of it as he was allowed to do—it was put on exhibition, and it excited so much interest that the French Minister of Munitions, M. Albert Thomas, invited him to visit and make further studies of similar subjects in France. The artist went to France several times last summer, but an unfortunate combination of untoward circumstances prevented him from getting anything of importance. He failed, much to his charign and regret, and the memory of that failure, he says, will haunt him till he is given a chance to retrieve it.

However, he was shown, on his two visits, many subjects which were supremely interesting, and could he have drawn them they would have been well worth the doing. Not only was he taken to the front, but he was also taken to see some of those parts of France which have been fought over—some of the towns which have been destroyed, and some of the fertile fields which have been turned into places of waste and desolation.

He returned to America, his native land, where he feels that every loyal man should be in its present crisis, and here his third great opportunity came. He was authorized to make records similar to those he had done in England and had failed to make in France. What he has done in the United States, with what he has done in England, is being shown in the ninety-nine lithographs of war work now on exhibition in the rotunda of the art gallery at Exposition Park. They will remain on view to the end of December. Your patriotism must compel you to go out and see them and study them, even though your understanding of art may be nil.

But I assure you there will be no war-time tax on your understanding in this case, for he who runs may read these vivid records of achievement in munition making. And you will not run. You will linger with a certain thrill of awe and pride. You will realize that if we are great in peace, as we firmly believe, we are equally great in war. Here, at all events, is posted the evidence of our and England's greatness in preparation for war, and we believe—nay, we know—that the mighty thews which twisted these bars of iron into cannon will be strong to hurl them into the forefront of battle. The proof is ours already.

The lithograph stone is peculiarly sensitive to the touch of the artist behind his chalk. It records what he felt as well as what he saw. To be sure, the old lithograph of commerce offered us no such fond assurance, for it remained in the hands of the artisan till Whistler stepped forward and wrested it away and turned it over to his brother artists. Joseph Pennell became one of the beneficiaries. The field of art was enlarged, the quick impression of a scene was not limited to one of half a dozen prints, but was extended to a thousand. When we look at these noble lithographs of war work chalked rapidly for us by Joseph Pennell we know that in a score of other great cities in America and England thousands of other interested and absorbed spectators are doing the same. The lithograph is, in truth, the widespread art expression of democracy—and these particular lithographs show how democracy is preparing to war on autocracy to the finish.

Rembrandt would have etched some of these scenes with devotion and delight—the glow, the flame, the immense forms of hammers and cranes, and the immenser forms of looming shadows. Compared to these black caverns of rushing flame and ringing iron, Vulcan's forge was but a village smithy, for in his day the great god Mars was innocently content with a spear, a shield, and a helmet. That wild fighter had not yet dreamed his horrific nightmare of gas and flame, of poison and pestilence, of weird airplanes and monstrous submarines. He was content to war on the surface of the earth, not above it and under it.

Yet Pennell's etchings are not all of Cyclopean horrors. Sometimes he brings us into places that are sylvan and sunny, under blue skies, silvered with clouds instead of blackened with smoke. To be sure, these places are always a setting for the making or the testing of airplanes, or for the building and launching of huge ships that seem like the airy structures of some beautiful and fantastic dream, some wonderful phantasmagoria from fairyland. What grace these ships possess, what magnificent symmetry of lines! They are so lovely that we can hardly believe that they are also so terrible. And the airplanes—no wonder Pennell calls one of his pictures "The Larks." We count them, two, three, four, many more, winging their way through the clouds like singing birds, ever mounting higher and higher. Beautiful, beautiful! Hail to you, blithe spirits.

But there are ninety-nine lithographs, not one of which is without its interest. I may not mention them all; I am constrained, indeed, to mention only a few, and I will, therefore, pick those few from American subjects, quoting some of the artists' own comments on them in the New York catalogue, which accompanied the exhibition at Keppel's, held in New York from November 3 to November 24. That exhibition contained fifty lithographs, all from America; our is twice as large, comprising subjects from England as well as America. He who still thinks that we in Southern California suffer from art isolation must now begin to recognize his error.

"Building the Camp." All sorts and conditions of machines and of men were at work on it. The steam shovels removing mountains, gutters being dug as deep as trenches, buildings going up and trees coming down as far as one could see. "The Balloon Shed." I only know of this one balloon shed in the country. Probably in design it is out of date, but pictorially it is fine. "The Birds of War." Like birds—and they are birds—the planes chase each other round the field. Now they soar, then they dive, in the sun they glitter, in the shadows they disappear; and far and near, high and low, they rise, they soar, they plunge, and then they skim, feeling for the ground, and then they come to rest upon it—"the birds of war."

"The Riveters." What perpendicular cathedral is as full of mystery as this shop? I know of none, and I know most of them; and when the fires glow on the work altar and the great jaws pierce and rivet the boiler plates, one hears the "hymn of work." "The Biggest Lathe in the World." I have seen great lathes and great guns in Europe, but this one is certainly greater than any other. "The Flying Locomotive." Yes, locomotives can soar—can fly—and, like Mahomet's coffin, stand in the air; and they do these things in a blaze of glory, because the shop where they are built is not big enough to shift them about in any other way. "The Armor Plate Press." The English maker rolls rapidly his armor plate in heat and smoke and flame. The American slowly presses it, but with a press so powerful that it will crush the huge ingot; so sensitive that it will not break a watch crystal placed under it.

"Casting Shells." Slowly the ladle moves, carried by the crane man, steered by the workmen, goggled and gloved—I had no time to draw these details. Into each mold it dropped just enough molten metal to make a shell head. "The Gun Pit No. 1." These pits, which I have drawn in Europe and America, have the greatest individuality of all the processes of war industry. The buildings are most impressive, towering, windowless, somber without, mysterious within, filled with strong shadows and strange shapes. "Making Propellor Blades." Blue in the shadows, and such blue!—gold in the light, and such gold!—were those blades, in this great shop, and, as I worked, the engines steamed in and a propellor went out to fit in the ship standing in the dock just outside.

"The Transports." The spoils of war, for what had been great traders were now to be great troop ships—and with their transformation what an awful change has come to our world!

"Building Submarine Chasers." All round the big ship the little boats gathered, being built out of doors wherever there is water into which the crane may swing them as soon as they are made. "Submarines in Drydock." There they lay in long lines, soon to be ready to start on their venturesome voyages. "Building the Battleship." Inside the big shed where she was built and launched, she lay, getting her finishing touches, or rather those that could be given her, for her masts were too big to finish. Her turrets were being fitted and her turbines put in, and soon she would begin her life of terror and horror. "The Prow." "Very pretty drawing," said the Admiral, when I showed him this leering, staring, slobbering monster, the spirit of war. It is fascinating, but it is intolerable.

Water Colors by Karl Yens.

An exhibition of sixty-six of the charming small water colors by Karl Yens is now being held in the Friday Morning Club. Yens paints in aquarelle with facility and subtlety, often giving to his pictures a haunting poetic suggestiveness. I understand that these water colors at the Friday Morning Club are for sale at a moderate price. They would make excellent Christmas gifts. A more extended notice of them will appear in this column next week.

CRACK POOL PLAYER.

George Britt, Orpheum Comedian, is Amateur Champion of New England.

George Britt of the vaudeville team of Lloyd and Britt, entertainers de luxe, coming to the Orpheum Monday, is a clever lad with his voice and feet. Of that there is no doubt. But clever as he is on the stage, he is just as clever with the billiard cue on the green-topped table. For seven years he has held the amateur pool championship of New England, quite an achievement when is is considered that New England is the home of many of the world's greatest cue manipulators.

Britt spends an hour or two every day, rain or shine, at practice. And he derives his greatest pleasure from inventing trick shots. He has a repertoire of over a hundred fancy and seemingly impossible formations, and he is master of every one of them. One of his favorite shots is to place a ball in front of each of the six pockets and put them all in by one shot of the cue ball. There are said to be but two other players who can perform this trick.

One of Britt's prize possessions is an ebony cue tipped with ivory and inlaid with gold and silver in fantastic design. It is a gift from a high Chinese dignitary who visited the United States several years ago. This Chinese is considered an expert player in China, and friends arranged a meeting between him and Britt. The vaudevillian bested him, and the Chinese with true sporting spirit, sent him the cue as a memento upon his return to his native land.

MARY PICKFORD'S ORPHANS AT RODEO.

A special section has been engaged for the Fairbanks rodeo at Washington Park to be occupied by "Mary Pickford's orphans." There will be 165 of the children from the Los Angelies orphanage in attendance to shout lustily at Doug's efforts to rope and hog-tie a steer.

Looking after the children of the Los Angeles orphanage is one of Miss Pickford's pet charities, and the Fairbanks Rodeo furnishes Miss Pickford an excellent opportunity to give her charges a half day's outing full of excitement and thrills.

WILLARD MACK WARNS DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS.

An eastern newspaper recently printed a story announcing that Douglas Fairbanks had pensioned his athletic trainer, Spike Robinson, and entered partnership with the latter in a pigeon ranch. This attracted the attention of Willard Mack, the famous playwright, who telegraphed Fairbanks the following night letter:

My dear Doug:

Sorry to hear you and Spike are going to raise squabs. It is a dangerous and expensive pastime, and besides, you are not old enough. Squabs flourish better when raised by a man of 50. They require great care and very lovely lofts. Squabs should have two limousines and a touring car. They will not learn to walk and must be fed any hour of the day or night. However, they are sometimes very intelligent and learn to say papa and daddy without great trouble. They should be taught this by waving money at them. If this fails, try diamonds. Be very careful of Spanish squabs. They acquitted one of murder here last week, and with all this, if you have a nice one, hand raised, and my wife will let me keep it, send it on.

QUEEN::OF::ALL::RAGTIME::AIRS

Sophie Tucker—Singer of Joy Songs.

At the Orpheum this week.

With her five kings of syncopation the favorite entertainer wil deville patrons a genuine treat.

New Methods.

SOPHIE TUCKER EXPLAINS CHANGE IN HER SONG

SOPHIE TUCKER is one of the best-known entertainers in Orpheum vaudeville. She has made a name and has amassed a fortune—she admits it—by tactics on the variety stage that bordered on the "rough-house." She has abandoned those old comedy methods, and in a minute she shall explain why and how, but, frankly, Sophie Tucker was inclined to be rough in the old days. But her methods made folks who saw her laugh, and Sophie herself laughs most of the time, excepting when she is restoring her spiritual balance by crying over a sad film. Sophie Tucker was one of the first successful vaudeville entertainers to utilize the now practically-extinct form of singing, if you may call it such, known as "coon shouting." It was ragtime raised to the nth power.

"I never liked it," she said.
I stumbled into the discovery
I could do it and that people
it. I also found that would pay for it. It was bad, and I guess all my rough. I tried and tried to from it, but managers were and, between you and me, I ing the work. Call it you wish. Maybe it was

"I was playing in Chicago

HER NEW SONGS.

Sophie Tucker has the tion of an indefatigable and seeker for new songs also known as an actress her level best to "set up" so that the vast multitude of ville and cabaret performers
"lift" them. She averages four new songs every week constantly in the market products.

"Do you wonder then," she
"why I do my best to keep for myself? I do hard work the others get the benefit.
the way I work it: I do all to do a song for myself

They have to live, too, and
Tucker is big and strong and

Isobel Lou Easton, the South Olive branch, also wished to make connections with the club, and inquired the shortest road. Isobel was late for the recitations in the "L" class, but had an entry like this:

"'L's' for Lillian—fair of face;
Lovers, liars, lilac, lace;
Lips and linger, list and lay,
And lullabies of a perfect day."

Isobel also offered this fragment as a further sample of her wares:

"'K' stands for a Kiss, and kiss

To turn on our human elec-tric-i-ty.

Isobel was advised to keep on trying and some day she would find herself a really, truly member.

Lynn C. Doyle, who is both painter and poet, wrote from his moorings in Los Altos, begging for merciful treatment for his effusions. He also asked for admission to the club and wanted to know whether that meant for life or merely for a hundred years. His last offering when fitted to the harmonica glided like this:

Lines to La Follette.

"Oh, well, I remember how once you were great.
But my! how you have fallen.
Once filled with fame; now steeped in shame—
(I hear the Kaiser callin'—)

Other applications for membership were carried over to the next symposium while members went down to the studio to watch the workouts of a couple of candidates for the place of vampire in the screen work of the club. One of them brought letters from the prosecuting attorney of her county to show that she had been instrumental in wrecking five homes and was sobbing for more.

But it takes more than a mere home wrecker to be a vampire.

Ask the man.

At the next symposium of the club the entries will be received for the "N" class in the alphabetical anthology. These and all other poems or applications for membership may be mailed up to Thursday morning to Eugene Brown, Editorial Rooms, The Times.

THEATER LANDMARK.

Burbank Books Transcontinental Vaudeville Road Show for the Near Future.

The landmark of Los Angeles as far as theatricals are concerned is the memorable Burbank Theater, where now vaudeville graces the stage. Years ago Oliver Morosco started the famous Burbank stock company, and when that organization was transferred to the new Morosco house on Broadway, guessing contests were the order of the day. No one knew just what would go into the Burbank Theater, and after several organizations had held the keys of the house, S. Morton Cohn came down from San Francisco, looked at the city and into conditions and signed a lease for the theater. Since then he has presented there popular-priced vaudeville, giving additional pleasure every week with a five-reel first-run cinema production.

The patronage of the house has increased from day to day, and now that Mr. Cohn makes the announcement that the big transcontinental vaudeville road shows, coming directly from New York, via Chicago and San Francisco, to Los Angeles, are to come to the Burbank, beginning December 24, patrons could not wish for a better Christmas present. These shows have been personally picked by the chief executive of the corporation, and each act is guaranteed to be the best obtainable. Wails of woe from the treasurer anent the increased pay roll indicate that the expense gone into in securing these acts must have been quite considerable. The fact is that at the price of admission asked for these vaudeville shows Burbank patrons' money will be invested as safely as in a Liberty Bond, and, what is more, the interest, that is the pleasure derived from the investment, is said to come high. Mr. S. Morton Cohn announces for the opening bill of the transcontinental road shows the booking of one big girl act, the Royal Scotch Entertainers, Leroy and St. Clair and other well-known acts. As usual, there will be an added feature attraction, especially picked to enhance the big bill.

A Raffia Twine-Holder Comes Well Within the Limit

THIS is the story of a girl who started out to give no Christmas gifts at all, but to donate her usual allowance for gifts in a lump sum to the Red Cross or the tobacco fund or something. But the nearer Christmas grew the more the holiday spirit made her conscience prick. After all, she argued, it wasn't exactly right to wriggle out of giving entirely. It was a lazy way of keeping Christmas to write a check and mail it to her favorite charity and then just tell everybody she wasn't giving gifts this year.

So she hit on the happy compromise of limiting herself to 50-cent gifts and giving the remainder of her allowance away, which, even at that, will make a sizable check for some worthy cause. And here are some of the things she made:

For an aunt who has everything, but who likes novelties, she wove the darling little twine holder of some straps of raffia, which she had on hand. Even if she had had to buy the raffia in a 25-cent bunch, the smallest quantity you can get, she would still have come out much under her 50-cent limit. She dyed the natural raffia with some vegetable dye to make it a rich brown, and then bought a ball of good, strong twine in a bright yellow color for 15 cents. Then over the twine she wove the raffia this way: To a small brass ring she attached twenty pieces of raffia, doubling each piece and slipping the ends thru the loop over the ring. Using one pair of these strings as a leader and taking one from each of the adjoining pairs, she made a Solomon's knot thus: Place cord No. 4 (counting from left to right) over leader and under No. 1, bringing No. 1 up under 4 and leader and thru loop, drawing it tight. Reverse process for other half of stitch, number 1 under leader and over 4, number 4 over leader thru loop over 1. Draw up tight to other knot. The result is like an interlocked buttonhole over the leaders. But to go on with the story: She continued making these knots with her twenty strands over the ball of twine, until she had it all inclosed. Then she gathered the ends together at the bottom, bound them with a piece of raffia and cut them off to a 2½-inch fringe. The end of the twine was gathered into the tassel and could be pulled thru with ease. To hang it up with, she attached four pieces of raffia at opposite sides of the brass ring, dividing the other strands evenly. These she knotted in Solomon's knots for five inches and then knotted both together to form the loop. It was so pretty that she immediately made three more. She could make two in an afternoon.

Then she took out a Turkish towel, which she had bought at a sale for 30 cents because it had such a pretty lavender border. She traced a simple design on each end, first ripping the hems to give room for the embroidery, which she worked with a darker shade of lavender. She bought a pair of cheap cords and tassels for 10 cents and doubled her towel in half, seamed it, made a casing with some muslin scraps for the cord, and her laundry bag was finished.

For a friend who traveled, she made the cutest bag out of a scrap of cretonne from some winter hangings. It only took a quarter of a yard. She rounded the ends, lined it with a piece of rubber sheeting, and bound the outside of the edge with a bright silk cord to match one of the colors of the design. The pockets, which she stitched into the rubber, she bound with seam binding. And then, just to show what it was for, she stuck in a wee piece of soap and a sample of talcum powder.

Cross-barred tea toweling at 20 cents a yard made the most practical and attractive apron for a young bride of her acquaintance. She used two yards of it, cut a long U out of one end, slanted off the ends of the straps thus fashioned and finished the edge with a cheap cotton edging in a color to match the bar of the toweling. Snaps at the sides held the crossed tabs to the apron. It was made full skirt length.

Then it occurred to her that a net jabot could be made for 50 cents. So she bought a half yard of two-yards-wide net, enough for four jabots when she cut two sixteen-inch squares diagonally in half. Each jabot used up a yard of imitation filet lace, which she got for the surprising sum of 16 cents a yard. She found she could even have this lace and several tucks hemstitched at 5 cents a yard to make the jabots pretty. On one she embroidered a few sprays with white cotton.

All her friends, that is, the few who are in her secret, are enthusiastic over her plan and are following suit with these dainty 50-cent gifts. Why don't you try it?

FROM THE SCRAP BAG

SOME LAST-MINUTE GIFTS WHICH WON'T TAKE MORE THAN AN HOUR TO MAKE AND PROBABLY WILL REQUIRE NO SHOPPING; FOR MATERIALS WILL BE SHOWN ON THIS PAGE NEXT WEEK. IF THERE IS ANY ONE YOU HAVE FORGOTTEN TO PUT ON YOUR GIFT LIST A WEEK FROM TODAY, IT WILL NOT BE SUCH A CATASTROPHE WITH THIS PAGE BEFORE YOU.

New Beads

THE prettiest kind of beads for stringing into chains for decorating bags and baskets and for any of the uses to which large beads are being put nowadays, can be made from vegetables. Think of it! Peas and beans of all kinds can be dried and dyed into the loveliest shaped and colored beads. Holes should be made in them with a coarse needle or hatpin before drying, or they can be burnt in afterward with a heated pin. They are fascinating because of their irregularity.

Dainties You Can Make in An Evening

THE time is drawing near for Santa to slip down chimneys with his gifts for inviting stockings. Strange, isn't it, how Christmas suddenly looms upon you when you think it is weeks away? No matter how hard you try, there are always some friends in your list who must be thought of in the last week. It is for just such a contingency that these gifts have been designed; they can be made in one evening's work, which should be enough to recommend them, even tho they were not so attractive in themselves.

The bedroom slippers with the wool pom pom go very quickly. They are made after these directions:

MATERIAL—One large skein four-fold Germantown, one pair satin soles, one crochet hook No. 4 (bone).

STITCH—Single crochet, taking front of stitch and back of stitch alternately.

Chain 22. Work 22 S. C. into each of these. Chain—* First stitch taking front of loop, next stitch taking back of loop. * Repeat thruout until slipper is long enough to reach round the sole you wish to make it on. Join at side front. Finish top with a tight shell in end of each ridge—1 S. C., * 4 D. C. into next stitch, 1 S. C. into next stitch. * Repeat around turn down, and sew fast.

Sew on sole with point directly over toe, middle front. Finish with a pom pom of wool.

Another pair of boudoir slippers of wool look more complicated, but are very simple to make. They are done with two colors after the following directions:

MATERIALS—Two skeins four-fold Germantown blue, one skein four-fold Germantown grey, 1 pair soles, one crochet hook No. 4, 12 inch.

STITCH—Afghan and single crochet, taking back of stitch to form rib.

Chain 24. First row—Pull up a loop in each stitch of chain. Second row—Chain 1, * yarn over, pull thru 2 loops at a time; * repeat in width of slipper. Repeat first and second rows until perfectly square; then slip stitch across edge, fasten blue yarn, and work in S. C., taking the back of loop always, to form ridge. Make about 45 ridges, or until slipper measures around sole. Join at side front. Before joining, with grey yarn pull up a loop in each of every row of ridge, making 2 stitches to each ridge. Repeat in afghan stitch for 5 ridges, or 10 rows. Finish edge of collar with blue—* 3 S. C. in first 3 afghan stitches, a picot of 4 chain, 3 S. C. in next 3 stitches; * repeat around edge. Turn down, and sew lightly to top. Join at toe. Sew to sole with point of square in middle of toe of sole.

Finish with a simple cross-stitch design, or just a bow of ribbon.

A remnant of striped ribbon makes a pretty bag if joined to a cheap gate-top clasp, to be bought in any art needlework department. This bag in the photo is made of three widths of ribbon, pointed at the bottom and finished off with ball and tassel of silk to match. The beauty of the bag lies in the way the seams are outlined with tiny crystal beads, the same beads being used to cover the ball of the tassel.

Another bag of ribbon holds all the implements for running lingerie ribbon. The lid is a small plaque of sweet grass, with a tiny pincushion underneath. The bag is a length of Dresden ribbon, five inches wide. It will take 1½ yards of this ribbon. It is shirred over an embroidery hoop (4½ inches in diameter) at the top and to a covered cardboard disk at the bottom. A bolt of lingerie ribbon is encased between two more disks of cardboard covered with the ribbon, and this is joined to the bottom of the bag, with leaves of flannel between it and the bottom for needles. Ribbons tie the case and the flannel close to the bag. A bodkin, scissors, thimble and emery can be added, all strung on ribbons on the inside of the bag.

Scraps of silk can make the prettiest of collars if a tiny picoted edge is added with the crochet hook. The sectional collar shown has been made just that way, the edge being done with silk of 4 single crochets over edge, 4 chains, 4 more singles, etc.

There is always a baby doll in the family who needs a new woolly set. Here is the cunningest little set, which won't take any time to make after the following directions:

MATERIALS—One skein each of blue and white Saxony two-fold, one bone hook No. 2, three-quarters yard ribbon.

FOR CAP—Chain 3; join to form ring. First row—Work 16 D. C. over this ring, * join, chain 2. * Repeat for ending of every row. Second row—Make 2 D. C. in every stitch of first or row below. Third row—Make 2 D. C. in every second stitch of row below. Fourth row—Make 2 D. C. in every third stitch of last row. Fifth row—Leave 12 D. C. for back of cap; make 1 D. C. in each stitch of row below. Sixth, seventh and eighth rows—Same as above. Finish with 1 row in S. C. in white all around edge of cap. With inside of cap toward you, fasten blue Saxony at corner, and work 4 rows in S. C. all round cap. Roll back this blue band all round cap, and finish with rosettes of ribbon.

FOR MITTENS—Make a chain of 22 S. C.; work round and round for 12 rows in S. C., decreasing irregularly in the last 4 rows to 12 stitches. Turn, and sew up the opening over and over, folding evenly so there are 6 stitches on each side. With blue wool, finish top with 1 row of S. C. into every stitch, 1 row D. C. into every other stitch, 1 row 3 D. C. 1 S. C. around top.

FOR BOOTEES—Make chain of 7 stitches. Work 6 S. C. on this chain. Work 7 rows of 6 S. C. each. Chain 12; join to vamp already made, working round and round. Work 4 rows in plain S. The policy, avowedly prearranged at Potsdam by the General was based upon the intention to terrify all resistance by one us onslaught of ruthless brutality. But it had exactly the y effect. It has but consolidated the rest of the world to p the crimes of Germany against civilization, against common y, against human goodness and justice.

No wonder the formal demand of the Belgian Episcopate for y was refused after the infamous Dr. Moll's "explanation" atrocities in Belgium. They knew they had no answer.

And it has been the same on the sea as on land. Just as they d the wounded in a trench and bombed them after Loos, the open sea they have shelled helpless passengers without g, have laughed at drowning men and women, fired on d sailors on stranded submarines, shot their own men whom h sailors tried to save—a bestial ferocity in the conduct of which can never be forgotten. And the astounding "justi- n" offered in each case, left civilization shuddering at the exposition of an ingrained turpitude of character unbe- e.

And not for nothing are the seamen of the world against y. Far from terrorizing the sea-going men from the seas, efforts have but recoiled on Germany's own head. She ound such a crusade against her that every man who can yacht, steer a launch, or beat up a trawler, is hot upon the of every German keel with concentrated fury. This has been an fight in which the combatants can shake hands after the t and respect each other for brave, fair-dealing men. Ger- y has turned herself into a hunted criminal, rather than a gal- foe.

Her odious system of universal espionage both before the and since, by which friendship has been prostituted to such ends, her use of false uniforms, her misuse of the white flag the Red Cross, are but a few of the disgusting features of r. Things have come to such a pass that for decades it will not be possible to admit Germans to the hospitality of foreigners. Never again in this generation will Prince Henry of Prussia or any other German notable be accorded the courtesy of organizing "an automobile tour" through a friendly country for the purpose of spying out the best methods of betraying them later on.

The murky creed of kultur and superman bred by the brutality of the Prussian Junker and fostered on the intoxication of the war of 1870, has resulted in the rejection of what the rest of the world means by honor. It has but bred a colossal vulgarity. Perhaps there is some good reason for the fact that there is no equivalent of the word "gentleman" in the German language.

DAMNING EVIDENCE IN HUN DIARIES.

The keeping of diaries was recommended by the German military authority, so that the diaries found on the dead and wounded Germans and taken from the prisoners, form some of the most damning evidence against the German nation. Take this extract from the dairy of Private Hassemer, Eighth Army Corps, describing the sack of Somme Py on the Marne.

"September 3.—A horrible bath of blood. The whole village burnt, the French thrown into the burning houses, civilians with the rest."

Or this one from the diary of Private Karl Scheufele of the Third Bavarian Regiment of Landwehr Infantry, relating to Saint-Maurice:

"In the night of August 18-19 the village of Saint-Maurice was punished for having fired on German soldiers. It was burnt to the ground by German troops (the Twelfth and Seventh Landwehr.) The village was surrounded, men posted a yard apart, so that no one could get out. Then the Uhlans set fire to it, house by house. Neither man, woman nor child could escape, only the live stock was carried off, as that could be used. Any one who rushed out was shot down. All the inhabitants in the village were burnt with the houses."

Read Los Angeles for Saint-Maurice. Would our men, do you think, be tempted in the horror of invasion, to fire upon the enemy? And for their impulsive courage, can you picture us cold-bloodedly hemmed in by enemy soldiers, ready to shoot us if we tried to run out, and calmly, coldly, by official orders, burned alive in our homes? No, of course, we cannot picture it. The thing is too utterly incredible. Yet there is corroborative evidence of this dreadful item from a soldier's dairy in scores of other diaries, in the German official orders, in the hands of the Bryce Commission today, ready to be inspected by all who care to see.

Or here is another extract from Private Fischer's diary, of the Eighth Bavarian Infantry, Thirty-third Reserve Division:

"A shell burst near the Eleventh Company and wounded seven men. At 5 o'clock we were ordered to shoot all the male inhabitants of Nomeny, because the population had foolishly attempted to stay the German advance. We broke into the houses and executed every one according to martial law. The houses, which had not been already destroyed, were set on fire by us, so that the town was reduced to ashes. It is a terrible sight when helpless women and children, utterly destitute, are herded together and driven into France."

Here is another, from the note-book of Noncommissioned Officer Reinhold Koehm, of the Second Battalion of Engineers, Third Army Corps, recording the sack of Vise:

WHOLE TOWN RUTHLESSLY DESTROYED.

"During the night of August 15-16 Engineer G. gave the alarm in the town of Vise. Every one was shot or taken prisoner and the houses burnt. The prisoners were made to march in front of the troops."

Here are some of the crimes against women and children in those first dreadful days of Belgium—Belgium, which Germany amongst the rest of the nations, had sworn to hold inviolate. The evidence in this department is recorded by reference number for publication, because to openly record the names of the witnesses would bring about fearful reprisals for their relatives still in that sad land under German occupation. But any one who will is at liberty to inspect the sworn and documentary evidence, with names duly recorded, in the hands of one or the other of the commissions of investigation.

Here is the evidence of a Belgian patrol, corroborated by all of them:

"On September 10 we came to the village of Haecht and our patrol was sent out. We passed a river and came to a farmhouse. On the door of the farm we saw a child, 2 or 3 years old, nailed to the door by its hands and feet. It was clothed and quite dead. There was no wound of any sort on the body; the face was horribly drawn with pain. In the garden of the same house, we saw the body of another child, a little girl of 5 or 6 years old. She had been shot in the forehead."

A Belgian plasterer gives this, duly corroborated evidence:

"On the 23rd of August I, with two friends was taken prisoner by a German patrol, an officer and six men, about three hours out of Malines. We were marched off to a wood, where there was a house. The officer knocked at the door, and the peasant did not come at once. The officer ordered the men to break down the door, which they did. The peasant came and asked what they were doing. The officer said he had not come quickly enough and that they "had trained up plenty of others." His hands were tied behind his back and he was shot at once. The wife came out with a little suckling child. She put the child down and sprang at the Germans like a lioness. She clawed their faces. A tremendous blow from a rifle struck her dead. Another German took out his bayonet, fixed it, and thrust it through the child. He then put his rifle across his shoulder with the child on it. Its little arms stretched out once or twice. The officer ordered the house to be set on fire and this was done. The man and wife and child were thrown in the fire. There were about forty peasant prisoners there and the officer said: 'I am doing this as a lesson and an example to you. When a German tells you to do something next time you will move more quickly.' The regiment they belonged to was the Hussars, with cross bones and death's head on the cap."

Here is another instance (reference No. D-4.)

BABY BUTCHERY.

"Some German soldiers were coming down the street, they were drunk, singing, making a lot of noise and dancing about. They were in gray uniforms. I saw a small child come out of a house, about 2 years old. The child ran into the middle of the street in the way of the soldiers. The soldiers were walking in twos. The first two passed the child, but one of the second two stepped aside and drove his bayonet with both hands into the child's stomach, lifting the child into the air on his bayonet, and carrying it away on his bayonet, still singing. . . . The child screamed when the soldier stuck it with his bayonet, but not after."

This killing of babies was no isolated incident. There are pitiful hundreds upon hundreds of witnesses to such things. It was all part of the policy of diabolical ruthlessness, designed to terrify resistance out of a nation, and even more subtly designed to eradicate that nation from the face of the earth. A nation, moreover, which had committed no other offense than to be the shortest route to France.

Just as the wholesale violation of Belgian maidens by German soldiers was an equally well-calculated scheme to breed a new race of German children to populate the annexed country.

The evidence is appalling, reeking with unimaginable horrors. To reprint it would take several entire issues of this paper. Women and children with their heads entirely severed, often absolutely naked, are frequent sights mentioned in these appalling documents. Women and children sent up into lofts, the ladder removed and the house set on fire, was so frequent that it must have been part of the established military orders.

ARCH-CHAMPIONS OF KULTUR.

In the face of these things the cynical destruction of great historical monuments, libraries, galleries of art treasures, ancient archives, cathedrals, pales in horror. Yet the evidence of wanton demolition by the arch-champions of kultur at such historic places as Rheims and Louvain is terrible evidence of petty malice and vicious destructiveness. None of them had any sort of military value or significance.

The use of civilians as screens for the German troops was another crime that occurred too frequently to leave any doubt that it was a recognized military "necessity" with the Germans. There is the evidence of whole regiments of British, Belgian and French troops for this unmentionable offense—an offense, be it noted, which traded upon the accepted gallantry and decency of their enemies, the Allies, whom they confidently trusted not to shoot unarmed men, women and children.

Take this piece of sworn evidence of Belgian soldiers at Willebroeck (Reference No. G-26:)

" . . . The Germans seemed to have started from a wood on the right. We saw at a distance of 200 yards that there were women and children in front of the first line, and some old men in civilian dress. They were walking upright, each in front of a German soldier. . . . During the advance we saw that a woman refused to go forward. She turned her back to us, and I saw a German creeping behind her give her two thrusts with the bayonet, up towards the breast. At the second thrust she fell, we could hear her cries. We did not fire upon the women or children, but kept our fire directed upon soldiers not covered by them. One of the children, about 5 years of age, ran to the woman when she fell, and the soldier behind him shot him, placing the muzzle of his rifle upon the child's temple, and half the head was blown away before our eyes. . . ."

GERMAN AVOWED RUTHLESSNESS.

And that is a sample of thousands of corroborated pieces of evidence compiled by the various commissions of the Allies. It was not one isolated fevered brain that saw these things, it was not one isloated war-mad German soldier that perpetrated these crimes—but they were the expression of German military efficiency, German avowed ruthlessness, in obedience to official commands.

Here is a letter written by Lieut. A. Eberlein, Bavarian officer, published on the 7th of October in the Vorabendblatt of the Munchener Neueste Nachrichten.

" . . . We arrested three other civilians and then I had a brilliant idea. We gave them chairs and ordered them to sit in the middle of the street. On their part, pitiful entreaties; on ours a few blows from the butt end of a rifle. Little by little one becomes terribly callous at this business. At last they were all seated. I do not know what anguished prayers they may have said, but I noticed that their hands were convulsively clasped the whole time. I pitied them, but the method was immediately effective. The flank fire quickly diminished, so that we were able to occupy the principal street. Every living being who showed himself was immediately shot . . . and I was able to report that Saint Die had been cleared of the enemy. Later I learned that the regiment of reserves, which entered Saint Die further to the north, tried the same experiment. The four civilians they made sit in the street were killed by French bullets. I myself saw them lying in the middle of the street."

[Signed] A. EMERLEIN, First Lieutenant.

As for the mutilation and killing of the wounded, there is not only the testimony of French, Belgian and British soldiers, but far more damning evidence from the Germans themselves.

Those fatally illuminating diaries teem with records of instructions. Gen. Stenger of the Fifty-eighth Brigade (One Hundred Twelfth and One Hundred Forty-second regiments of German infantry) gave explicit orders in two forms of which these are exact translations:

"From and after today no more prisoners are to be taken, all prisoners, whether wounded or not, are to be killed."

And again.

"From and after today no more prisoners are to be taken. All prisoners are to be massacred. The wounded, whether with or without arms, are to be killed off. Even when prisoners are in regularly constituted large units they are to be killed. No living enemy must be left behind us."

How is that for a nation which hoped to spread its lofty kultur over the world? How does that appeal to our American democracy, and our great Red Cross association that, in order to calm the pacifists, is insisting that its ministrations are for all countries, friend and enemy alike?

"A DAY OF HONOR."

And Germany actually takes a pride in such crimes. On October 18th, Lieut. Von Niem of the One Hundred and Fifty-fourth regiment countersigned a letter written by Corp. Klemt for publication in the Jauer'sche Tageblatt, entitled "A Day of Honor for Our Regiment, September 24, 1914" in the course of which we come to a paragraph ". . . dead and wounded Frenchmen lay in masses around. The wounded were done to death with stabs or blows. . . . No quarter was given." There is more than a column of such honorable story recorded with voluptuous gusto.

The stories of the Lusitania, the Ancona and the many other sea crimes are better known, but perhaps the treatment of prisoners in Germany, one of the darkest and most horrible pages of the history of the war, are not so well understood. The stories of returned prisoners are utterly revolting, heartbreaking, appalling. And the American investigation of the conditions of the prison camps left no shadow of doubt. With their overcoats taken away from them, with insufficient and mouldy food, with disease rampant as in the terrible outbreak of typhus at Schneidemuhle when the malign disease raged amongst them, when ventilation was almost nil, when they had no clothes but coarse tunics, when the temperature was at 40 deg. and ice cold water was poured over the delirious men, when all fed out of a common pot, when vermin added their horrors to the scene, and when the German authorities remained deaf to all requests, notwithstanding they were dying like flies, ghastly nauseating horrors reached the epitome of human misery in efficient kultured Germany. Four thousand deaths are recorded under the most loathsome conditions. And in England the German prisoners have libraries, warm clothing, three good meals a day, bathrooms, an exclusive medical corps, recreation rooms, gramaphones—England against whom Germany sang her trumpery, childish Hymn of Hate.

That Hymn of Hate. Can you imagine any self-respecting nation officially distributing such a thing broadcast? Can you imagine the United States indulging itself in a Hymn of Hate—in anything but humorous vein? It probably brought down more ridicule on Teutonic heads than anything else could have achieved. The Allied armies parodied it with consummate joy—the kultur that is consumed with hate—how funny it is!

And the deportations. Which of us has not read that dreadful story of women and girls torn from their homes and sent back to Germany under the protection of avowed ruthlessness, with a sickening sense of horror. Suppose it had happened to our wives and to our Los Angeles club women. An official German order was issued in 1915 that "all inhabitants of a house, with the exception of children under 14 and their mothers, and old men, must be ready to be transported within an hour and a half." That they must gather in front of their domiciles when an officer would decide who should go and who remain? That the doors of houses must remain open. That a minimum of twenty-seven pounds of baggage would be permitted. And that "It is absolutely essential in your own interests that you take utensils for eating and drinking, as well as a blanket, good shoes and linen."

And this heroic proclamation was carried out in Holy Week, 1916—a week of shame, not only for Germany, but for all civilization. And when a meeting of protest was called by the wretched inhabitants, the Sixty-fourth Infantry marched into the town at 4 a.m., installed machine guns, and with fixed bayonets battered in the doors of houses. The slaves were duly selected by an officer to be ready to depart in ten minutes.

Which of us can picture the terror of that day?

Yes, the Kaiser was right. The world has learned what it means to provoke Germany, to resist her ruthless evil will.

And he hoped that, with God's help, they would so wield the sword that they would be able to sheathe it with honor. Dear God, how You failed them!

Saw Our Soldiers in London.

Mrs. Clarke Salmon, who is now in Washington, has received an interesting letter from her brother, Charles P. Elliott, who for some years was engaged in business in London. Mr. Elliott, who saw the deference shown the American troops in London, writes as follows of the march of the railway engineers, numbering 4000:

The American regiments designated as railway engineers made a fine showing in their march through London. They came up from near Aldershot, via Waterloo Station, and marched from Horse Guards via Whitehall, Trafalgar Square, Cockspur, Pall Mall, St. James, Piccadilly, Constitution Hill, passed Buckingham Palace into the Mall, where they had luncheon, and back to Waterloo Station, where they entrained. They were a fine body of men. Only about a dozen wore mustaches in the entire group. There were five regiments—about 4000 men.

When you consider it was the first time in history that American troops with American flags had ever marched through London, you will be interested to know how they were received. I am told by those who should know that never in the history of London had a greater crowd lined the entire route of march than was seen in that parade. The sentiment and generous expression of London citizens was pleasing in the extreme. There was, of course, not a foot of the route that was not populated by soldiers and sailors of various nations on leave. The generous admiration and sympathy from these fellows was fine. Every time the silk "Stars and Stripes" passed heads were uncovered by everyone.

I witnessed the parade from Pall Mall, Haymarket and lower Regent street across from Carleton Hotel. They were thirty minutes passing my point of view in fours and fives. Most of the troops were very serious. Every one of them was punctilious in marching. Occasionally a pleasant grin on some trooper's face indicated their gratification. It was especially noticeable among the observers along the route that handkerchiefs were not entirely needed for cheering. There have been some excellent moving pictures shown in London of the parade, especially the review by His Majesty and Lloyd George.

I can see what has happened during my past two years' absence. I will be pleased on my return to America to devote several months to personal recitation of England's preparedness. I would like to impress on the American public what I saw and know of the universal determination and sacrifice that England has given in this war. If America can show me one-third of the spirit of sacrifice and determination that England has shown, the help and support morally and physically will produce a satisfactory record of American endeavor.

I greatly hope I may be able to "do my bit" for England. I owe England a big debt. The patience and courtesy that have been given me during a period of her national agony is a debt that I never can discharge.—[Kansas City Times.

Arabs Pillage Both Armies.

The worst enemy of both Turks and British (in the advance on Bagdad) was the Arab. The Arabs plundered both sides indiscriminately, and whenever a battle was fought the Arabs joined the winning side. At one time a suggestion was made that the Turks and British call off the war for a while and form a composite Anglo-Turk army to strafe the Arabs.

Arabs are inveterate thieves, and they will risk anything to steal under difficulties. In fact, they prefer to steal where it is difficult rather than easy. Two Arabs entered the tent next to mine at Omara, and while one of them held a knife over the sergeant who occupied it, the other took everything he could lay his hands on. And they escaped, although that was in the middle of the camp.

The Australian wireless detachment at Omara lost thirty-one rifles one night when their sentry went to sleep. Another time an Indian sentry challenged an Arab, who did not reply. The sentry shot at him and the Arab fell down. The sentry was curious and went up to investigate. As he approached, the Arab jumped up, seized his rifle, and ran away. Another time Arabs stole ten camels out of a camp that had blockhouses every 500 yards and sentries every 250 yards. By order, Arabs are shot on sight from the advanced base, north.—[Arthur T. "TELESCOPING HILL AND BROADWAY"

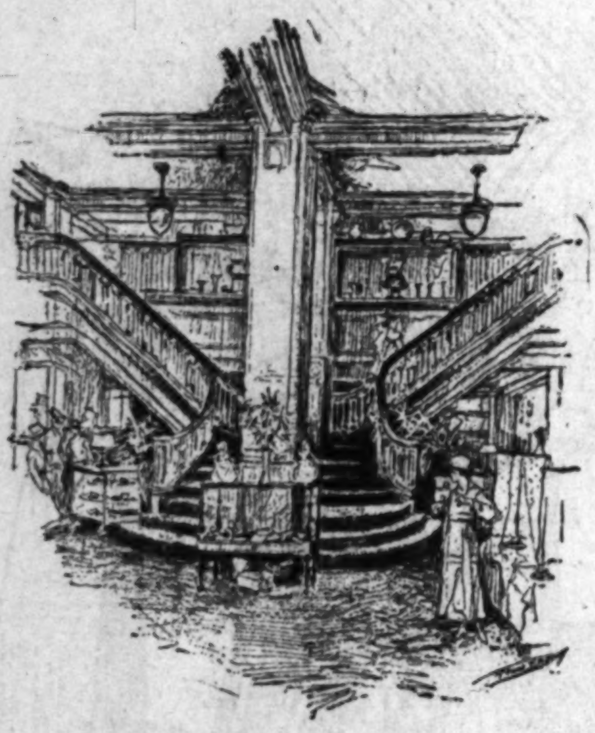
(From the Los Angeles Graphic, December 10, 1917)



Grand Stairway—Bullock's Hill Street Store.

BULLOCK'S has telescoped Hill and Broadway!

To telescope is to bring an object nearer; it is to push together; it is—again—to make a point more brilliant, by focussing thereon—all of these have been done by Bullock's.

First, the space between Hill and Broadway has been bridged and bridged again, practically rendered nil. Every woman knows that it is far farther to walk a block along a sidewalk than to traverse it inside an attractive store, with articles of interest to divert the thought from the mere act of locomotion. To enter Bullock's Broadway front and pass along, either on the level, or from the second floor, out through those novel bridges and to find oneself suddenly on Hill street, is like annihilating space. It is thus—by easy stages—by means unnoticeable—that Hill has been brought near to Broadway; in fact these streets have been deftly telescoped—pushed one into another.

At the Hill street end of the telescope, has occurred the brilliant coup that fulfills the other definition of the term "telescope;" to make a point more brilliant. Bullock's Hill street store is in truth a Gift Shop. It scintillates with gifts. Counter after counter, each aglow with gifts which are the product of some original, happy thought make this shop "a point more brilliant"—a place which to the searching eye of Christmas gift intention is one of glad enlightenment.

The store has been transformed from its first effect of rather chilly greeting, and one is met even at the sidewalk with a joyous welcome. The Hill street windows are singularly open-hearted, affording to the eye an unimpeded vision of the tempting treasures inside the store. The cases, in which are displayed the wondrous stock of gift-solving articles, are novel in construction and each presents an array of things so very different from usual as to prove inspiring to the most dull imagination. A veritable promptuary to the Christmas gift list this place is, in fact.

With soft, thick carpets beneath the feet one is led along, the gaze magnetized, from cabinet to cabinet of alluring, gifty things, until one is face to face with the grand stairway which has been installed at the rear of the spacious first floor salon.

This stairway leads gently to the broad mezzanine where are housed the cut glass treasures and the garnered wealth of wares from potteries and china kilns. A trysting place for rare objects of art and craftmanship, this mezzanine is unique. The Hill street mezzanine front is given over to those who learn and work with needles. A busy, earnest band may be found there daily fabricating things with needles. Broad daylight floods the work-tables—an advantage much appreciated by needle women.

Thus, should you enter Bullock's from Hill street, you will find yourself from the very first in a whirl of delightful attractions, corresponding with a high class foreign fair, where the craftsmen contribute from their stocks of wares original and beautiful. And also you will find every needed means for the consummation of the hand-making of home gifts. Such an array of materials for making hand-bags, such multitudes of handles of every sort, from the plainest metallic ones to be wound with yarn or fabric, to those set with semi-precious stones! Silver, gold and bronze bag-frames look with scorn upon their less fortunate neighbors, which in their turn believe themselves enlisted in a better cause, since they draw out originality in those whom they are intended to supply.

Looked at thus, the novel telescope does more than to bring Hill street to Broadway. It serves to bring nearer the solution of the Christmas problem for those who visit in the Bullock gift shop.

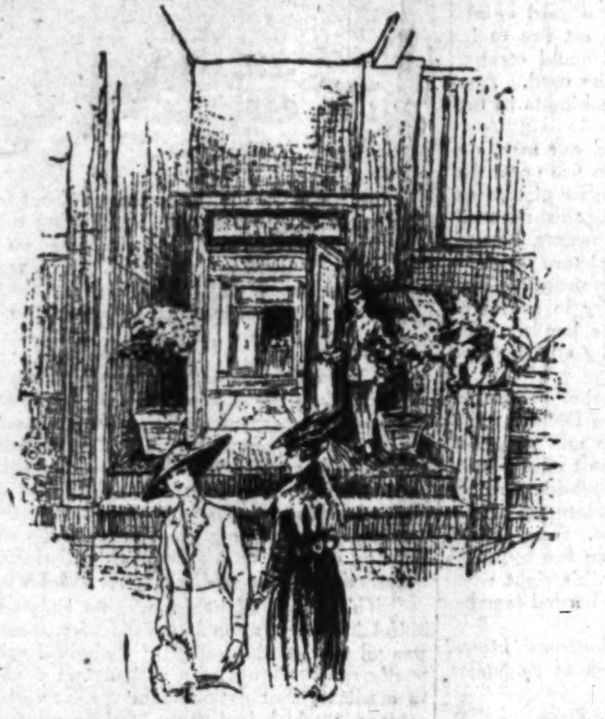
Another feature of the new Hill street store is that it serves to bring to completion that perfection of service which is a dream of Bullock's.

All the working space formerly utilized in the Broadway building for office and package rooms, for stock and welfare quarters for the host of employees, has now been liberated to the use of the Broadway building since the Hill street structure—all except the first floor and the mezzanine—are given over to those purposes. This allows of the extension, in the original store, of those departments which have long needed to stretch out to fulfill their obligations—to enable them to keep up with the fast growing increase in patronage.

There are two ways of approach to the new annex from the Broadway side. One is to ascend by elevator to the second floor, where you may pause awhile at the newly removed Book Nook to fill out your list of Christmas-gifting books ere you betake yourself across the bridge to the mezzanine on Hill street. The Gift Spirit greets you on the bridge which is set along either side with practical articles for Christmas giving.

If you so wish, you may pass through the Court on the ground floor, entering the Hill street annex thus.

However you approach, you will agree that Bullock's has telescoped Hill street and Broadway—regard whichever way you will the definition of "telescope."



This way out across the bridge between Bullock's Broadway store and the new annex on Hill Street.

Pulling a few stiff hairs from the face may start a serious growth. Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatories and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. I have had 19 years' experience and devote all my time to this work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. DO IT NOW!

CONSULT CLARKE,

ORDAINED PHENOMENAL PSYCHIC

AND SPIRITUAL HEALER.

50c—LOW FEE THIS WEEK—50c

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST!

IF YOU WISH ADVICE OR HELP, WHY NOT CONSULT ONE WHO IS WELL-KNOWN, ONE WHO IS HERE PERMANENTLY, ONE WHO IS COMPETENT TO READ YOUR LIFE AND ADVISE YOU, ONE WHO HAS WITHSTOOD THE TEST OF TIME?

NO LONG DELAYS AND WAITING.

Prof. Clarke helps you to gain what you wish at once. Almost immediately removes the cause of any bad luck, sickness, failure, or trouble of any kind. He has testimonials on file at his office from clients for whom he has secured settlement of claims in their favor aggregating thousands of dollars within three weeks after taking their case. And this after they had waited years in vain for settlement in the courts. He "makes good" in his work because two-thirds of his clients are sent to him by others whom he has helped.

NO FEES IN ADVANCE.

His methods are superior to all others. He asks no fees in advance and positively refuses to accept one cent of your money unless you are perfectly satisfied with the service rendered. Have you claims of long standing which you wish settled? Let this remarkable psychic concentrate upon your desires and get for you the money and other things that you wish so you may enjoy them now.

LATENT POWERS UNFOLDED.

For those who wish the highest attainment of knowledge and spiritual power he issues a course of study consisting of five hundred typewritten pages, and this study is supplemented by special lessons for morning and evening concentration, and by the privilege of reading all the latest books on NEW THOUGHT, METAPHYSICS, PSYCHOLOGY, ETC., from his large

CIRCULATING LIBRARY AND FREE READING ROOM.

Those who wish to take up character reading as a pastime or profession will find all the latest books on clairvoyance, mediumship, second-sight, astrology, solar biology, graphology, palmistry, faciology, card reading, the science of names and numbers, etc., at the circulating library for loan or sale.

FREE LECTURE SOON AT STUDIO-CHAPEL.

Prof. Clarke will soon resume his regular Sunday and Wednesday night free lectures on Healing, Self Help and Psychic Unfoldment at his large Studio-Chapel directly connected with his Office and Residence at 628 South Alvarado street. Other prominent speakers will also lecture at evening meetings.

TELLS NAMES IN FULL.

Wonderful, bewildering is the work of this marvelous psychic. If the mere telling of your name, or the names of friends, rivals, enemies, and others, will satisfy you, Prof. Clarke will do so. What is more important to serious people is to know what to do or what not to do, to gain success in what you wish—to make your life what you will.

MOST FAMOUS PSYCHIC.

The fame of this peerless psychic has spread to every nook, cranny and corner of this city and surrounding country. His clients come even from distant States to consult him. Every day a stream of people pass in and out of his home at Alvarado street, some go away smiling, others in grief, because he tells all the truth whether it be good or bad.

BEST PEOPLE COME.

Many of the best people have come—many who have never consulted a psychic or witnessed psychic phenomena before. WHY? Because he gets phenomenal messages for all; because he intelligently unravels your troubles. HE SEES ALL AND TELLS ALL WITHOUT ASKING YOU A SOLITARY QUESTION. He gives truthful information, relief, success and satisfaction; gives knowledge that is POWER.

A NATURAL-BORN PSYCHIC.

To some it is given to penetrate the profound secret of destiny; to look years ahead into the future and accurately foretell that which is to happen in the lives of others, preparing them for good fortune and enabling them to avoid the dangers and pitfalls before them. There may be a better position—better salary or business for you. Perhaps you are waiting for something you may never realize.

A MEDIUM SINCE BIRTH.

For many generations his ancestors have been noted psychics and mediums, having inherited this precious gift, through long years of work and study he has developed his spiritual self that things which are obscure and hidden to the partly developed psychic and medium are as clear to him as an open book. He offers his service to those who are in doubt or trouble, worried or dissatisfied, ill in mind or body, who are failing to realize what they desire.

ALL CONSULTATIONS CONFIDENTIAL.

His reception rooms are so arranged that you meet no other visitors. Lady speaking English, French, Italian, Spanish, German and other languages in constant attendance during Office Hours, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Call today—tomorrow may be too late!

WHAT KEAN TELLS FOR
$1.00. $1.00. $1.00.

Kean tells full names, how long you will live, your occupation and what condition your business is in, and how to improve it; Kean tells you all about your wife, husband, sweetheart or lover and how to win the love of anyone you desire; Kean tells you of any move, journey, business transaction, position or change of any kind which may be before you and how to act to obtain the best results; Kean tells you exactly what your acquaintances think of you, who to trust and who to shun; Kean tells you whom and when you will marry, if at all, and gives their name, occupation and disposition; in short, Kean tells you everything, past, present and future you called to find out, and that, too, without asking you a question or you speaking a word. If worried consult California's premier Psychic-Palmist (licensed,) today—tomorrow may be too late.

IF YOU DON'T FIND OUT WHY YOU ARE A FAILURE, YOU NEVER WILL SUCCEED.

PSYCHIC-PALMISTRY

is the Master Key which will unlock the Secret Chamber of success and happiness and throw wide open the doors that seem to bar you.

PSYCHIC-PALMISTRY

is the science of most value to those who have a true desire to relieve themselves of the mistakes, bad judgment and intolerable conditions which daily surround them.

Advertising with Mr. F. H. Kean is an explanation and not an apology. Mr. Kean is a licensed practitioner, permanently located in Los Angeles, and absolutely reliable.

Do you realize the marvels of Psychic Power and what it means to you? If you had told your Grandfather fifty years ago that with an X-Ray the human skeleton could be seen in a living body he would have considered you mildly crazy. If you had told him that men would ever talk through the air, their winged words flying across the trackless sea, he would have thought you a raving lunatic. Yet today we can see through walls and our messages beat back and forth in the air to the far corners of the earth. And we are just beginning to understand the tremendous influence of Psychic, Magnetic and Clairvoyant force—or mind power—with its influences for good or evil.

Go let Mr. Kean analyze you, let him size you up psychologically, and tell you what you are adapted for—how to make friends, money and success. Have you failed to realize your desire in life? Are you a round peg in a square hole? Are you dissatisfied with yourself? and your position in life? Are you making a financial success? Why not? Have you found your right place in life? Mr. Kean has analyzed many leading men and women of the nation, and thousands in California alone—why not you?

PERSONAL FACTS.

Seventy-five per cent. of the people are in wrong occupations—misfits.

Sixty per cent. of men and women fail in business from lack of adaptation to that business, or because wrongly suited in partnership.

Fifty per cent. or more are mismated in marriage—result, divorce.

Ninety per cent. of men and women don't understand themselves. They are like a ship without a rudder, compass or chart—in danger of wrecking—failure. How about you?

Ninety per cent. of the people who consult Mr. Kean for personal psycho-analysis, vocational guidance, mental, social and personal readjustment, develop stronger and more attractive personalities, become more efficient, successful, prosperous and happy. The other 10 per cent. don't try.

How about you, reader? Ask yourself if you don't think you should consult Mr. Kean—the man who knows his business—who knows you.

MR. KEAN will offer suggestions and give help to all who are in trouble and suspense concerning their personal affairs in business, love, marriage and domestic life. Scientific palmistry will reveal to you your weak points, strong characteristics, future possibilities, what you are best fitted for in life, etc.

DO YOU KNOW

that 98 per cent. of the successful men and women of today in the affairs of life, such as business, love, marriage, etc., are guided psychically either through the development of their own intuitive force or through the aid of a Professional Psychic? The day of Psychic-phenomena, as a fad, fiction and experiment has passed. The reliable psychic-palmist of today is consulted on the material affairs and obstacles of life with the same degree of feeling and confidence that you would consult your lawyer, doctor, banker or broker. Psychology as a science today is to the human being what the Government Weather Bureau is to the community, and KEAN is to Psychology what Edison is to electricity. Forget what you are or were, and begin to plan what you may become. This is your hour, make the best of it. Delay is your worst enemy. When you lose your time it is gone forever. You can't regain it. Knowledge is power. Knowledge opens the door that ignorance would forever close. Life is not half so bad as some people would make you believe, so do not lose hope because the day seems dark and the affairs of life are mixed. No matter how complicated your condition may be, KEAN can and will aid you. Know the truth. Know in time what to do and how to do it. KEAN points the way. KEAN'S best indorsement is an interview with KEAN. KEAN'S fees for special work are within the reach of all. KEAN can only be consulted at his residence, 2405 S. GRAND AVE. L. A. Hours, 10 to 6 daily; Sundays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

DO IT NOW!
CONSULT CLARKE,
ORDAINED PHENOMENAL PSYCHIC
AND SPIRITUAL HEALER.
50c—LOW FEE THIS WEEK—50c
ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST!

IF YOU WISH ADVICE OR HELP, WHY NOT CONSULT ONE WHO IS WELL-KNOWN, ONE WHO IS HERE PERMANENTLY, ONE WHO IS COMPETENT TO READ YOUR LIFE AND ADVISE YOU, ONE WHO HAS WITHSTOOD THE TEST OF TIME?

NO LONG DELAYS AND WAITING.

Prof. Clarke helps you to gain what you wish at once. Almost immediately removes the cause of any bad luck, sickness, failure, or trouble of any kind. He has testimonials on file at his office from clients for whom he has secured settlement of claims in their favor aggregating thousands of dollars within three weeks after taking their case. And this after they had waited years in vain for settlement in the courts. He "makes good" in his work because two-thirds of his clients are sent to him by others whom he has helped.

NO FEES IN ADVANCE.

His methods are superior to all others. He asks no fees in advance and positively refuses to accept one cent of your money unless you are perfectly satisfied with the service rendered. Have you claims of long standing which you wish settled? Let this remarkable psychic concentrate upon your desires and get for you the money and other things that you wish so you may enjoy them now.

LATENT POWERS UNFOLDED.

For those who wish the highest attainment of knowledge and spiritual power he issues a course of study consisting of five hundred typewritten pages, and this study is supplemented by special lessons for morning and evening concentration, and by the privilege of reading all the latest books on NEW THOUGHT, METAPHYSICS, PSYCHOLOGY, ETC., from his large CIRCULATING LIBRARY AND FREE READING ROOM.

Those who wish to take up character reading as a pastime or profession will find all the latest books on clairvoyance, mediumship, second-sight, astrology, solar biology, graphology, palmistry, faciology, card reading, the science of names and numbers, etc., at the circulating library for loan or sale.

FREE LECTURE SOON AT STUDIO-CHAPEL.

Prof. Clarke will soon resume his regular Sunday and Wednesday night free lectures on Healing, Self Help and Psychic Unfoldment at his large Studio-Chapel directly connected with his Office and Residence at 628 South Alvarado street. Other prominent speakers will also lecture at evening meetings.

TELLS NAMES IN FULL.

Wonderful, bewildering is the work of this marvelous psychic. If the mere telling of your name, or the names of friends, rivals, enemies, and others, will satisfy you, Prof. Clarke will do so. What is more important to serious people is to know what to do or what not to do, to gain success in what you wish—to make your life what you will.

MOST FAMOUS PSYCHIC.

The fame of this peerless psychic has spread to every nook, cranny and corner of this city and surrounding country. His clients come even from distant States to consult him. Every day a stream of people pass in and out of his home at Alvarado street, some go away smiling, others in grief, because he tells all the truth whether it be good or bad.

BEST PEOPLE COME.

Many of the best people have come—many who have never consulted a psychic or witnessed psychic phenomena before. WHY? Because he gets phenomenal messages for all; because he intelligently unravels your troubles. HE SEES ALL AND TELLS ALL WITHOUT ASKING YOU A SOLITARY QUESTION. He gives truthful information, relief, success and satisfaction; gives knowledge that is POWER.

A NATURAL-BORN PSYCHIC.

To some it is given to penetrate the profound secret of destiny; to look years ahead into the future and accurately foretell that which is to happen in the lives of others, preparing them for good fortune and enabling them to avoid the dangers and pitfalls before them. There may be a better position—better salary or business for you. Perhaps you are waiting for something you may never realize.

A MEDIUM SINCE BIRTH.

For many generations his ancestors have been noted psychics and mediums, having inherited this precious gift, through long years of work and study he has developed his spiritual self that things which are obscure and hidden to the partly developed psychic and medium are as clear to him as an open book. He offers his service to those who are in doubt or trouble, worried or dissatisfied, ill in mind or body, who are failing to realize what they desire.

ALL CONSULTATIONS CONFIDENTIAL.

His reception rooms are so arranged that you meet no other visitors. Lady speaking English, French, Italian, Spanish, German and other languages in constant attendance during Office Hours, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Call today—tomorrow may be too late!

$1.00. $1.00. $1.00.

Kean tells full names, how long you will live, your occupation and what condition your business is in and how to improve it; Kean tells you all about your wife, husband, sweetheart or lover and how to win the love of anyone you desire; Kean tells you of any move, journey, business transaction, position or change of any kind which may be before you and how to act to obtain the best results; Kean tells you exactly what your acquaintances think of you, who to trust and who to shun; Kean tells you whom and when you will marry, if at all, and gives their name, occupation and disposition; in short, Kean tells you everything, past, present and future you called to find out, and that, too, without asking you a question or you speaking a word. If worried consult California's premier Psychic-Palmist (licensed,) today—tomorrow may be too late.

IF YOU DON'T FIND OUT WHY YOU ARE A FAILURE, YOU NEVER WILL SUCCEED.

PSYCHIC-PALMISTRY

is the Master Key which will unlock the Secret Chamber of success and happiness and throw wide open the doors that seem to bar you.

PSYCHIC-PALMISTRY

is the science of most value to those who have a true desire to relieve themselves of the mistakes, bad judgment and intolerable conditions which daily surround them.

Advertising with Mr. P. H. Kean is an explanation and not an apology. Mr. Kean is a licensed practitioner, permanently located in Los Angeles, and absolutely reliable.

Do you realize the marvels of Psychic Power and what it means to you? If you had told your Grandfather fifty years ago that with an X-Ray the human skeleton could be seen in a living body he would have considered you mildly crazy. If you had told him that men would ever talk through the air, their winged words flying across the trackless sea, he would have thought you a raving lunatic. Yet today we can see through walls and our messages beat back and forth in the air to the far corners of the earth. And we are just beginning to understand the tremendous influence of Psychic, Magnetic and Clairvoyant force—or mind power—with its influences for good or evil.

Go let Mr. Kean analyze you, let him size you up psychologically, and tell you what you are adapted for—how to make friends, money and success. Have you failed to realize your desire in life? Are you a round peg in a square hole? Are you dissatisfied with yourself? and your position in life? Are you making a financial success? Why not? Have you found your right place in life? Mr. Kean has analyzed many leading men and women of the nation, and thousands in California alone—why not you?

PERSONAL FACTS.

Seventy-five per cent. of the people are in wrong occupations—misfits.

Sixty per cent. of men and women fail in business from lack of adaptation to that business, or because wrongly suited in partnership.

Fifty per cent. or more are mismated in marriage—result, divorce.

Ninety per cent. of men and women don't understand themselves. They are like a ship without a rudder, compass or chart—in danger of wrecking—failure. How about you?

Ninety per cent. of the people who consult Mr. Kean for personal psycho-analysis, vocational guidance, mental, social and personal readjustment, develop stronger and more attractive personalities, become more efficient, successful, prosperous and happy. The other 10 per cent. don't try.

How about you, reader? Ask yourself if you don't think you should consult Mr. Kean—the man who knows his business—who knows you.

MR. KEAN will offer suggestions and give help to all who are in trouble and suspense concerning their personal affairs in business, love, marriage and domestic life. Scientific palmistry will reveal to you your weak points, strong characteristics, future possibilities, what you are best fitted for in life, etc.

DO YOU KNOW

that 98 per cent. of the successful men and women of today in the affairs of life, such as business, love, marriage, etc., are guided psychically either through the development of their own intuitive force or through the aid of a Professional Psychic? The day of Psychic-phenomena, as a fad, fiction and experiment has passed. The reliable psychic-palmist of today is consulted on the material affairs and obstacles of life with the same degree of feeling and confidence that you would consult your lawyer, doctor, banker or broker. Psychology as a science today is to the human being what the Government Weather Bureau is to the community, and KEAN is to Psychology what Edison is to electricity. Forget what you are or were, and begin to plan what you may become. This is your hour, make the best of it. Delay is your worst enemy. When you lose your time it is gone forever. You can't regain it. Knowledge is power. Knowledge opens the door that ignorance would forever close. Life is not half so bad as some people would make you believe, so do not lose hope because the day seems dark and the affairs of life are mixed. No matter how complicated your condition may be, KEAN can and will aid you. Know the truth. Know in time what to do and how to do it. KEAN points the way. KEAN'S best indorsement is an interview with KEAN. KEAN'S fees for special work are within the reach of all. KEAN can only be consulted at his residence, 2405 S. GRAND AVE., L. A. Hours, 10 to 6 daily; Sundays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

PREMIER

has produced so many sales for these wonderful cars that we have accumulated a quantity of high grade used cars, taken as part payment on the new cars.

These used cars have been carefully inspected and are all in excellent condition and will give miles and miles more of good service.

LEACH SERVICE

stands behind many of these used cars, insuring you of real satisfaction. Those not covered by Free Service are guaranteed to be exactly as represented.

LEACH POLICY

It is the policy of this house to put the used car end of the business on a "square deal" basis, to elevate this part of the institution to the plane in which it rightfully belongs.

You take no chances in buying a used car from Leach and we show many wonderful bargains priced

AS LOW AS $100.

From this low price up to as much as you feel you want to pay for a serviceable used car, you will find real bargains here.

MUST BE SOLD AT ONCE.

No automobile concern can afford to retain a large stock of used cars, such as you will find here and in order to move them quick we have priced them at attractive figures.

THEY WILL MOVE FAST

because the values we are offering are greatly in excess of the price we ask and careful buyers will appreciate the opportunity that we present them.

REMEMBER THIS!

Leach stands unflinchingly for a square deal and you'll get treated in a manner that will make you a life-long booster for Leach. Ask any owner of a Leach sold used car about us, they are our best advertisements.

USED AUTOMOBILES

AN INVESTMENT.

We can honestly state that we have not sold a single used car this year that has not proven an actual investment to the owner and we know that if the purchasers have given their cars reasonable care that they CAN SELL THEIR USED CAR TODAY FOR THE SAME AMOUNT that they paid for it. We have sold very near to four hundred used cars in the past twelve months and we are in a position to prove this fact.

In part, this has been due to a market that has held steady; but the greater reason is the fact that we are not speculators in used cars and we must sell these used cars purchasers a new one later on to make a profit, and therefore we SPARE NO EXPENSE IN PUTTING THESE USED CARS IN THE BEST POSSIBLE CONDITION; therefore they do not deteriorate as the average used car is apt to. "A stitch in time saves nine." We are certain to get at least 40 per cent. of these used cars back in trade on new ones and we won't get them back unless we can allow a good figure for them. We will not make such an allowance unless they are worth it. We are selling a popular new car and we do not have to make an over-allowance, or do we accept a poor car. We want this business and we do our part to see that they do not become junk.

IT'S UP TO YOU. Purchase a used car from us, we will guarantee it and give you the free use of our repair department for a liberal period. Take care of this car and a year from today there is no doubt but that you will admit that you had an investment instead of a luxury. FOR THE NEXT YEAR YOU ARE FACING A BETTER MARKET THAN THE PAST YEAR. USED CARS IN GOOD CONDITION ARE BOUND TO RISE IN VALUE.

We have many types and models to select from. We do not feature individual cars, but you will find one to suit you whether you intend to invest $250 or $1500. Every one of them are worth the money. Every one is in good condition or it would not be here. Our name on a bill of sale means that we have faith in the car. If we cannot afford to guarantee the car we sell them to a speculator. We will only lose about 10 per cent., our reputation means more than that to us. We have Chandlers, Buicks, Fords, Cadillacs, Chalmers, Mitchell, Paige, Chevrolet, Oakland, Haynes, etc., etc.

LOOK THEM OVER.

NO ADVANCE IN

PRICE ON

A REBUILT CHANDLER SIX.

OWING TO THE INCREASE IN PRICE OF ALL MAKES OF NEW CARS, A REBUILT CHANDLER SIX AT THE PRESENT LOW PRICE SAVES YOU FROM $100 TO $200.

The unprecedented demand for the new CHANDLER has enabled us to accept in trade a limited number of slightly used Chandlers. These cars have been thoroughly rebuilt, refinished and equipped with special plate glass, side and rear curtains and excellent tires. They cannot be distinguished from a brand new car.

These models made the CHANDLER records of satisfactory service in the hands of owners, which fact is responsible for more new CHANDLERS being sold in Southern California this year than any other high grade car.

The rebuilt CHANDLERS have all those features characteristic of high-grade, high-priced cars, such as Bosch High Tension Magneto, Solid Cast Aluminum Motor Base extending from frame to frame, annular ball bearings in transmission, differential and rear wheels. Silent chain drive for Motor Shafts. Gray & Davis Separate Unit Starting and Lighting Systems, etc.

At the present low price a high-grade rebuilt CHANDLER is a much better investment than a cheap new car. It costs no more to operate and depreciates considerably less. We have all models in stock, finished in the latest color combinations. Come and select your favorite color. You owe it to yourself to investigate these incomparable values.

BUY ONE USE IT SEVEN DAYS, AND IF IT ISN'T EXACTLY AS REPRESENTED, turn it back to us. We also offer a three-months' free service guarantee backed by a company that considers satisfied owner of a rebuilt CHANDLER a good prospect for a new one later on.

Open Sundays. Terms if desired.

LET'S GO BACK JUST A LITTLE—and consider why we took in the Used Cars we are offering you.

HAROLD L. ARNOLD sells Hudson and Dodge cars. You know that there is a steady demand for both makes that is probably not excelled by any other cars on the market.

Because this is so, we do not have the slightest reason for taking in Used Cars at inflated figures. There is not the slightest necessity for us to boost sales in this manner. When we take them in, it is at a price that is an honest value and that will permit a ready resale.

The dealer with a Used Car Problem is the dealer with a New Car Problem. If his new cars are hard to sell, his Used Cars are very apt to be overpriced.

Look over the following list. You will find it will pay you to come and see them as well.

We are open Sundays.

MINING MEN, DO YOU KNOW? OF COURSE you don't, just because some one has been unfriendly enough to say you have the ore, when, if you stop to think you know he knows no more about it than you do. If you use the "Core Drill," which you can buy yourself, "you" will then "know," no guesswork. Our machines have a 15-h.p. hoist, which you can use to mine with, also a triplex pressure pump, and 500 feet discharge pipe to unwater your shaft, and nearly every part, including a fine wagon gear, can be used on mine when through drilling. This investment is not a waste of money, but the best you ever made; if you should not strike ore in the first hole, with the large cores laid on your desk, it doesn't take the time and persuasion to interest capital. Write for circular or come and see us, and see the cores we have here from all over.

PERSHING URGES TROOPS TO BUY FRENCH BONDS.

American Force Abroad is Helping to Defeat U-boat Campaign.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Dec. 15.—Further evidence of the continued warm friendship between the American and the French forces is furnished by the aid Gen. Pershing is giving to make the third French war loan a success. The bonds are being sold to yield 5.83 per cent. and may be paid for in installments. In a proclamation to the American expeditionary force Gen. Pershing says:

"As allies of the French, their interest in the success of this loan is our own. A liberal response to their plea will mean much to our glorious Allies. There were many French subscriptions to our Liberty Loan. The careful consideration of the French loan as an investment is urged on all members of the American expeditionary force. The commander-in-chief will be much gratified to have liberal subscriptions made by the members of his command."

In appreciation of this proclamation Gen. Ragneau, chief of the French military mission, sent Gen. Pershing the following letter:

"The cordial spirit of your plea, which reasserts the close union between our countries and conveys a pleasing compliment to the work already done by France, will be highly appreciated by the French government and the general commander-in-chief."

The army itself is helping to beat the submarine. Figures just made available show that the American expeditionary force, by paying close attention to the business end of its activities, has released the ships of the Allies of the task of carrying many thousand tons of army material, the ships thus released being utilized for greater services equally important.

BUY MATERIALS ABROAD.

This has been done through the activities of the Gen. Pershing board, which has bought all the material possible on this side of the Atlantic, rather than order it shipped from the United States. The magnitude of the task is shown by the figures for the first half of November, during which one of the numerous branches of the board bought in France 26,000 tons of tools and equipment, 4000 tons of railway ties and 160 tons of cars. These purchases involved an expenditure of 18,000,000 francs, a sum which goes to help the industries of France, while at the same time saving cargo space of some twenty vessels of 1600 tons each.

This saving for a single fortnight in a single army branch is illustrative of what has been done in every branch by the new purchasing service for which Gen. Pershing is utilizing bankers and commercial experts who are anxious to do their part in France and who, under the direction of regular army experts are now engaged in work similar to that which occupied them in civil life.

The price flying policy which the United States has adopted at home in certain articles is being carried on by the army in France, aided by shrewd use of business information and special aid from the British and French authorities. In fact, requisitions are sent to Washington only when the desired goods, supplies and materials are not obtainable in Europe.

AMERICAN INITIATIVE SURPRISES FRENCH.

PERSHING'S MEN "DO THINGS," AND DISCUSS THEM AFTERWARDS

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Dec. 15.—Here are two stories showing how American officers in France get things done: An artillery commander, having received orders to transfer his command by rail, loaded the men and their equipment and then discovered that no engine was attached to the train and none appeared available. At that moment a small freight engine arrived in the yards and its engineer and fireman, at first protesting, obeyed the battery commander's orders to take out the artillery train. This engine proving not powerful enough to move the heavy load, it was permitted to proceed on its regular freight run.

A few minutes later a passenger train arrived with a much more powerful engine. This one was cheerfully commandeered by the American officer and as the result his organization was transported on time. Available records do not indicate whether that train's passengers have gone forward as yet.

The second incident occurred the day before Thanksgiving, but has just come to light. An officer under orders to see that the necessary quantity of cranberries reached his command in time for the holiday dinner, discovered that no freight train service was available. The barrels could not be moved by express, so the American bought passenger tickets, had the barrels trundled into the compartment of the car and arranged in the previously-reserved seats before the astonished railway officials.

The officer made his cranberry delivery in time for dinner.

FEDERAL EXPLOSIVE PLANTS TO BE BUILT.

COL. JACKLING APPOINTED TO TAKE CHARGE OF CONSTRUCTION WORK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Government explosive plants to supplement the present output of private manufacture are to be built in the immediate future, it was disclosed tonight in an announcement by Secretary Baker of the appointment of Col. Daniel C. Jackling of San Francisco to take charge of construction work.

The number and location of the plants was not disclosed, but Mr. Baker announced that their construction would entail an expenditure of more than $90,000,000.

Decision to build the factories, the Secretary said, was made because it was not thought that private manufacturers would be able to meet future needs of the army, and was in accord with the War Department's purpose to keep abreast of war requirements and to anticipate them where necessary.

Mr. Jackling, who will act directly under the authority of the Secretary, is managing director of a group of copper mines producing a large percentage of the copper of the country.

FAVOR UTILIZATION OF FILIPINO TROOPS.

MAY BE USED FOR PATROL DUTY ALONG BORDER OF MEXICO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 15.—The House military affairs committee today voted to report for passage a bill authorizing the organization of a division of Filipino soldiers.

It is not intended to send these soldiers to the European battle fields, but to bring them to the United States for patrol duty on the Mexican border. This would relieve a division of the regular army from border service and make it available for use in France.

Since the United States entered the war there has been much agitation in the Philippine Islands to be represented in the war. The Filipinos have a National Guard, but this has not been drafted for foreign service. Organization of the division for which authority is now asked is under way and will include at least a part of the National Guard units.

And members of the suffrage association were urged to support food conservation plans and to do their part in purchasing government war securities, particularly the war savings certificates.

Congress was urged to pass the suffrage amendment resolution and also to enact the law proposed by Representative Jeannette Rankin under which American-born women would not be deprived of citizenship by marriage to a foreigner.

CHILDREN TO LEARN FOOD CONSERVATION.

METHODS TO BE EXPLAINED IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS EVERY MONDAY.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—Gov. William D. Stephens issued a proclamation today addressed to public school authorities and school-teachers of the State, urging them to set aside a regular period each Monday morning, beginning January 7, for instruction in food conservation.

The proclamation, which follows, was telegraphed by the Governor, at Los Angeles, to Ralph P. Merritt, Federal Food Commissioner for California, at San Francisco:

"To teach that democracy means self-control and self-sacrifice, and to bring home more intimately to our people and our boys and girls through the medium of our educational system the purposes and needs of the national government in production and conservation of food supplies, I, William D. Stephens, Governor of California, do urge upon all school authorities and teachers that a regular period of each Monday, beginning January 7, 1918, be devoted to instruction in ways and means whereby each pupil can materially aid in the nation's food conservation campaign."

STATE-WIDE MOVE.

In accordance with the Governor's proclamation, the State Department of Education, through Will C. Wood, Commissioner for High Schools, will notify all teachers in the official blue bulletin that Monday of each week after the holidays will be observed as food conservation Monday, with the request that at least five minutes of that day be devoted to instruction in food conservation work, he announced at Sacramento today.

California will be the first State in the Union to urge officially food conservation as a part of the regular public school curriculum, it was announced.

Thousands of homes will be reached by the concerted efforts of California's 11,000 school-teachers through approximately 600,000 school children from the primary grades to the last year of high school.

Definite information on the aims and purposes of the Food Administration will be furnished teachers through the blue bulletin so that they may be able to impart any desired instruction to their pupils.

"With such splendid co-operation by the public schools promised, the success of the food conservation campaign in California is assured," Mr. Merritt said.

WESTERN RESOURCES TO BE DEVELOPED.

OPENING OF COAD AND OIL LANDS IS ASSURED BY CONGRESS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—A new era of development in the West by the unlocking of natural resources was predicted today by western members of Congress in charge of the coal and oil land leasing bills and the water power bill.

About 44,000,000 acres of coal lands in fourteen States, chiefly in the West and Alaska, and many water power sources in navigable and non-navigable steams, will be thrown open to private development. In addition, the government also proposes to spend millions of dollars itself in developing California oil resources for naval use.

Although the legislation provides that most of the development shall be by private enterprise, except the Federal development of the California naval oil reserve, it also provides for government receipts from sales and rentals of coal and oil lands. No direct government development is planned, according to Senators interested in the legislation, except in the California oil fields.

Liberal leases of tracts of coal and oil lands up to 2560 acres are proposed in the pending bills.

Outright sale of coal lands to private individuals or companies also is contemplated under certain conditions, while the hydraulic development for power, light and irrigation purposes would be under Federal permit on a royalty basis.

Consideration of the coal and oil leasing bill will be resumed Monday by the Senate under a virtual agreement for elimination of the long controversy over the naval reserve in California.

Irrigation.

TO CONNECT THE CANAL WITH THE LAGUNA DAM.

Good News for the Imperial Valley is Given Out by Lane.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Secretary Lane told a delegation from the Imperial Valley Irrigation District that they would be permitted to connect their irrigation canal with the Laguna Dam near Yuma, Ariz., provided they bore the expense. However, he suggested that before this construction was undertaken, the people of the district be allowed to vote on a proposal to build a series of flood dams in the Colorado River from which the entire district could be irrigated.

The delegation told the Secretary that they had experienced great difficulty in obtaining sufficint water to irrigate land in the valley and that the connection with the government dam would give them a continuous and ample water supply. In addition, it would permit a change in the route of the present canal so as to bring all of it within the borders of the United States. A section of it now passes through Northern Mexico.

The construction of dams in the Colorado River, it was pointed out, would require Congressional action for the permits as well as an appropriation to cover the cost of the dams. The money would be refunded by the landholders after a period of years.

The delegation told Mr. Lane that they would submit both proposals to the people of the valley and advise him of their decision.

INTERPRETATION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL CENTRO (Cal.) Dec. 15.—Connection of the irrigation system of the Imperial Valley Irrigation District with the Laguna Dam, near Yuma, Ariz., sanctioned today by Secretary Lane, would give the Imperial Valley 1200 second feet additional water in the summer, according to engineer's estimates. This would insure an ample water supply the year round for the acreage now under irrigation, it is believed.

A contingent plan, providing for the building of a series of flood dams in the Colorado River, upon which Secretary Lane suggested a vote of the people of the district be taken, would provide a supply of 8000 second feet additional, it is estimated. This, it is believed, would be sufficient for the year-round needs of the valley and 200,000 acres in addition.

Connection with the Laguna Dam would require a sixteen-mile extension of the main canal of the irrigation system.

ESCAPES DEATH BY VILLA FIRING SQUAD.

FRANTIC APPEALS OF MEXICAN GIRL SAVE AMERICAN RANCHER'S LIFE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA BARBARA, Dec. 15.—William H. Herbert, Santa Barbara man, owning the Hacienda de Miras, a big stock ranch in the State of Nueva Leon, Mex., seventy miles from Monterey, was saved from death before a firing squad of Villa followers by the frantic appeals of his house servant, a Mexican girl named Patricia, who threw herself before him as he stood, tied to a stake, a squad standing a few paces off awaiting the command of their leader to fire.

News of the affair was received today in a letter from Mrs. Herbert by George Robbins, her brother, a prominent local man. The Villa bandits, twenty-seven in number, raided the ranch and made Herbert a prisoner. He was condemned to death; after the Mexican girl's successful appeal for his life he was released, but the bandits drove off most of the saddle horses from the ranch and a large number of stock.

Fearing another raid, Herbert is now getting out of Mexico as much of his property as possible.

GENTLEMAN BANDIT MAKES TWO HAULS.

GETS CASH AND TRINKETS OF VICTIMS IN DIFFERENT PARTS OF CITY.

A "gentleman bandit" last night introduced himself with a .45 caliber pistol to two pedestrians in different parts of the city and after a few words of pleasant conversation departed with a total of $37 in cash and a few trinkets.

A. H. Perry of No. 739 South Catalina street, was walking near Seventh and Magnolia streets when he passed a faultlessly attired man. A few seconds later Perry felt the muzzle of the gun press to his back and a well modulated voice order him to throw up his hands. Fearing it might be bad manners to refuse, Perry did as told.

"Anything you desire to keep?" the stranger asked. Perry expressed a wish to retain his discharge from the army. "Most assuredly," was the bandit's reply. He then asked Perry where he kept his money and proceeded to remove $7 and a few other valuables.

As the two men stood together, several persons were leaving the lobby of a near-by apartment-house. "I wouldn't keep my hands in the air," the bandit whispered into Perry's ears.

A little earlier in the night, F. A. Perham of No. 2722 South Vermont avenue was stopped at Flower and Twentieth street by a lone bandit and relieved of $30. His description answers that of the "gentleman bandit," the police say.

Manual Arts and Pomona High Will Be Contenders for Prep Title.

Walkover.

POMONA HIGH WINS 20 TO 0.

Jackrabbit Nisbet Stars in Gridiron Battle.

Sagebrushers are Victors by Superior Headwork.

South Pasadenans Lose in Game of Thrills.

BY JAMES DE CAMP.

Li'l Adam Leonard and his scrappy South Pasadena Haypitchers are out of the prep title running. A certain young jackrabbit chaser named Nisbet did the deed on Bovard Field yesterday afternoon, and now it remains for the classy Manual Artisans and the Sagehen Babes to settle the big squabble for the gonfalon. All by his lonesome this Nisbet person pocketed fourteen of Pomona High's winning tallies and ably assisted his battling henchmen in presenting the South Pasadenans with a luscious, newly-laid and fully-guaranteed goose egg.

Clint Evans's Sagebrushers won the argument by superior headwork and an uncanny ability to check the fierce onslaughts of the enemy's warriors when forced to bare their fangs on their own goal line. Nisbet, Hunter and Gist in the Jackrabbit back field plunged their way to unfading fame, while the entire line thundered along through the game Orange and Black boys like some mysterious juggernaut.

TRICK PLAY TRIED.

Twice during the fray the Leonardites uncorked a dazzling array of tricky maneuvers and variations of the shift that escorted the pellet within whispering distance of a touchdown, only to lose the advantage gained by choosing an inappropriate play. In the closing minutes of the third quarter the South Pasadenans ripped their way to the Pomona 2-yard line and, instead of following the rational course of sending Cravens across on a line buck staged the bewhiskered "Statue of Liberty" for a five-yard loss. Four minutes later a similar error lost South Pasadena the ball on downs after she had reached the Jackrabbit 1-yard line. On three other occasions the Leonardites were close enough to the Pomona goal to justify an attempt to score, via the drop-kick route. Gridiron luck decreed that these three tries should sail wide of the cherished space between the posts.

PLACE KICK.

Nisbet booted across the first tallies of the day in the second quarter, sailing a place kick between the uprights from a comfortable position on the 30-yard line. In the third frame, fearing that his mighty pedal might become overproud of itself over a mere trifle, Nisbet planted another one between the posts, from the 15-yard line this time, and celebrated the advent of the ultimate period by bucking across for a touchdown and kicking goal. In the last few minutes of play Gist, the "shoestring" Pomona fullback, negotiated the goal line on a five-yard off-tackle buck and Nisbet corralled the last point of the day, crossing the bar with a neatly-judged boot.

Cravens, South Pasadena captain and left tackle, was the real sensation of the day, wiggling through the red jerseys for immense gains and skirting the ends like the late express. Only once did Cravens falter on the job; in the third quarter, when, with a clear field ahead, he bobbled the ball into the waiting hands of a pack of Pomonaites.

Early in the last quarter a sure-enough argument that sent the campus cops scooting for cover took place between Head Linesman Jack Wells and "Owl" Irvine, a denizen of the press box. No one was able to find out what it was all about, but it surely sounded great. Since a little excitement is good for the nerves it is to be hoped that Prof. Irvine and Wells get together for a little talkfest at each of the gridiron battles, just to give the fans their full ticket's worth.

FIRST QUARTER.

South Pasadena kicked off, but the play was called back and repeated because of offside play. Pomona received midfield and was penalized 15 yards on the next play. Pomona punted, South Pasadena receiving on her 35-yard line. Cravens reached the Pomona 30-yard mark on an end run from punt formation and two tackle round plays. Pomona received the ball on downs and, finding line tactics ineffective, punted to Eldredge, who received on the South Pasadena 45-yard mark. South Pasadena found it necessary to punt, the ball going out on the Pomona 35-yard mark. South Pasadena put up a stonewall defense and the Sagebrushers were forced to punt again. Cravens received and ran in 10 yards to his 40-yard line. Norton skidded around end for a 20-yard gain. Cravens attempted a drop kick, which was blocked, Pomona getting the ball on her 25-yard line. Pomona punted first down, South Pasadena receiving midfield. A forward pass, Cravens to Beardslee, netted six yards. Cravens skirted end for a gain of approximately twenty-five yards, reaching the Pomona 20-yard mark. Verry attempted a drop kick which sailed wide. Pomona proceeded to punt, South Pasadena gaining possession of the ball on her 20-yard line. Cravens smashed through tackle for his 35-yard line. Pomona got the pigskin in midfield on a punt and Gist proceeded to plow through to the South Pasadena 40-yard line. Hunter gained fifteen yards on a split buck. A forward pass, Kirkpatrick to Nisbet, reached the South Pasadena 20-yard line.

SECOND QUARTER.

Nisbet put over a place kick from the 20-yard line on the first play, the South Pasadena line making almost no effort to block the boot. Pomona kicked off over the end zone. South Pasadena was held and forced to punt. Cravens intercepted a Pomona forward pass on his 25-yard line. All efforts to shake loose proving futile, South Pasadena punted. Pomona fumbled twice and recovered in midfield. Nisbet snagged a difficult forward pass for a 5-yard gain. An exchange of punts followed, ending with the ball in South Pasadena's possession in midfield. Cravens skirted end for five yards. Hopkins shifted loose to the Pomona 15-yard line. Cravens dove over center for four yards. Verry missed a drop kick. Pomona punted, South Pasadena receiving on her 45-yard line. After a brace of semi-successful bucks, Eldredge made downs. Pomona got the ball on a fumble on her 45-yard line. Gist plowed through guard for five yards. On the next play Cravens nailed Gist for a 5-yard loss. Pomona punted, South Pasadena getting the ball on her 30-yard line, only to lose it on downs. Gist wiggled loose on a sensational run that reached the South Pasadena 7-yard line. Eldredge bucked to the 3-yard mark. Hunter reached the 1-yard line, only to lose the ball on downs when within inches of a touchdown.

THIRD QUARTER.

Pomona kicked off, Eldredge receiving on his 20-yard line and running in fifteen yards. Three quarter-back bucks reached the Pomona 45-yard line. Pomona received the ball on downs. Hunter penetrated tackle to the Pomona 25-yard mark. South Pasadena was awarded the ball on downs. Cravens ripped loose around end with a clear field, only to drop the ball upon his 40-yard line. Pomona snapped up the fumble. On the next play Jetton skirted end to the South Pasadena 15-yard mark. Nisbet planted a place kick squarely between the posts. After the kick-off play hovered in midfield for several uneventful minutes. Beardslee tore loose on a showy open-field run that reached the Pomona 15-yard line. Pomona held on the next two plays, but on the third try Hopkins smashed through to the 3-yard mark. With fourth down and 3 to go the "Statue of Liberty" play was called for and a 5-yard loss realized. Pomona punted to midfield. Cravens sneaked around end for a sensational 15-yard gain. A forward pass, Cravens to Buck, gained five yards. Cravens dove through tackle and wiggled to the Pomona 2-yard line. The red jerseys held and South Pasadena lost the ball on downs.

FOURTH QUARTER.

The period opened with Pomona in possession of the ball on the South Pasadena 37-yard line. An incomplete forward pass with a clear field ahead brought a groan from the Pomona partisans. South Pasadena received the ball on downs on her 27-yard line and punted immediately. Nisbet received, reaching the South Pasadena 20-yard mark. Gist skirted end to the 7-yard line and Palomares cut loose to the 1-yard line. Nisbit crossed the line and kicked goal. Play centered on the South Pasadena 40-yard line, with Pomona the aggressor. South Pasadena staged a forward pass, Cravens to Beardslee for a nine-yard gain and downs. A forward pass, Cravens to Perry, reached the Pomona 35-yard mark. A double exchange of punts followed and the ball was Pomona's on her 30-yard mark. Gist reached the South Pasadena 45-yard line on an end run. Palomares got loose around end for a dash that took the ball to the South Pasadena 10-yard mark. Nisbet reached the 3-yard line on an off-tackle buck and Gist dove over, Nisbet kicking goal. After the kick-off South Pasadena staged a desperate rally in midfield, but had been forced to her 25-yard line when time was called.

VERNON ATHLETICS MEET COHNS TODAY.

Maier Park, Vernon, will be the scene for one of the fastest games of the winter season, when the Albert Cohn baseball club, champions of the Trolley League, cross bats with Bill Goodman's Vernon Athletics this afternoon. The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock and a large crowd is expected on account of the keen rivalry that exists between these aggregations.

In a previous contest between these two teams the Albert Cohns took Goodman's team in camp in a fast ten-inning game, with a close score of 2 to 1. The Vernonites have since materially strengthened their line-up and expect to reverse the previous result.

Wade Killifer's latest Angel recruit, Ford Tally, will do the pitching for the Vernon club, with Gomes on the receiving end.

Manager Barnabee will work Goodwell and Hartnagle, the same battery that proved so effective when the Albert Cohns landed the Trolley League pennant. The line-up of the teams follow:

Semi-finals.

TOILERS GIVE SAN DIEGO REAL WALLOPING 55 TO 0.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 15.—Manual Arts High School of Los Angeles walloped San Diego High this afternoon at the Stadium in one of the semi-final games for the Southern California prep football championship, and, to leave no doubt of the result, ran the score up to 55 to 0.

From the beginning the Los Angeles eleven had the southern team beaten. Playing an open game and using forward passes, the Los Angeles men scored repeatedly.

Galloway, full-back, and Smith, of Manual Arts, played a stellar game. Erb, McMillan, Berkey and Reed, of the Toilers' team, all did their share and made touchdowns that rolled up the score rapidly.

The Los Angeles men began to score early. In the first six minutes Galloway made the initial touchdown. Seven minutes later Smith carried the ball across. San Diego took a brace towards the end of the first period. Manual fumbled a punt and Galloway was downed near the San Diego goal. The ball worked back to the center of the field and back toward the Manual goal where San Diego lost the chance at goal. San Diego was penalized for rough playing.

By the end of the first period the score was 21 to 0.

"Lookit him go."

Here we have "Reckless" Nisbet, star of yesterday's Pomona High-South Pasadena encounter, rushing into the embrace of several determined South Pasadena tacklers. Nisbet was responsible for no less than fourteen of the twenty Sagebrush tallies and had the South Pasadena Haypitchers on the go during the entire game.

Gridiron Dope.

ALL-AMERICAN TEAM IS PICKED BY ECKERSALL.

Insists on Choosing Honorary Elevens Although Big Three is Out of It.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 15.—Although Yale, Harvard and Princeton were not formally represented on the gridiron this year, most teams in all sections of the country played out their football schedules. So the time is at hand to select all-American honorary elevens.

Some football fans may not think it just to make such a selection, because of the number of stars who are in war service, but the fact remains that those who did play should be given due credit for their work.

This is the first time since football has been played in American colleges, that Yale, Harvard and Princeton are not represented on the honorary elevens.

With the so-called Big Three out of the championship race, the smaller college elevens had a chance to make bids for the title. That this opportunity was taken advantage of is shown by the fact that Georgia Tech developed a team which was practically invincible, and shares with Pittsburgh the Eastern championship honors. Tufts and Brown also played good football, as did West Virginia.

Of the important Eastern teams, Cornell had the most disastrous season. The big Red team did not win an important game. Pennsylvania had a good year, while Dartmouth met with a few unexpected reverses.

The West had a little the better of the East in intersectional contests. Notre Dame won from the Army and Washington and Jefferson; Michigan beat Cornell, only to lose a week later to Pennsylvania. The victories of the South Benders over the Easterners were hard earned, the issue in both cases being decided by field goals. Otherwise the play was about equal.

OLD AND NEW.

There was little change in the style of play used all over the country. The old and new game was worked to its limitations, and in the great majority of cases the best teams emerged victors. Punting and field goal kicking were dominant factors in all contests, while the running-forward-pass game was employed more frequently than ever.

Four Western players are placed on the All-American; not because of their work in any one game, but because of consistent playing throughout the year. They have been mainstays of their respective elevens and instrumental in their victories. They have stood the brunt of many hard fought games, and have weathered the going in an unflinching manner.

Harley of Ohio State, the sterling player who helped the Buckeyes win their second successive Western conference championship, is placed at right half-back. There is nothing about football that this player cannot do and do well. Although he weighs 158 pounds, he makes up in speed and aggressiveness for what he lacks in weight.

Harley is a punter of the 50-yard variety, a field goal kicker, who is dangerous anywhere inside the 40-yard line, a fast and elusive open field runner, and a reliable defensive player.

Bolen, another Ohio State player, is played at left end. During the last two years few gains have been made around his end, while his ability to worm out in the open to receive forward passes made him one of the most valuable men on the Ohio eleven. He knows the art of boxing a tackle and generally breaks through to take off the secondary defense when the play is sent off the other extremity.

Hauser of Minnesota is placed at right tackle. There is little about line play that the Gopher does not know. He has shown this in all his games. He varies his changes, is quick to mix in plays, no matter where they are sent, and seldom has failed to open up holes for the backs. He is a strong, rugged player, who can stand the strain of a hard-fought battle.

QUARTER-BACK.

The quarter-back position is given to Weston of Michigan. The little Wolverine did more than was expected of him this year and is considered the find of western football. Weston has football intelligence. He knows what to do at the right time, as was shown repeatedly in this year's games.

The Michigan pilot is a fast and powerful open-field tackle, and off-field tackle. He is not used a great deal to feed the ball to the back, but he directs the team's attack in a sure and safe manner.

McLaren of Pittsburgh is placed at left half-back because of his all around ability. The Smoky City player is an ideal back, being heavy and fast and a powerful defensive player.

Berry of Pennsylvania is awarded the fullback position. The Quaker was a factor in all of Pennsylvania's games this year, and knows all the points of the game. He is a good man in the open, and powerful in line bucking.

Bailey of West Virginia is placed at center. The West Virginian is a powerful player. He weighs 185 pounds and is fast as a back. He is an accurate passer and strong on the defense.

The guard positions are awarded to Crabb of Brown and Gault of Georgia Tech., the latter being considered one of the best forwards who ever played in the South. This pair, with Bailey in the middle, would compose a trio hard to penetrate.

McCord of Georgia Tech. is placed at left tackle. He is a reliable player, being strong and heavy and fairly active.

Carlson, captain of the Pitt eleven, is placed at right end. He has been a reliable player for Warner for two years, and the coach has said he is one of the best wing men he ever tutored.

Having selected an honorary eleven from the conference team, it is only fair to honor other players in the West by picking an all-western eleven.

Outside of the conference college there are only two institutions which can boast of players worthy of places on an all-western team. Notre Dame, who won the two important intersectional contests, and Nebraska, the strongest team west of the Mississippi River, are represented by all-western material.

Michigan played only one conference with Northwestern. Two Wolverine stars did not play in that contest and could not be considered in the selection of the Big Ten eleven. Their ability, however, is taken into consideration at this time, and they are placed on the first team.

Any one who has ever seen Weston, the Michigan quarter-back, will not question his selection for the same position on the honorary eleven. Coach Yost always has claimed that Boss Weeks was the best pilot he ever had and when Hurry Up declares Weston is the nearest to the former player, this year's quarter must be a player of skill and ability.

Lambert, another Michigander, is placed at center. He is unquestionably the best pivot man since the days of Germany Schulz, the best center whoever wore a Wolverine uniform. He is big, fast and active, and is quick to size up plays when playing open center on defense. He moves to the point of attack quickly and generally is a factor in every play.

Brandy of Notre Dame is placed at left half, for his hard and consistent playing and the almost perfect protection he gave the other backs in the interference. He defeated the Army, and Washington and Jefferson, single-footed, by well-placed field goals, and he was an important cog in all other games played by the South Benders.

Although not a heavy player, Brandy makes up for the loss of weight by speed and football brains, fast and elusive in the open, a good kicker, and a reliable defensive player.

Bolen of Ohio State and Kelley of Wisconsin are easily the best wing men in the West.

Courtney of Ohio State and Hauser of Minnesota are the logical choices for tackles, as stated in the all-conference story.

Ulrich of Northwestern and Higgins of Chicago, all-conference guards, keep these positions on the all-western.

SAGEHENS RECEIVE GRIDIRON HONORS.

PRACTICALLY EVERY MAN ON THIS YEARS TEAM WILL JOIN THE COLORS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CLAREMONT, Dec. 15.—At the annual football banquet here last night, the Pomona College football yeomen, who made a clean sweep of football in the conference this year were presented their letters and stripes in honor of their deeds on the gridiron during the past season. One three-year fob was presented. Those receiving letters were Kirk, Bruce Elliot, Warren Elliot, Clark, Greathouse, B. Bergstrom, Stover and Gillingham. Presented with stripes signifying the earning of another letter were Capt. Morrison, Captain-elect Morgan, Cook and Shallenberger. Ralph Shallenberger was presented with a football fob which is awarded to those who play three years in the first line of trenches at the Sagehen institution.

A noticable feature of this letter awarding was the fact that seven of the twelve men named are sophomores at Pomona and would probably bring more championships to the Blue and White, if it were not for the war. Morrison, Clark and Kirk are already under the colors, and the remainder of the squad expect to be shortly, practically every man on the team having made application in some branch of the service.

The presentation of the fob to Shallenberger will probably be the last occasion of this kind to happen at Pomona for many years. The all-State center was cheered and recheered on the presentation. Another feature of the letter awarding was the final triumph of Melvin Cook, who after three years of hard work and ill fortune finally received his insignia. For four years, Cook has fought like mad to earn a berth on the varsity and has each year received hard luck injuries in the early season that have prevented him from landing his fob. This year fate was more lenient and he pulled through on top.

SEES GOOD FUTURE FOR AMERICAN GAME.

NEW RORK, Dec. 15.—Holding that baseball is such an important factor in American life that it is "indispensable," John K. Tener, president of the National League, in his annual address to the organization last Tuesday, made public here today, urged the owners to maintain just as high a standard of play as possible during the war. He declared himself confident that by "fostering, protecting and advancing the game," baseball would be more popular than ever after the war.

"With respect to the interest the American people will take in their national game next year," he said, "I do not hesitate to express my confidence in their loyalty in attachment to it.

"Our patrons are not interested in your financial gains and losses, but they are interested as sportsmen in our national game. For after all baseball to them is but a sport."

Taking up the subject of building: it has been thought that three years ago—the season of 1914—was one of the recent economical periods for building construction. Now we must keep in mind the purchasing power of the dollar, particularly in its relation to food and other products. In that year (1914) 100 bushels of wheat would buy $100 worth of building materials, while today it will buy $280 worth of the same materials. One hundred bushels of corn would then have bought $70 worth of building materials, and today it will buy $200 worth. One hundred bushels of oats would have bought less than $40 worth of materials in 1914, and today it will buy $80 worth. Hogs were then worth $7 a hundredweight; today they are around $17 a hundredweight. Cotton was worth $10 a hundredweight then, and today it is $24.

These comparisons of value do not relate merely to the farmer, the stockraiser and the planter; but are of equal interest to the producer and consumer of practically every material—copper, iron, zinc, lead, coal, petroleum—all of which show increases of 100 per cent. or more in value. In other words, every 100 pounds of materials produced in these lines will buy roughly twice as much building material as it would have bought in 1914.

Building Materials.

If we look at the prices of building materials, we shall see a large contrasting difference. Three years ago Portland cement was selling at about $1.75 a barrel, and today it is $2.45 and advance of 40 per cent. Common brick has changed from $7 to $8 a thousand in 1914 to $9 and $11 per thousand today, an advance of 30 to 40 per cent. Plaster shows about 35 per cent. advance; lumber about the same. Labor employed in building — carpenters, bricklayers, plasterers—shows an average increase in wages of 16 per cent. Moreover, contractors are figuring more closely now, so that it is easy to show that the increase in cost of building construction has not kept pace with the increase in other lines of production.

Perhaps it may be argued that the salaried clerk would not find the present year the most economical time to build; and yet there is basis for belief that a relative advantage could be shown in his case. Building materials will never again be as low in price as they have been in the past. Scarcity in some lines, and the higher cost of production will regulate the values. Even if peace should come shortly, there is no prospect for lower prices for any building material, in fact, the rebuilding of destroyed districts will create a demand exceeding the possible supply.

Money that is expended in building now is likely to prove of better value within a year or two than can be shown if it is invested in almost anything else throughout the entire high-pressure list.

APARTMENT TRADED.

West Sixth-street Holding Changes Hands in Three-cornered Transaction.

The Charles H. Frost Estate has acquired the Lexington apartment, on West Sixth street between Bixel and Lucas streets, in a three-cornered deal involving about $60,000. In the exchange Mrs. Estella Morris acquired a ten-room, two-story residence at No. 1858 Crenshaw boulevard, owned by Mrs. Julia Bellinger. Mrs. Bellinger came into possession of four lots in the west part of the city, upon which, it is understood, she will build an attractive residence.

C. J. Hildesheim of W. I. Hollingsworth & Co. represented all parties to the transactions.

Notable Improvement for South Spring Street Site.

The structure, which will be one of the most important buildings projected in Los Angeles during the year now drawing to a close, has been leased for a long term by William R. H. Lacy to the H. C. Fryman Hotel Company, through the agency of the W. Ross Campbell Company.

CITRUS GROVES CHANGE HANDS.

FINE PROPERTIES IN WHITTIER DISTRICT SOLD DURING THE PAST WEEK.

The sale for Charles C. Scott to Richard Smith of Los Angeles, of a forty-one-acre grove of 5-year-old lemon and Valencia orange trees in the East Whittier district, is reported by the Rees Realty Company of Whittier. The grove is understood to have changed hands at the price of $50,000. The land is in the Stamy tract, a well-known subdivision opened six years ago, and lies about three miles southeast of Whittier. It is understood that Mr. Scott took as part payment six lots and two residence properties in Los Angeles at the price of $16,000.

Another deal announced by the same realty concern involved the transfer by Cyrus Baldwin of Whittier to A. Wardman of the same city of twenty acres of Valencias and navels at Covina for $20,000. In the deal Mr. Wardman transferred to Mr. Baldwin three acres of 5-year-old lemons in the northeastern part of Whittier for $12,000 and two Los Angeles vacant lots for $5000.

The Whittier Oil and Development Company, holding citrus lands in the North Whittier district, reports the sale of forty-two acres of bare land to Elmer Lawrence, J. C. Scott and Hayes Campfield for a price of $800 an acre. The purchasers are experienced citrus men, Mr. Lawrence being already the owner of large citrus acreage in the same district. It is said the purchasers will set out the entire forty-two acres this coming spring to citrus fruits.

H. L. Platt, a newcomer from Vermont, was the purchaser last week of a highly improved five-acre bearing lemon grove in East Whittier for a given consideration of $18,500. Fred Gray was the seller.

GOES TO CHICAGO.

Local Realty Man Expects to Place Bond Issue and Close Lease in East.

Having in his charge negotiations for two business projects involving Southern California development work, C. E. Cooper, general manager of Robert Marsh & Co., will leave this evening for Chicago, Washington and other eastern points. Mr. Cooper will be accompanied by Mrs. Cooper and expects to spend a number of weeks in the East.

In Chicago the local realty man will complete arrangements for the placing of bonds for development work recently completed by the Val Verde Mutual Water Company on the Val Verde Ranch, near Riverside, owned by Robert Marsh. The placing of these bonds will, it is announced, be followed immediately by the subdivision of the ranch, which comprises 1350 acres, some 600 acres of which was planted to pears and apricots about three years ago. The irrigation equipment of the ranch consists of two extensive pumping plants and a complete pipe line system reaching all parts of the tract.

From Chicago Mr. Cooper will go on to Washington to meet Congressman George W. Fairchild of Oneonta, N. Y., who is the owner of forty-two feet of frontage on the west side of South Broadway, between Eighth and Ninth streets, in this city. To Congressman Fairchild the Los Angeles realty man will convey an offer of the Romaine Superfilm Company to lease the site in question for a long term of years and to build thereon a motion-picture theater to cost between $25,000 and $40,000. The building, Mr. Cooper declared yesterday, is to be started at once, if the offer is accepted by the owner.

The Crenshaw Security Company reports the sale of an attractive twelve-room house at No. 1881 Buckingham road, in La Fayette Square, for Moiso Bros., to Mrs. Harriet K. Hoag, formerly of Salt Lake City. The site is 150 feet square and is at the corner of Buckingham road and Washington boulevard. The consideration is given at $22,500.

The same company reports having sold on its own account to Mrs. Ella L. Wright a ten-room house in the English style of architecture at No. 1615 Buckingham road. The lot is 60x150 feet. A consideration of $9000 is stated to have been paid for the place.

BIG HOTEL FOR SOUTH SPRING.

Will Adjoin and be a Part of Hayward.

To be Seven Stories High and Fireproof.

Up-to-date Sample Rooms to be Feature.

The immediate erection in downtown Los Angeles of a large, fireproof hotel is assured by a lease just concluded by the W. Ross Campbell Company, through its leasing department. The consummation of the deal closes negotiations of several months standing and calls for the construction of a reinforced concrete structure of seven stories on the west side of Spring street immediately adjoining the present Hayward Hotel at Sixth and Spring streets on the south.

The H. C. Fryman Hotel Company, of which Harry C. Fryman, proprietor of the Hayward Hotel, is the head, is to be the tenant of the new building, which is to be used as an addition to the present Hayward Hotel. William and R. H. Lacy are the owners and lessors. It is planned to ultimately carry the building to a height of ten stories to take care of the rapidly growing business of the hotel company.

The site of the new hostelry has a frontage of 75 feet by a depth of 150 feet to an alley. The owners have held the north 42 feet of the lot for a number of years, but only recently acquired the south 32 feet, paying cash for it in order to have the necessary ground for carrying out their building plans.

NEW FEATURES.

Many new and out-of-the-ordinary features are to be incorporated in the new Spring-street hotel. Three of the upper floors are to be arranged exclusively for sample-rooms, some with and some without baths for the commercial men. The feature of these new sample-rooms is that they will be arranged to meet the requirements of commercial men requiring either large or small table space.

The rest of the upper floors will be arranged into modern hotel rooms each having its own private bath and shower. Every improvement known to the latest hotel construction will be included, it is declared. There will be special banquet and dining-rooms and a ballroom. Provision is made for a kitchen in the basement.

The entire interior is to be finished in mahogany, while the front of the building will be of the most ornate design, and finished in white glazed brick and terracotta. The ground floor of the structure will be divided into stores.

Richard D. King is the architect, and plans are now out for bids. The present one and two-story business buildings covering the lot will be demolished immediately after the first of the year and excavations for the new and modern improvement will then be started.

VALLEY SALE.

The Janss Investment Company reports the sale of five acres in its Fruitland Acres tract in San Fernando Valley, to I. L. Millner for a consideration of $2500. The company also reports the sale of an acre improved with a bungalow at Santa Anita Acres in the San Gabriel Valley, J. M. Evans being the buyer. The price is given at $5500.

EMBARGO HITS FISH CANNERS.

Government Order Worries Sardine Packers.

Mexican Waters Opened to Los Angeles Boats.

Shortage of Craft, However, Raises a Problem.

Two important governmental actions effecting the supply of fish, now more important than ever before in food matters, have been taken within the last few days, which vitally affect business conditions at the harbor. One is the embargo placed on the exportation of canned fish and the other is the opening up of the Mexican fishing banks to Los Angeles boats.

The embargo on canned fish came without warning just as the canners were preparing for the greatest business in the history of the California sardine industry. While no official reason for the embargo has been given, it is believed to be because of the scarcity of tonnage needed at this time for more urgent military necessities.

Advices from Washington indicated that the embargo will be modified within a short time and that at least the canners who have engaged cargo space will be able to fill their orders.

THE SARDINE OUTLOOK.

About 90 per cent. of the orders now being filled by the canners are for foreign consumption and unless the embargo is lifted the season will be a gloomy one for the canners. Most of the canners will be unable to run more than a small part of the time as the domestic demand for sardines is limited.

The opening at the harbor of the Agencia Mexicana de Pescas ends a long and bitter fight to supply the Los Angeles market with Mexican fish through the boats at the harbor instead of through San Diego. The new Mexican agency will be in charge of Alfonso von Schnabl, who will issue permits to all markets and all fishing boats on equal terms. Heretofore no boat from this port was recognized in Mexican waters and several have been fired upon by Mexican patrol boats.

After a conference with local dealers a license fee of $55 per annum for each wholesale market and $15 per month for each boat was agreed upon. In addition, there will be combined exploitation and exportation duties ranging from half a cent a pound for fresh fish to three-quarters of a cent, and half a pound on cooked lobster and dried turtle.

BOATS ARE SCARCE.

At these duties the fish markets will be able to handle great quantities of fish here which heretofore have been going through San Diego, where a trust is alleged to exist.

Just now what is worrying the fresh fish dealers is how to provide the necessary boats to get the fish. Should the embargo on canned fish be lifted soon, there will probably be plenty of Japanese and Italian boat owners willing to fish for fresh fish. Most of the boats that have gone to the Mexican waters are owned by Austrian subjects. As they have been barred from leaving the country or operating their boats anywhere in navigable waters under the jurisdiction of the Twelfth Naval District, either themselves, by hired help or by leasing their boats to Americans, there is an acute shortage in the fishing fleet.

PAY FINE WITH PICNIC HAMS.

Judge Accepts Smoked Pork in Lieu of Yellow Gold Coin.

SANTA MONICA, Dec. 15.—Police Judge M. R. King is today richer by nine perfectly good picnic hams, which he is holding in lieu of $6, the balance of a fine of $20 imposed on Dan Wallace and E. C. Robertson, two men who were arrested today for peddling without a license.

The men were accused of selling hams that were underweight. They were captured after a spectacular chase through the streets by Capt. Clarence Webb, but as they threw their scales away, conviction on that charge was uncertain, so they were fined for not having a license. They were forced to return the money taken from their victims and this left them shy $6 to pay the fine. The judge took the hams for security and hopes the men never do come back.

FACES THIRD TRIAL.

Peculiar Attitude of Juror in Mail Fraud Cases Forces Precedent in Local Courts.

There will be another trial of the charge against Joel Smith, for using the mails in a scheme to defraud, in the operation of the monthly publication known as "The Knocker." Two juries in the case have disagreed.

In ordinary cases, where a jury has failed to convict on two separate trials, it is the usual custom to drop the prosecution, after the facts have been sent to the Attorney-General.

But there are some circumstances in connection with the Smith case that takes it out of the ordinary prosecution, and the matter will be set for hearing in January. It is reported that one of the two jurors who persistently voted for acquittal, did so, because he discovered during the progress of the trial that the government was paying the usual witness fees of the five young women, from Texas, Iowa, and Nebraska, who testified against Smith.

VITAL WAR QUESTIONS.

W.C.T.U. City Federation Prepares for Important Discussion on Serious National Subjects.

"The Pacifists—Are They Disloyal?" "The Picketing Suffragists—Are They Helping the Cause?" These are subjects on which there is to be a general discussion at the meeting of the Los Angeles City Federation of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at its all-day meeting next Wednesday in The Times Assembly Rooms.

The meeting will open at 10 o'clock, with devotions conducted by the Highland Park W.C.T.U. The questions given above will be discussed during the forenoon session. A noontide prayer service will be held, and there will be a presidents' half-hour.

Dr. Lulu Peters will give an address at 2:45 o'clock on "Adolescence: Its Perils." Mrs. M. B. Willats, a direct descendant of a line of colonial Governors, will appear in full Colonial costume and will lecture on "Health and Beauty Through the Vegetable Kingdom." The public is invited to attend all the sessions.

At Washington.

PASADENA MEN ON WAR BODY.

Section on Co-operation of States Their Field.

Acts as Clearinghouse for Many Activities.

Work of Defense Councils is Facilitated.

Engaged in an interesting phase of war work at Washington are two Pasadena men, John F. Cravens and Henry M. Robinson, who are members of the section on co-operation of States of the National Council of Defense. Mr. Cravens's work is in relation to the War and Navy departments and the commissions on training camp activities. Mr. Robinson is engaged in matters relating to the United States Shipping Board and shipbuilding and the United States Fuel Administration.

The section on co-operation of States is a recently created government bureau and acts as a clearinghouse between the State Councils of Defense and the national council and its subordinate bodies and other Federal agencies.

Among the duties of the section is to act with reference to requests on the part of Federal agencies for assistance and requests from State Councils of Defense for information or action on the part of the national government. It acts also as a clearinghouse between the State Councils of Defense themselves with reference to such activities as they may have inaugurated on their own initiative. In this respect it will discriminate between activities that are found deserving of encouragement and those that are not.

Another duty of the section on co-operation is to develop ways and means of utilizing the facilities of the State councils by bringing them to the attention of the Federal agencies, in order that the State bodies fay be effectively utilized and their organizations not needlessly duplicated.

FOUGHT FIVE U-BOATS.

Los Angeles Man Receives Letter Telling of Hot Battle by Converted Yacht.

A brief but thrilling story of hot fighting in the submarine zone was received yesterday by W. P. Powers, of No. 511 South Occidental boulevard from Ensign Clarence MacCallum, who is on board the converted yacht Noma, which was donated to the government by Vincent Astor.

Ensign MacCallum was guarded in giving information, but described one interesting battle in which the Noma stood off five enemy submarines. One U-boat fired a torpedo that missed and another, rising to the surface, began to shell the big yacht. Three others showed only their periscopes. The Noma closed in rapidly and the submarines submerged.

According to Ensign MacCallum, the submarine chasers are kept busy and the men given little time for rest. The tone of the letter is very confident.

ALIEN ENEMIES FAST BEING INTERNED.

Deputy United States Marshal Wm. Kavanaugh will take Wm. Roland and Antoine Beechschneider, alleged alien enemies, to Fort MacArthur today for internment. From that point they are taken to Fort Douglas, Salt Lake, Utah, by a detachment of soldiers, on orders of Col. E. M. Blake. There are so many Germans being interned now under Presidential warrants that United States Marshal C. T. Walton has not the force to spare to send them to the Utah and other internment prisons.

COMMERCIAL.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Recent statements in the press have seemingly led to the widespread belief that the United States Food Administration has opposed the use of cranberries, and is advising the use of other fruits instead in making the Christmas sauces. Such is not the case, says the Commercial Bulletin. The Food Administration is not urging the use of any other fruits in preference to the cranberry in making sauce or jelly. It has suggested that as an emergency measure on account of the pressure for sugar, preserves or jellies that were put up during the summer might be used in making sauce now. The Food Administration further points out that corn syrup affords a substitute for sugar in cooking cranberries with only a slight impairment of flavor. Two-thirds sugar and one-third corn syrup may be used for the jelly, or a slightly larger proportion of corn syrup for the sauce.

Potatoes were much easier in the local market yesterday. The best grade of northern stock was reduced to $2.20 and $2.25 a hundred and dealers reported that they expected even lower values in the immediate future. Idaho Russets were quoted down at $2.10 and $2.15 a hundredweight. Locals are extremely scarce and are practically off the market. There has been a heavy movement of potatoes to this market from the northern growing regions of California and also from Idaho and Oregon. This has occasioned the sharp drop in prices and if the movement keeps up there is every likelihood that consumers in Los Angeles will be able to buy spuds at exceptionally low value.

The butter situation continues firm. Every effort is being made by producers and distributors alike to keep prices down but the demand has grown so heavy and supplies are proving so inadequate to handle the situation that values cannot be kept down. The amount of butter used by the army and navy alone is tremendous and the first needs of the armed service of the country has, of course, to be attended to no matter what happens. A shipment of some 800,000 pounds of butter arrived in San Francisco several weeks ago, but it was used up in no time and had practically no visible effect on the market.

Prices jumped up sharply at yesterday morning's session of the Produce Exchange, both butter and eggs advancing. Extra eggs climbed 5 cents a dozen to 55 cents per dozen. The receipts consisted of 115 cases of eggs, 32,800 pounds of butter, 2600 pounds of cheese, 6962 sacks of potatoes, 5 sacks of beans and 11,207 boxes of apples.

EVENING-UP TRADES KEEP CORN STRONG.

COLLAPSE OF HOG PRICES REMOVES SUPPORT FROM PROVISION MARKET.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—Although predictions of milder weather had some bearish influence today on corn, the effect was more than counterbalanced later by week-end evening up of trades. Quotations closed firm ⅛ to ⅛@⅜ net higher, with January 1.21½ and May 1.19¼ to 1.19⅜. Oats gained ¼ to ⅜. Provisions suffered declines ranging from 2½ to 70 cents.

Oats paralleled the action of corn.

A collapse of prices in the hog market knocked support from under provisions.

WOMEN WORKERS THANKED.

Mrs. R. A. Kirkpatrick, chairman of a committee that held a bazaar at the Regent apartment November 27, last, has received a warm letter of thanks from the Los Angeles chapter of the American Red Cross. The bazaar netted $400.60 for the Red Cross.

Oranges and Lemons.

THE CITRUS MARKETS: WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

The navel packing season in Tulare county is pretty well over, according to most shippers, although the fruit remaining is variously estimated at from 250 to 500 cars, most of which is reported to be in the packing-houses. Estimates on the supply of Tulare county navels have been decidedly erratic this season and have been altered from time to time to conform to latest findings. With 1278 cars already forwarded the best bet now is that the Tulare crop will run close to 1800 cars.

A few cars of Tulare navels have been offered at auction this week in the various markets at average prices ranging from $2.90 to $4.70, according to quality and sizes. Some districts have produced considerable poor quality fruit and this fruit together with a heavy run of large sizes has helped to pull down the averages realized on some brands. The market is practically on a basis of $3.50 f.o.b. with cars running 150s and smaller bringing a little more money. Some shippers report good fruit of medium sizes bringing $4.65 delivered.

The past week has been one of adverse weather conditions for the sale of oranges owing to extreme cold and blizzards and this condition coupled with the annoying transportation interruption. Daily embargoes on portions of practically all railroad lines have greatly hampered shippers in getting supplies to the various markets. Many instances have come to notice where cars have been out eighteen and twenty days to Boston. In some cases where embargoes exist on several lines it is almost impossible to get cars to markets directly affected.

To date, shipments of new-crop navels from Southern California have been confined to six or eight cars shipped from Orange county before the Horticultural Commissioner's inspectors called a halt, but it is generally understood that packing will commence in a small way about the latter part of next week.

The Valencia market continues steady on fruit of good quality and condition. The trade seems to be staying with the Valencia in a satisfactory manner to shippers and good prices are being paid for good stock. Auction prices realized range all the way from $2.25 to $5.20, according to the condition and quality of the fruit, the lower grades coming into direct competition with new-crop Porto Rico oranges which are averaging around $2.00 per box.

LEMONS.

The market on lemons is in good shape. Sizes continue to be troublesome but are improving. Where cars run heavy to 300s size from $6.50 to $7 per box is being realized.

JANUARY SELLS DOWN, WHILE OTHER ACTIVE MONTHS ARE UNCERTAIN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 15.—The cotton market showed continued weakness today and at one time there were apparent prospects of a considerable break, with January selling down to $28.38 and the other active months uncertain. There was a final rally, however, with more trade buying in evidence. The close was steady, off from 15 to 23 points.

There was no particular interest in the market and much of the weakness appeared due to little more than liquidation of some old long accounts for the holidays. The action of the government in taking wool under control had some sentimental effect.

The week-end reviews of the goods situation indicated rather a smaller turnover but continued strength in prices. New Bedford reports that the demand for goods made of coarse, heavy yarns is far in excess of the demand for fine materials. Government contracts placed during the week were smaller and sales of print cloths at Fall River showed a falling off, although there were further advances in prices.

No change was reported in the ocean freight situation, and the few advices received here from the South did not indicate any weakness in the spot department.

ATTRACTIVE ANNUAL.

Issue of "The Tidings" is Replete with Matters of Interest to Catholics Here.

Probably the most pretentious annual number of a church publication issued in the West is that of The Tidings, the diocesan paper of the Roman Catholic diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, which made its appearance yesterday.

The publication was 174 pages of interesting matter, embellished with half-tone pictures of many of the prominent Catholic institutions. The cover page is in colors of artistic design. Besides a full account of the consecration and installation of Rt. Rev. John J. Cantwell, there is an article, with portraits, on "Our Former Bishops," the list reaching back to the Franciscans. A vast amount of information directly concerning this diocese, and of Catholic events in general, is contained in the number.

IN OFFICER'S MEMORY.

In memory of Motorcycle Sergeant T. J. Kronschnabel, who was shot and killed a year ago last night at Twenty-fourth and Main streets by James Darwin, alias James Burchill, the officer's picture in the hall of Central Police Station was wreathed with holly berries and evergreen yesterday. The wreath was secured by the former sergeant's fellow-officer and partner, E. J. LaNiece, who was riding after speedsters with the dead man at the time of the shooting.

IN AID OF RED CROSS.

A benefit for the Red Cross Society was given last evening by the Elliott School for Girls, at No. 1528 West Adams street. A Spanish playlet; a violin solo by Virginia Rose, accompanied by her sister, Marion Rose; songs by Mr. Chambers, accompanied by Mrs. Chambers; a recitation on "Hooverizing" by Carolyn Johnstone and Donaldine Hill; a highland fling by Miss Bickers, and a French recitation by Maxine Elliott formed part of the programme. Mrs. Louis Joralmon, president of the school, superintended the affair.

BUSINESS TALKS TO WOMEN.

BY ELLEN LANE SPENCER, Author of "The Efficient Secretary."

The Business of War Means Hard Work.

We have been taught from childhood that this, our country, was the best in the world. We believed it at first, then later began to doubt, and many of us imagined that an education was unfinished if it did not include a year or so in some foreign land.

What we were taught, it seems, was right, for there is no land on earth where there is so much opportunity, so much equality and so much reward for effort as here in the United States.

That is one reason why war seems so hard to us when we think of it. Our boys who worked every day had home comforts and luxuries that in some foreign countries the nobility did not always have. In some sections of the country they had to "rough it," but that meant only a small percentage of the great total that are now in our training camps.

It is safe to assume that nine out of ten of these boys will find the business of war harder work than they ever did in their lives. It will not hurt them, but on the contrary will help them. But what of us who stay here at home? Are we to go on our way just doing as we have done? Is war to mean nothing to the men above and below military age, and to women, except increased pay for the work done, and a few contributions to the Red Cross and the tobacco fund? The working hours of the boys in the training camps are from 5 o'clock in the morning until 9 at night. Are we, then, to stick to our own programme of just working from 8 to 5? Is it quite fair when there is so much to do?

PORT ITEMS.

Within five minutes after the first steel ship from a Pacific Coast yard slid into the water, the plates for the keel of another was laid on the vacated ways. The new ship was christened the Accomac by Mrs. W. D. Stephens, wife of Gov. Stephens. The launching was private, only stockholders of the company and representatives of the Emergency Fleet Corporation being present.

While no official information has been received from Washington, canners have been advised that the embargo has been modified on canned fish so as to permit shipping to England. It will still prevent exportation to Australia and South America. No reason for placing the embargo has been given.

Religious Fanatics.

TAKE ALLEGED SLACKERS IN "REST OF GOD HOME."

Five Inmates Lodged in the County Jail Charged with Treason.

What has been privately advertised among local slackers seeking to avoid service in the National Army, as "The Rest of God Home," located at No. 1814 West Temple street, was raided yesterday afternoon by a force of special agents of the Department of Justice, headed by Agent Whitson and five of the inmates placed in the County Jail. They will be arraigned before United States Commissioner D. M. Hammack, tomorrow morning, charged with violation of the conscription and espionage acts.

Those behind the bars are James Ramsey, alleged head of the cult that made the place its headquarters; Clifford Livingston, who asserts he registered at Joplin, Mo., but failed to report for duty; Greeley Hepler, registered at Los Angeles, who could not be found by the local exemption board when wanted, it is said, and Nick Erdie and Garrett Jones, who did not register. Mrs. James Ramsey, for whom a warrant had been issued, was not taken into custody, as she had several children who needed her attention at home. She promised to report tomorrow.

Armed with a search warrant the officers captured a large box of letters and other literature, the nature of which has not been divulged. It will be looked into tomorrow. Other arrests in connection with the affair are looked for.

Erdie, one of the men under arrest, was taken into custody some days ago, but for some reason was turned loose. He at once found his way to the Ramsey home, saying that God sent him there.

THE HEADQUARTERS.

The Ramsey house, which is a nine-room affair, was headquarters for the peculiar religious cult fostered by the head of the place, and at the time of the raid of the officers yesterday afternoon there were eighteen men in the various rooms. There were not sleeping accommodations for all and several of the men slept in the barn on the rear of the lot.

The officers say a woman was used by the Ramseys to carry out their alleged wholesale plan to prevent registrants from enlisting in the army, or if they were registered, from reporting for duty. They went further than that, it is charged, and tried through the manipulations of the woman, who is now in the hands of a charitable organization of this city, and whose name is not given in this connection, to induce enlisted men to desert the colors.

A case in point is furnished by two naval boys in the service at San Pedro, who are said to have been approached by this woman and induced to go to "The Rest of God Home," where they were begged to desert the ranks, the officers say. It is alleged that it was represented to these enlisted men that if they went to war and were killed, they would not go to heaven, and were told that if they refused to do duty, they would be shot, and in that case they were sure to go to heaven, for they would be saved by the God that does not believe in war.

PREFERRED "HELL."

These boys, who were red-blooded Americans, but whose names are not given out by the special agents, did not take kindly to the proposition that they ought to desert, and it is a part of the annals of "The Rest of God Home" that they at once proceeded to make a rough house of the place, and made their escape while the going was good. But they were told that as they had rejected the suggestions of the "children of God," Hell would be their portion. "We will take a chance," said one of the sailor men.

The card used by the young woman reads as follows:

"You are invited unto the preparation of the marriage supper of the Lamb, that ye may have right to the Tree of Life. This is your last time. I shall not pass by you any more. Rich and poor are welcome. Without money and without price. No. 1814 West Temple street. Rest of God Home. 8 p.m., every evening."

The half-baked aggregation of religious enthusiasts carried on a sort of community enterprise. They are religious fanatics of the most pronounced type, and among their rules is one that nobody is to work so long as any of the other members of the guild has a dollar.

It is declared that efforts were made to induce the persons whom they beguiled to the place to turn over their property to the Ramseys, and seek to have their relatives and friends do the same, but the evidence on this point is not as yet fully established.

PASSPORT TO HEAVEN.

It was represented to the impressionable, it is said, that if they gave up all their property to the Ramseys, all the cult would be equal sharers in the funds arising from the sale of the belongings, and such givers would have a passport to heaven. They were also told that if they contributed to the general welfare, they would not have to go in the army, as the Ramseys would see to it that the national government's arm would be paralysed if it attempted to arrest any of the "brethren."

From the evidence in the hands of the special agents of the Department of Justice, an organized campaign was carried on to inveigle persons who wanted to evade the draft, by making representations to them that if they joined the outfit, they would not be compelled to join the colors. At various times the last few weeks the place has been headquarters for a motley collection of slackers, shirkers, distraught and semi-loony individuals who have taken refuge behind the walls of "The Rest of God Home."

It is not believed that the Ramseys profited much financially by their operations, but being persons whose mentality was obsessed by the hallucination that they could "put something over" on Uncle Sam, had appealed to scores of those whose mentality was on a par with their own.

It is understood that a number of slackers who could not be found yesterday have at one time and another been inmates of the place.

To Shriners.

PATHETIC APPEALS MADE FOR HELP AT CHRISTMAS.

Pathetic appeals in the handwriting of babes asking that Santa Claus, personified by the Shriners, be sure and remember them at Christmas time are flooding the headquarters of the Shrine Christmas Charity Committee at No. 299 South Broadway.

Scores of homeless and orphan children, and more pitiful still, a large number of tots with homes, where parents are ill or have been visited with other misfortunes, look upon the Shriners for the only bright light in what would otherwise prove a most dismal holiday, and—they are never disappointed.

The work of the Shriners among the needy at Christmas time in Los Angeles for the past number of years has been legion. They have accomplished much in providing a little cheer in the hearts of the poor. The work this year has been hampered considerably by the war activities and the lack of funds, but the Shriners are determined that no needy person shall be forgotten at Christmas time.

A large number of investigators have been placed at work looking into the conditions surrounding the appeals made to the Shriners for assistance and determining what would be most acceptable in every instance.

Mrs. C. A. Eichorn, who has had charge of the work for a number of years, once again assumes control and will receive reports of needy families which will be turned over to the investigators.

Motley Flint, chairman of the committee in charge, urges that all who know of persons or families who are in need report them promptly to Mrs. Eichorn at the organization's headquarters, so that they may be properly taken care of. He emphasizes that so many are reported at the eleventh hour that they do not receive proper attention.

The requests cover a multitude of necessities, candy, nuts, eggs, meat, toys and clothes.

Here are three samples of the letters received by the committee:

"Dear Shriners:

"My mamma is sick and needs eggs and light meat, and my brother, 16, is the only one who is big and can work. My sister is 12 and I am 10. Please send my mamma something."

"Dear Santa Claus:

"I thought I would write you a few lines to let you know what I want for Christmas. My father just makes enough money to feed us. Will you please send me some toys and some candy?"

"Dear Santa Claus:

"My papa died about two weeks ago and my mother is in need of clothes. I haven't any shoes or stockings and hardly nothing to eat. I am 8 and my sister is 5. We would be very thankful if you could help us out for Christmas."

BEET GROWERS CARRY FIGHT TO WASHINGTON.

SANTA ANA, Dec. 15.—At a mass meeting of sugar-beet growers, a series of questions were put and from the growers it was ascertained that their average cost of producing an acre of sugar beets the last year was $94.44, and that the average income per acre was $82.14. These figures are being taken to Washington today by Attorney Clyde Bishop, attorney for the Associated Beet Growers of California, to be used in his fight for the growers before President Wilson and Herbert Hoover. The mass meeting authorized Bishop to wire for one or more beet growers to follow him to Washington, if, upon his arrival there it appeared advisable for them to be on hand. Dean W. Johnston of Westminster was appointed as first to go should Bishop call.

The questionnaire given the 100 or more growers, who were present, went into all the items of cost and income. It was found that the average yield was 11.1 tons per acre of 18 per cent. beets, making the average price $7.40 per ton.

A resolution was passed pledging the support of the growers to a programme by which the growers will share profits with the factories on a fifty-fifty basis. The resolution asked that growers be given the right to employ chemists, taremen and weighers to represent them in the factories.

Best the World for Hardwoods.

In the matter of protecting poultry from human marauders, a poultryman says, the dog is a big help. A bull terrier owned by this poultryman used to go out on the main road and wait for suspicious-looking persons to pass. When one came in sight he never made a sound, but just dropped behind and followed with his nose about two inches from the man's legs. The dog never did anything, but the moral effect was tremendous. "I don't pretend," says the dog's owner, "to know how to train a dog to do that. The terrier picked it up himself. No bark, no rush, just went sniffing quietly along behind him."—[Outlook.

ANGELENO TELLS OF WARSHIP'S TRAVELS.

INTERESTING EVENTS IN LIFE OF SAILOR ARE VIVIDLY DESCRIBED.

Four Los Angeles men who were sent to the Atlantic when the war broke out as members of the National Naval Volunteers, which absorbed the California Naval Militia, have been doing much traveling since they left home. Will Duncan has written an account of his wanderings to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Duncan of San Pedro, with as much detail as censorship would permit.

During the seven months the warship upon which he is stationed covered more than 30,000 miles, and with two or three exceptions was not in the same port twice. Nearly every port on the American Atlantic Coast, from Panama to Canada, was visited, as well as those of France and England. On a recent trip the warship carried the distinguished party of American representatives to the Allied conference at Paris, including Col. House, Rear-Admiral Bensen, Maj.-Gen. Bliss, Oscar Crosby, Vance McCormick, Thomas Perkins and others.

During all this time the four Los Angeles men were able to keep together until recently. Besides Duncan were Harry and Otto Johnson and Win Rider. Duncan and Harry Johnson are still together. Win Rider was recently transferred to the destroyer base at Queenstown and Otto Johnson is now on the Atlantic Coast. Both are married men and will soon be relieved from active service.

HERO OF MARNE TO TELL OF BATTLE.

LOCAL FRENCH ALLIANCE TO PRESENT BRILLIANT OFFICER AND LECTURER.

Under the auspices of the Alliance Francaise of Los Angeles will be given an interesting talk on the Battle of the Marne, in the hall of the French Red Cross Society, No. 929 South Broadway, tomorrow evening. The speaker will be Lieut. Maurice Boucher, who was one of the factors contributing to the great victory.

Lieut. Boucher was very severely wounded in the campaign, and has been for the present relieved from active duty at the front. He was mobilized the second day of August, 1914, participated in the Belgian campaign, and then took his rank at the battle of the Marne. In one day he was wounded four times. Regardless of this he continued fighting until finally exhausted, and was taken from the battlefield unconscious from his wounds. On May 10, 1915, he was made a Knight of the Legion of Honor. The lieutenant is only one of the thousands who have given their youth, their career, and even their lives, to save their country.

The lieutenant is a brilliant speaker, and those conversant with the French language, who may attend, have before them a treat.

Those who may come earlier will have an opportunity of appreciating the hundreds of war posters now on exhibition at the French Red Cross rooms, loaned by Charles Templeton Crocker, of San Francisco, who has collected them from the beginning of the war.

OUST THE HOUSEFLY.

A Color Scheme That Will Make Him Flee in Dismay.

The eyes of the house fly perceive satisfactorily only white light, the simple colors of the spectrum having practically no effect, especially violet, red, blue and green. The last two, while slightly perceived, exert a repellent effect on the house fly.

This C. Galaine and C. Houlbert have proved; they publish the result of their experiments in the Journal de Medicine de Paris, which is quoted by the New York Medical Journal. More, the house fly's eyes most clearly perceive yellow and orange of all the special colors. Into a room with a single window fitted with light blue panes many flies were attracted through the open window by means of odoriferous substances. One pane had been hinged to admit white light at will. Upon closing the window the flies were observed to become at first somewhat restless and soon after to settle down as in darkness.

When a beam of white light was admitted, they promptly escaped through the white light. Green panes gave the same results. With yellow panes not quite as many as left the room when the white light was admitted.

Thus, in rooms or halls lighted from one side only, as is often the case in hospitals, private dwellings, factories, shops, etc., flies can be got rid of by using blue panes hinged at intervals. Flies will not enter such premises; any that have entered while the windows have been open will either come to rest or quickly escape through the movable pane when the windows are closed. In rooms lighted from more than one side the blue windows should be opened on only one side at a time.

Flies observing the blue light within will not enter, or will soon turn back and out again. Blue windows are also advantageous in keeping out heat rays in the warm season. As they cut down the light somewhat, a mixture of blue with green, yellow, and even red panes, arranged in mosaic form if desired, is to be preferred. Such a mixture will give results practically identical with those from exclusively blue panes.

To increase the efficacy of the outlet panes in a badly lighted room, a convex mirror should be so placed outside as to throw into the room a divergent pencil of white light; the flies, as they enter this pencil, are aspirated, as it were, to the outside.—[New York World.

The Red-haired Girl's Day.

There is a run on henna at the drug stores. Someone from the West has declared that the red-haired girls lead them all when it comes to amiability and sweet disposition. He gives a kindly tip to young men who contemplate matrimony and advises them to mate with a girl with russet tresses. According to this man, red-haired girls are the most efficient and sweet-tempered and any man who has the courage to make a statement like that ought to know what he's talking about. But, getting down to brass tacks, some brunette says the man who made the statement has a red-headed wife and he must be trying to square himself for staying out after bedtime.—[New York Letter to Pittsburgh Dispatch.

TOM REED CLIMBS ON THE EXCHANGE.

SPECTACULAR MINING ISSUE ADVANCES FOURTEEN POINTS IN HOUR.

The spectacular rise of Tom Reed was the big feature at yesterday morning's session of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. Opening in the morning a point up at par, the stock steadily climbed to a high of 1.14, closing strong at 1.12. Buying orders continued to pour in for the stock from outside sources and the local investing public was also well represented. Certain of the professional element were very busy shorting the stock all morning, but as fast as they offered it for sale it was snapped up. There appears to be a wide-spread belief that the Tom Reed Gold Mines Company will be placed on a dividend basis before the end of sixty days and many holders are adding to the stock they own today for this reason. It is felt that when the company does resume dividends they will not be less than 3 cents a share a month, and 5 cents a share is anticipated by a great many brokers close to the management of the company. United Eastern is paying this latter amount and is selling today for 3.70.

United Northern was also in excellent demand and moved up to .08. Reports from the camp bear out the fact that the vein on the west drift of the 555-foot level is very near. For the past week stringers of quartz have been cut on an average of once a day, but Saturday the drills were biting through practically continuous quartz matter and the vein is expected by the management not later than Monday morning.

There was a good call for Midway Northern and National Pacific, induced by reports from Washington that the Walsh leasing bill was almost sure of passage. The former stock advanced to .19½ and the latter brought the higher quotation of .05 1-4 to .05 3-8. Union Oil was weak and dropped to 101.00. Liberty Loan bonds were, as usual, unaltered. Industrials were neglected, there being only a few meager transactions in Los Angeles Investment at .41 to .42.

ADVANCES DECEMBER 17TH
3c ARIZONA OIL 3c
Pay 3c Now and 3c More When Oil Is Struck

On December 17th, these shares will be advanced to 10c—5c with order and 5c when we strike oil.

The ARIZONA OIL & REFINING COMPANY owns by quit claim deed 640 acres—not a lease—in the Chino Valley oil fields of Arizona. The Company has acquired a full Standard drill and rig. The substantial position of the Treasury warrants immediate drilling. Operations in charge of Dr. E. A. Edwards—the great geologist—who discovered the Whittier, Taft and Ventura oil fields. The Treasurer of the company is Honorable David F. Johnson, State Treasurer of Arizona. Permit has been granted by the Arizona Corporation Commission.

A great oil boom is now on in Arizona. Take advantage of the 3c price and place your reservation by wire—at our expense—following with remittance. We predict 20c for these shares by the time the drill is down the first 500 feet.

Pay 3c now—entitling you to the immediate delivery of your certificate and you are under absolutely no obligations to pay the other 3c until the company strikes oil in paying quantities.

KINNEY (Wyoming)
With a daily production of over 2500 barrels—many wells drilling—a vast acreage and in excellent financial condition, has declined from $1.65 to 80c per share. This appears to have reached bottom and at present prices should be purchased immediately. Kinney should go to $2.00 in the future.

UNITED PETROLEUM

ADVANCE SALES CAN BE TAXED.

Tickets Sold in November and Used from Yesterday on Assessable.

Collector of Internal Revenue Carter has received a ruling in connection with the assessment and collection of the war emergency tax. It provides that all admission tickets sold prior to November 1, and used on or after December 15, are subject to the tax. A previous ruling held that if sold prior to November 1, they were not taxable. That has been revoked.

The ruling will apply to musical organizations, for instance, that have sold season tickets for a series of entertainments to be given at intervals during the season running into the spring months in some cases.

SHOPS WORKING AT FULL BLAST.

BIG SOUTHERN PACIFIC PLANT TURNING OUT A CAR EVERY HOUR.

With the new Southern Pacific shops in Los Angeles now in full working order, Supt. Whalen of that line announced yesterday that the local plant is more than living up to specification in the turning out of freight cars for war purposes.

A new car, he stated, is delivered in the Southern Pacific shops every fifty-four minutes, and within a short time the first order totaling $5,847,000 worth of new rolling stock will be well on its way to completion. The company has already completed the construction of thirty-six caboose cars and is building 500 flat cars, 2000 box cars and 2400 cars for the Pacific Fruit Express. Every one of these cars is of Los Angeles manufacture throughout.

The Griffin Car Wheel Company of Vernon turns out the wheels and delivers them rough cast to the Southern Pacific shops, where they are bored and mounted. California lumber is used for the cars.

The need for the cars is readily recognized when it is understood that 180,000 more cars of coal are required this year than last, due to war purposes, and that almost 3000 trains have already been used in handling the 1,250,000 United States soldiers now under arms, to say nothing of the heavy demands made by reason of additional manufacturing throughout the United States.

In the construction of cars the trucks are placed on the parallel tracks that run through the yards and as each step in the construction is completed the car is moved only its own length before a second stage in its construction is reached.

Not only is the Southern Pacific busy with the construction of freight cars, but it has already turned out the first complete engine ever constructed in Southern California.

Everyone

There are all kinds of farmers and all kinds of farming in the San Fernando Valley.

Every farm needs an irrigation system.

No farmer can afford to be without one.

If you are in Los Angeles, ask Wm. Mulholland, W. P. Whitsett, Harry Chandler, Thos. D. Campbell, Adamson Corporation, W. H. Hay, Ross Whitley, Stoddard Jess, L. A. Olive Growers' Asso., The Sunshine Co., etc.

If you are in the valley, call up some of your neighbors.

Better yet, go and see some of the systems.

You haven't any time to waste. If everybody wanted their systems put in at the same time, just before planting, we couldn't possibly put them all in.

Have yours installed now.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION

PROGRESS AND PRODUCTION

SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 16, 1917.

OUR FOUR-FOOTED SOLDIERS ON BATTLE FRONT AND FARM.

BY ANITA M. BALDWIN.

[The wonderful achievements of Anita M. Baldwin in the breeding of pure bred live stock are too well known to require comment, her great country estate, the Santa Anita Rancho, being one of the most famous breeding farms on the continent. As one of the leaders and guiding spirits of the American Red Star movement, she is working unceasingly for the establishment in France of base hospitals for the care of wounded horses and in the following article the need of such hospitals is appealingly set forth.—Ed.]

THERE are many persons in America today, most of them city dwellers, by the way, who think that because this is the age of machinery, the horse will soon be found only in zo-ological parks. This impression is undoubtedly heightened by the fact that work horses on farms are being so largely replaced with the modern farm tractor equipment, especially in the West. Those who are so calmly dooming the horse to extinction, however, are, either through ignorance or lack of real observation, losing sight of a very important fact—namely, that there are certain lines of work and sport that will always depend upon our equine friends.

The agriculturist and the stock man are still, and, in my opinion, ever will be dependent upon the work horse for certain lines of work which neither the tractor nor any other power mechanism can accomplish. It must be borne in mind that the farm of today is no longer the vast and unlimited extent of land it was in the days of the dons. This is the day of subdivision and of the one, two, three and five-acre "farms," if a plot of such size can be dignified with this title. It is the day of the truck gardener, the "little lander" and the home producer.

Even if profits would justify the purchase, a tractor would be out of place and impracticable on such a small patch of ground. Here the faithful old plow horse is still an indispensable factor in cultivation. In Southern California, where potatoes, beans, lettuce, tomatoes and other such crops are grown on a big scale, the horse is the most practical means for cultivating larger areas as well and it is only when it comes to the unusually large truck farms that the superiority of the tractor becomes apparent.

The horse and the tractor each has its place and its part to play in the world's work, and the function of each is most important. Neither, however, can in this day and age of the world be practically used for all purposes. One is as indispensable as the other in its field.

The stockman, for example, can't ride the range on a tractor. As long as there are cattle and sheep ranging over large areas, the ranchmen must have their saddle horses. In the world of sport, no machine can replace a mount of superb lines and character and the horse is rather more than coming back into his own among sportsmen, the stable having as much consideration on the average country estate of the man of means as the garage.

AT THE FRONT.

The United States Food Administration has told us over and over again that the war would be largely won on the farms of America, and we would indeed be in a bad way for food production were it not for the horse. One thing is certain—the world will never know or realize what the horse has meant to the Allied commands in a military way, in the prosecution of the war for civilization and democracy. This faithful friend and servant to man will never, can never receive full credit for his part in the inevitable overthrow of Prussianism.

It is the horse that hauls most of the food and ammunition to the soldiers in the trenches. It is the horse that drags the artillery across "No Man's Land" to shell the fleeing foe and the rear-line strongholds in which he takes refuge.

I have seen apparently reliable figures to the effect that there are today around 4,500,000 horses engaged in the war. One military writer has made the appalling statement that 47,000 horses are lost every month on the western front. In eight hours' fighting along a three-mile front at Verdun the French are declared to have lost over 5000 horses. And the horse, like the master, is the victim of "kultur." Three thousand horses in France died in one French camp as the result of eating American grain in which German spies operating in this country had placed great quantities of tiny steel brads.

America, with an army of 2,300,000 men, will require 750,000 horses to begin with and shipload after shipload to keep the force up to necessary strength. The total need will exceed a million a year under fighting conditions and, if the war continues for two or three years and our armies are largely increased, the demand for horses will increase proportionately.

HORSE VS. MACHINE.

Col. John S. Fair of the Quartermasters Corps in Washington, is quoted as saying recently that at least one animal is required for every four men in the service, exclusive of cavalry. There has been an idea that motor transportation had entirely taken the place of horses, but British and French officers have convinced the authorities in Washington that the horse and mule are absolutely essential for service along with the troops.

Regimental field trains—the "combat" train, the supply train and the ration section—must be animal drawn, and horses are necessary for the light artillery and for artillery hitherto regarded as heavy, up to the 6-inch guns. French officers declare that the men who have gone to the insane asylums in greatest numbers from the front are those who have tried to handle the innumerable kinds of motor transportation and to make repairs, supply spare parts and fuss with faulty or perverse mechanisms under fire.

A regiment of 6-inch guns is wanted to go to some place in a hurry and a shell comes along and knocks out a motor. It is impossible to get another motor right away and equally impossible to draw a gun with a part of the machinery. If a horse or mule is knocked out others can be brought in quickly, or the gun can be hauled by the animals left unhurt.

On the Texas-Mexican border light guns were to be seen whisking around on light automobiles. This method of transportation is impracticable in the present war areas. The only way to carry a light gun is to put it on some kind of a carrier that can go through woods, across hills, streams and ravines and over shell-pitted and trench-seamed fields.

"When you hear people talking about the horse and the mule being things of the past," says Col. Fair, "you can tell them that doesn't apply to war at least. There comes a time and a place in actual fighting when none of the inventions of man can take the place of animals. At the present time some of the man-

THE WINTER FIELD GARDENS OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

BY M. V. HARTRANFT.

IF YOU want to see what a great bread basket Southern California is becoming you should drive down Main street and across to Compton, where you will find along the highway, for twenty miles in angling directions, vast stretches of cauliflower, cabbage and carrots. Word came from the East late in August that climatic conditions had ruined their cabbage crop. Compton and South Los Angeles and Fullerton are doing the rest.

We used to issue pictures of calla lily fields to lure the eastern tourist and now we have miles of Food Administration pictures spread all over the face of the land of sunshine, fruit and cauliflowers.

INTERESTING FIGURES.

According to government records recently made, there are now planted and growing in Los Angeles, Orange and San Diego counties over 4500 carloads of cabbage. A few early cars will start moving next week. The heavy movement of our cabbage will be in March and April. In Los Angeles county, there are 5000 acres of cauliflower.

The cabbage and cauliflower crops are urgently in need of rain to perfect them. Some of the cauliflower is already shipping and growers are getting from 50 to 55 cents per dozen heads.

In Los Angeles county there are 3600 acres of lettuce growing in all stages of maturity. Shipments are brisk and growers are receiving 95 cents to $1.15 per crate of about four dozen heads.

In addition to this supply of lettuce, Imperial Valley has 2500 acres rapidly maturing, the first carloads of which started eastward last week. The continued warm days and absence of rain are affecting the firmness of the heads, but this will all be changed when more seasonable, climatic conditions prevail.

The yield of lettuce in California is quite variable, but 300 crates per acre of four dozen heads is considered normal. An Imperial Valley grower, who had sixty acres last year, shipped forty-three cars from the first thirty-four acres, but shipped only nine cars from the remaining twenty-six acres. Lettuce is a cold weather crop and the output of an acre diminishes as soon as the hot days begin to appear. The average production in Imperial Valley is about a half-car to the acre.

Fifteen hundred carloads of carrots in Los Angeles are up and promising a full yield.

Imperial Valley adds to the list about 1500 acres of peas; and 800 acres of winter tomatoes, which are already up and protected.

Coming from Sacramento River and Southern California points, there is also an output of 5500 carloads of celery, which is rolling eastward at the rate of thirty-five carloads per day. A fifth of this crop is shipped.

This is the midwinter offering of fresh vegetables on a commercial scale. In addition to this, every home garden in Southern California makes (or should make) its regular weekly planting of cabbage and cauliflower plants. For all who want to come for them, green onion sets may be had free from the supply that is furnished every Saturday morning at Exposition Park.

BUSY PREPARATIONS.

There is no break in the circle of our vegetable industries. Following the aforenamed contributions to the dinner tables of the nation will come the asparagus and berries of the later winter months.

The commercial seedsmen are now between seasons, but there is activity quite unusual in all departments. The new crop of seed is coming into the warehouses of this city and forehanded planters are already at the front counters of the seed stores with early orders to insure getting their supply.

Although the potato-planting season does not begin until the last half of January, some of the large growers have already ordered their seed. They will take it into their own warehouses and start the treating processes by which disease is averted. Trade interruption has taught many to be alert to the situation.

AS TO MACHINERY.

Machinery men complacently say that they have the situation well in hand, but they have not felt the pressure of the new season's business. Orders booked with eastern manufacturers may arrive on time and they may not. Where tools are needed, it will be wise to get them right now while the getting is good, and the extra parts should be carefully stocked up. In traction engine circles the most popular makes are already oversold.

Winter plowing is behind hand in all directions. Plowing operations for the January and February potato planting will be in full swing after the first copious showers have arrived.

Imperial Valley is not used to any material supply of natural rainfall and is therefore ready for operations. The first product to go in now is about 8000 acres of cantaloupes. This work is starting a little later than usual because the Japanese have been busy forming a co-operative marketing organization to handle their output. Possibly this organization may be perfected this week and operations will then begin at once. The seed for these melons is grown at Rocky Ford, Colo.

PLANT PROTECTORS.

Cutting Down the Infant Mortality Among Fowls.

WHAT'S HAPPENING TO THE POULTRY BUSINESS? BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

CARE OF CHICKS.

THERE is probably no one branch of the poultry business that demands more atention than the care of young hicks. With the advent of the day-ld-chick business it has assumed ot only a broader interest, but a ragic one. For of all the day-old hicks that are marketed every year large per cent. never reach even a usty youth as fowl life goes. gnorance of their proper care and ousing causes thousands to perish. Vere it otherwise with the present utput of commercial hatcheries the ountry over chickens would be as lenty as falling leaves in an Ocober forest. The trouble is not so uch in methods of packing and hipping as it is the treatment reeived after coming into possession the average purchaser of chicks retail numbers. This is no fault the chicks, is no reflection on e poultry industry, but it shows limited knowledge of what is reuired.

Day-old chicks are shipped in asteboard boxes, and if sent by xpress, are given extra care, so at they invariably reach points of estination in good shape. On aral they should be placed in the re of a broody hen, or else placed a "foster" mother (brooder) all ady for their reception, which ould be warmed to a temperature about 90 deg., and gradually lowed from day to day for about four eeks, when it should be about 75 g., which can be maintained for o or three weeks longer, when tificial heat may be discontinued. e that there is always sufficient at so that the birds will not owd, and yet have opportunity to t away from the heat. In fact, ey should have free access to cool well as warm air. The main thing to avoid overheating on the one nd and chilling on the other. Ventition must also be observed.

Feeds and feeding are important. here are preparatory poultry foods w on the market for every purse, both grain and mash mixtures, hich are not only a convenience to e blacklotter, but an economy. For e most part they are to be comended, and particularly those that ave maintained a high reputation overing a period of years. The regon station has attained good sults from the following formuas:

Starting food—Bran mixed crumly with soft-boiled egg, or stale read squeezed dry out of milk.

Grain mixture—One pound cracked heat, one pound cracked corn.

Mash mixture—Three pounds heat bran, one pound wheat midlings or shorts, one pound corn eal, pinch of salt added when mixg.

First feeding time (twenty-four to irty-six hours of age:)

First week—Starting food twice a ay; grain mixture three times a ay on clean sand; after two or three ays, grain in litter; clean water; rit, charcoal, cracked bone, in separate dishes; green food.

One to three weeks—One feed a ay of moist mash, what they will lean up in an hour; grain mixture litter two or three times a day; rit, charcoal, cracked bone and eef scrap in hoppers; water; green ood.

Three to six weeks—Morning feed f moist mash; two feeds of grain ixture; dry middlings in a hopper, signs of diarrhoea appear; hoppered beef scrap; water, grit, charcoal, racked bone, always available; milk drink; green food.

After six weeks or on range—orning meal of moist mash; two eeds of grain mixture; milk (or eef scrap,) charcoal, grit, bone, ater. Oats may be added to the rain mixture, if desired; the proortion of wheat may be increased r decreased as it becomes lower or igher in price than corn.

The one thing to do in rearing a ock of youngsters is to keep them "coming up" right along. This eans regular and wholesome feedng, physical comforts, cleanliness nd good sanitation, freedom from nsect foes and disease, and an enironment that insures security from isturbances and fright. It is the ontented bird that "amounts to omething." If there are any weakings in the flock, it is economy to estroy them at once. Nothing is nore irritating or unsatisfactory han a puny and ailing chicken.

Mating Up the Birds.

As the show season progresses and he spring months draw near, breeders and fanciers naturally direct heir attention to the breeding pen nd the mating up of their best irds for the purpose of providing ext season's output of young stock. n doing so, the experienced are actuated by two basic ideas, viz., rolificness and stamina and virility; to which may be added type and ther exterior points, such as good ead and leg characteristics and olor of plumage. To attain the irst considertion in a bird many refer to the record made by the trap est, while others to close observaion and type. And while the trap est is a sure guide, in so far as ecundity is concerned, that of itelf is not enough; there must also e a recognized ancestry, robust ealth, vigor, "pep" and "go." Other ings being equal, the cock bird at is alert, active, pugnacious and literally "the cock of the walk," will be found safe as a breeder. If he comes from a line of good laying hens, all the better. While we prefer hens recognized as good layers we are not over enthusiastic over the phenomenal bird that lays 275 to 300 eggs a year. Give us a female typical of the breed, robust and vigorous, with a laying record of from 160 to 185 eggs per year, with a parentage that does her credit in the same direction. High average production possesses a greater lure for us than the abnormal and phenomenal producer. Respecting the standard of perfection as a guide, we would eschew all specimens possessing showroom disqualifications and blemishes subject to discounts. Following these basic principles the inexperienced will not go far wrong in their mating operations.

The double mating system practiced with certain breeds in order to produce standard color markings in plumage we regard not only with disfavor, but as a menace to the prosperity of those breeds and varieties to which it applies. Granted, it has produced some beautiful specimens in both sexes, nevertheless, in the hands of beginners and amateurs, who have not the skill and experience to mate successfully, only disappointment follows, and negative criticisms of the breed results. The Barred Rock and Brown Leghorn have both been handled in this way with the result that one has merely maintained its place while the other has almost become obsolete. The mere idea that one must mate up certain males and females to produce pullets of standard requirements and then another mating to secure males to standard, is a system that should be condemned. If the requirements are abnormal and only possible under such a system, then the standard had better be changed. Nature does not produce her beautiful birds by any such methods. Japanese pheasants and many other variegated colored plumaged birds come true in both sexes by single mating. Then why try to improve on nature?

Lower Feeds Coming?

With governmental regulation on foods and supplies, it is difficult to say just how a lowering of prices is to be brought about, but that there is effort in this direction being made by the Washington authorities is evidenced by the fact that W. F. Priebe, poultry and egg member of the United States Food Administration, is quoted as saying in a letter that "we now anticipate that poultry feeds will drop to a point from 40 to 50 per cent. lower than during the late summer of 1917," and that Alfred R. Lee, animal husbandman in poultry investigation, expresses the conviction that we shall have at least a normal crop of poultry products during the coming season over that of 1917. This reads well and is not without encouragement; but what puzzles us is how is it to be brought about? Prof. Frederic H. Stoneburn, who was sent to Washington by the American Poultry Association to make an investigation, reports that he endeavored to learn from officials as to the approximate date upon which a decided drop in feed prices might reasonably be anticipated, pointing out the fact that such information would induce poultry breeders to retain the fowls they now have and thus insure an ample number of breeding birds for the next season. After consultation they decided that "full effect should be felt by grain purchasers about January 1," or a matter of only a few weeks from this writing. It was his impression that much depends upon the rapidity with which the 1917 grain crops can be moved and distributed.

It is an axiom of business that in proportion as a product increases in price there is also a corresponding reduction in its consumption and production. Particularly has this been emphasized in the poultry business; we are doing less hatching; there is a lessening demand for breeding stock; there is a declining market for day-old chicks; there is a "thinning out" of flocks and a general shrinkage all along the line. Are we to have cheaper feeding stuffs or higher prices for eggs and carcass? And if so, what are the economic condition that will bring it about? Surely no fiat of the government can induce people to follow the poultry business if it does not pay. We confess the atmosphere is somewhat hazy.

Conditions vs. Theories.

S. S. Knight, president of the Poultrykeepers' Association of Petaluma, has written a letter to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, detailing some of the hardships under which the poultry business is being operated at the present time. In view of the fact that Robert P. Slocum of the department is investigating the needs of the industry in California, Mr. Knight's data and observations are indeed timely. For instance, he calls attention to the fact that the poultrymen of his district are as energetic and patriotic as those of any other locality, but that they cannot operate their ranches at a loss over any considerable period of time. We learn that during the year 1916 the cost of keeping a hen in Petaluma was $1.95 (this being composed of the items of feed, $1.30; labor, 15 cents; maintenance of flock, 41 cents; depreciation of equipment, 7 cents; taxes and insurance, 2 cents.) Owing to the advance in the cost of labor and food materials, this cost of keeping a hen for the present year is $2.23 (this being composed of the items of feed, $2.30; labor, 20 cents; maintenance of flock, 64 cents; depreciation of equipment, 7 cents; insurance and taxes, 2 cents.) The prices for feed used in arriving at the above figures were those current in that district during the year 1916 and those which have prevailed there since January 1, 1917, of which a fair average would seem to be the market prices of November 15. All of the labor was figured upon the basis of $30 per month and $15 for the board of an able-bodied and trained man for 1916, while for 1917 these figures become $40 and $20 respectively.

Egg prices have shown an increase this year over last of 6.8 cents per dozen, or 25 per cent. We believe that Petaluma flocks on an average produce 10 dozen eggs per hen annually where the hens are given good care and attention. Thus the profit which the rancher enjoyed in 1916 was 73 cents per hen, but in 1917 this had shrunk to 13 cents per hen, or a reduction of over 80 per cent.

In conclusion, Mr. Knight says that there are probably between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000 invested in the poultry industry in the vicinity of the San Francisco Bay cities, and that the entire industry is seriously jeopardized unless relief comes quickly. This relief will have to result in either one of two things, or in both, viz.: The lowering of the prices which the poultrymen have to pay for the feed for their flocks or an advance in the prices which they receive for their eggs. In other words, the poultry industry, in order to live, must yield a profit to the men who operate it.

Cause and Effect.

Mrs. J. F. S., Monrovia, writes of her poultry troubles as follows: "My chickens have spots on combs and ear lobes which are of a yellowish color; also a watery discharge from nostrils, while some have canker sores and cheesy growth in roof of mouth and eyes. What is the cause and a remedy?"

The symptoms described are those of diphtheritic roup, one of the dreaded diseases of poultry due to bacilli, which is the result of filthy surroundings, bad ventilation and drafty houses. Many breeders do not doctor for it, but use the ax on the ailing birds; others believe in remedial measures. Segregate the ailing from the healthy ones, remove to dry, clean, well-ventilated quarters free from drafts of air. There are a number of remedies to be had of the poultry supply houses, which often afford relief. Dr. D. E. Salman, a recognized authority on poultry diseases, recommends a 2 per cent. solution of carbolic acid to affected parts, give tonics, and disinfect poultry houses with carbolic acid solution (5 per cent.) and lime wash; isolate the sick birds. Once in possession of a flock, roup is difficult to eradicate, hence quick action is important.

L. A. W., San Gabriel, says that he has a White Leghorn cockerel of fine shape and comb, but his ear lobes are very yellow in tint. "Is that a sign that his pullets will be poor layers?" he asks.

As a general thing, we like to breed to birds reasonably free from blemishes, particularly if of a hereditary nature. If the bird comes from a good laying strain, and eggs are the leading consideration, we can see no great harm in mating him to females of well-known productiveness. The chances are the progeny would possess good laying qualities.

PIN FEATHERS.

Tonics and stimulants have their place, but it is a mistake to classify them as foods for poultry any more than for people.

Clean nests in a secluded situation will not only induce contentment, but avoid hidden ones which are often not discovered until their contents have attained some age.

Hen fruit should have a good shell; if frail it will not stand handling nor carriage.

Meat foods must be fresh and free from taint, especially if they are to be fed to young stock. Nothing will upset a flock of growing chicks quicker than spoiled meat.

Irregular feeding of hens, frequently causes derangement of the digestive organs, resulting in impaired health and fewer eggs.

In selecting eggs for shipping by mail, thin-shelled and unusually long or irregular shaped eggs should be avoided. Each egg should be wrapped in sufficient paper to hold it snugly in its own individual compartment in the container.

Getting winter eggs should be easier in California than in the regions of ice and snow. Comfortable quarters, wholesome feeding and plenty of work (scratching) will almost solve the problem.

Every egg sent to market should be guaranteed pure and fresh. This does not imply, however, that after leaving the ranch it will reach the ultimate consumer in that condition. Hen fruit is quite as apt to attain a "strong" age in store and warehouse as it is on the ranch.

He who squanders time wastes life. Aim to simplify your poultry operations, save steps and time by co-ordinating your operations; never run about the place empty handed; keep both hands and arms busy.

The world's previous record of 303 eggs for a hen's laying for one year has been broken by three leading hens in the single test in connection with the Bendigo (Victoria, Australia) Poultry Society's egg-laying competition. A White Leghorn secured first honors with 315 eggs, and another second with 313, while a Black Orpington was third with 303 eggs."

T. H. Bowen of Santa Ana, writes of a double-yolked egg produced by one of his White Minorca hens that weighed five and one-eighth ounces and was seven and a half inches at the center and eight and five-eighths inches in circumference. He has a flock of about 300 hens and this is the largest hen's egg produced in the sixteen years that he has bred poultry.

FARM NEWS FROM THE BROAD FIELD. IN PARAGRAPHS.

VAN NUYS.—About three months ago a group of bean growers in the San Fernando Valley called a meeting to consider the advisability of organizing co-operative bean growers' associations. Upon invitation, the State Market Director and the manager of the California Lima Bean Growers' Association attended this meeting. After discussing the matter thoroughly, the bean growers attending decided that it was wise and desirable to organize two local bean growers' associations to affiliate with the California Lima Bean Growers' Association, which is a nonprofit, purely co-operative marketing organization. Since the majority of the bean growers in the valley had contracted their 1917 crops, the new associations were to commence with the 1918 crop. Now that the busy season is over, it is desired that the organizations be completed, and that, if possible, the membership be made to include practically all the bean growers of the San Fernando Valley. For this purpose a public meeting is called at the bean warehouse in Owensmouth at 2 o'clock p.m., Wednesday, December 19, and a like meeting at the Vanomar Producers' Cannery in this city at 7:30 o'clock in the evening of the same day. Officers of the local associations and Messrs. Perkins, Edwards and Churchill of the State association will be present to answer questions regarding co-operative marketing, and to explain why, under existing conditions, co-operative marketing associations should appeal to farmers more than ever before.

SAN BERNARDINO.—Development of a big tract of virgin land recently purchased from the Severance property, a few miles north of the city, started this week with the arrival of a large outfit of the M. A. Newmark Grain Company of Los Angeles. This company has secured 1000 acres in the shadow of the foothills of the San Bernardino Mountains and has started breaking 400 acres of ground for the planting of barley. E. D. Meers of Los Angeles has charge of the development work and is employing a tractor to break ground. After the first 400 acres is turned under and the seed planted, work will be started to break the rest of the tract. While hay and grain will be planted first, it is intended eventually to put the entire property into citrus and deciduous orchards. A contractor from Los Angeles is sinking the first of the three artesian wells that will go down on the 1000 acres. The well will have a shaft extending down eighty feet, and below that mark a twenty-six-inch casing will be used. The tractor is breaking ground at the rate of ten acres a day.

VISALIA.—Six thousand head of sheep, the first lot of more than 30,000 animals to be sent here, are being educated into a liking for beet pulp. The animals are confined in specially-built corrals near a local sugar factory, where a small mountain of the odoriferous food has been piled up. The sheep have no fondness for beet pulp at the outset, and the material is disguised in many ways preliminary to being fed to them as an exclusive diet. Range sheep are being fed for the block for a packing concern in San Francisco.

BRAWLEY.—Members of the Imperial County Farm Bureau have sent a message of protest to Food Administrator Merritt, regarding the low price of hogs. As representative of the largest hog-raising section in California, the directors insisted that the price of hogs was too low, considering the high cost of grain. The directors in their resolution of protest asked Mr. Merritt and Mr. Hoover to fix the price of hogs on a basis of eight pounds of barley to one pound of pork. The present price of hogs here is around 15 cents. This price is declared to be too low, as the cost of barley is about 3 cents per pound.

WASCO.—Machinery for the rice mill which is to be built here by an association of rice growers has been delivered and contractors are engaged in laying the cement foundations for the equipment. Within a short time the rice association is to be incorporated, the activities of the company to include not only milling of their product, but co-operative purchasing of needed supplies.

EL CENTRO.—Farmers in Imperial Valley are receiving an average of 44 per cent. increased prices for their products, while labor has gone up 12 per cent. and land rental 18 per cent., all compared with this time a year ago. Cotton, which represents almost half the value of all farm products raised here, has increased in price 52 per cent. and cottonseed 41 per cent.; milo maize, 43 per cent.; hay, 53 per cent.; hogs, 66 per cent.; sheep, 66 per cent.; lambs, 75 per cent.; butter fat, 26 per cent.; cattle, 28 per cent. The Farm Adviser's forecast of the cotton crop, from "a hurried inquiry," is 83,785 bales, now worth $12,567,750. This does not include more than 50,000 acres on the Mexican side of the valley. The cottonseed is worth $2,890,000 additional, the cotton industry bringing the farmers of the valley $15,457,750.

BANNING.—The congested railway traffic throughout the country, coupled with the fact that box shook is practically unobtainable, is given as a reason for an almost total absence of buyers of dried fruit in this city. Banning prunes were being asked for at 6¾ cents, but dropped to 6½ cents. Now no figure at all is quoted for prunes. There is quite a large tonnage unsold in this city. Some growers held off with the hope that the price would go to 7 cents.

REDLANDS.—George M. McDonald, one of the well-known bee men of this county, has perfected and is manufacturing here an artificial honeycomb, which he declares will prevent disease in the broods, and result in the saving of thousands of pounds of honey in Southern California. Mr. McDonald for several years lost a large percentage of his honey crop through foul brood, and for some time has been working on this frame. Strips of rolled steel are used in the making of the frame, and these are put through a stamping machine, which shapes the steel strips in the nature of a honeycomb. The strips are welded together by an electric welding machine, and the frame when completed is 17½x8 inches. It weighs but seven ounces and is so compact that nineteen frames can be placed in each hive.

PORTERVILLE—Promise of a new California industry is given in experiments which have been conducted in the Porterville district in the bottling of pomegranate juice. A. W. Patton, who owns a large acreage of the fruit, has put up a small commercial output of the juice and will put it on the market experimentally. The juice is nearly the color of that of Concord grapes, the flavor of which it approximates closely. A large number of pomegranates split during the ripening process and these are unfit for shipping. As they are, however, available for the manufacture of the juice, the new process may add materially to the gross profits from the groves. Returns, which are now in for practically all consignments of pomegranates hereabouts show a grand average price of 8 cents a pound, or at the rate of around $350 net to the growers from groves seven years old and over. The total value of the crop from this immediate district was about $20,000 for the season.

EL CENTRO.—Imperial county has passed Stanislaus in butterfat production, and now leads the State in dairy products, according to information received by County Farm Adviser Sullivan from the University of California. This county has shipped more than 9,000,000 pounds of butter thus far this year. A compilation of this year's crops in the valley shows that this county also leads all others in the value of farm products sold, with the exception of three citrus counties, Los Angeles, Orange and San Bernardino.

SAN JACINTO—W. S. Conduit, Redlands, who for several months has been experimenting with the guayle, or Mexican rubber plant, has leased 120 acres of land near San Jacinto and will put it out to this plant. He has an ample supply of plants from his nursery at Hemet to place on the land. He has a large acreage of the same plant now maturing near Hemet, another acreage in San Diego county and one in Arizona and he is determined to discover whether it can be made commercially profitable. It is said that the plant when it matures, which is in four years, is 20 per cent. pure rubber and that this is easily extracted. It will grow without irrigation and needs but little care. It can, it is declared, be raised on land where nothing else can be grown with success. It is proposed to build a factory at Hemet to extract the rubber from the plant.

TULARE—During the past eleven months the Tulare Co-operative Poultry Association has done a gross business of more than $130,000, according to the report of I. N. Foss, manager, to the board of directors. Mr. Foss's figures show that during the month of November, just closed, the business of the association reached $9761, or almost double that of November, one year ago.

RIVERSIDE—The condition of one of the parent navel orange trees, brought to this country from Bahia, Brazil, and secured by Riverside from the Department of Agriculture in 1874, is giving the board of park commissioners grave concern. One of the two original trees, from which California's navel orange industry sprang, undeniably looks sick, and the board today determined to appeal to a number of experts for a diagnosis of the tree and the soil conditions which environ it. Dr. H. J. Webber of the State citrus experiment station will be asked for a soil analysis, and the other experts who have been asked to inspect the tree comprise A. D. Shamel of the Department of Agriculture; F. A. Little of the Riverside Orange Company, and Burdette K. Marvin of the Rumsey estate.

ORANGE—Work is progressing rapidly on the new brick packing-house and precooling plant of the Santiago Association, and the building will be ready for use in about thirty days. The plant will be up to date and it is said will be second to none other in the State. Fruit will be precooled before shipment is made, and the building will be large enough to accommodate several hundred persons during the packing season.

TORRANCE—The bean crop for the Torrance and Wilmington district is now all in and, according to Nat Black, the general manager of the Torrance Milling Company, more than 100,000 sacks of beans were produced. This represents an increase of 25,000 sacks over last year. Two-thirds of the crop is lima beans. The increase in the bean production is due to the increase in the bean acreage and not to a larger crop. The crop in reality is but 75 per cent. normal. The bean acreage for next year will be increased by one-third, according to the investigation made by Mr. Black, and if the crop next year is normal, about 180,000 sacks of beans can be expected from the district. The quality of the beans was very good this year despite the fact that the crop was below normal.

MANY USES FOR CONCRETE ON THE UP-TO-DATE FARM.

BY REGINALD BRINSMEAD.

CONCRETE may well be classed with electricity and the gas engine as a factor in modernizing country life. Conservation and concrete have become synonymous on the up-to-date farm, for the up-to-date farmer is more than convinced that concrete spells both permanence and increased profits.

The growth of the Portland cement industry on the Coast, and in the entire country, in fact, has come within the past generation. Twenty, even fifteen years back the use of concrete in the Southwest was limited, and the contractor more often than not found imported cement specified in his contract with municipality, county or individual—the home product had not yet come into its own. In those days local cement was ever looked at askance, but today, thanks to its excellence and the moderate price at which it can be bought, it is used everywhere, and the imported cement has disappeared.

But, although concrete has come to be of the most common use in the cities, the real value, the multitude of uses to which it can be put, the ease with which it can be handled, are even now but really beginning to be appreciated by the rank and file of farmers in the Southwest. Concrete on the farm is fast becoming one of the most potent of aids to the back-to-the-farm movement, for it spells increased comfort, conservation of farm resources, reduction of many lines of arduous and disagreeable labor, increased profits and crops—raising the standard of living and the pleasures of country life.

ITS MANY USES.

These do not seem such big claims to make when one considers the thousand and one uses to which concrete is daily put in country life, and the thousand and one new uses which the farmer is daily finding for it, and what it would mean if it were suddenly to disappear from off the face of the earth. The stock raiser, the fruit grower, the dry farmer, the irrigation farmer, the dairy farmer, the homecrofter and the man with the domain of thousands of acres all are finding use for concrete. It takes the place of wood, steel and stone from the laying of the front walk to the building of the 400-ton silo—and, what means so much to every farmer, can be handled by himself and his help, with ordinary farm tools, whenever time offers. The farmer himself can do more with cement than he can with any other one material without calling in the aid of outside and generally very costly, labor.

The uses of concrete are legion, both in country and town. On the irrigated farm it starts at the pumping plant or headgates of the irrigation canal, lines the main canal and main storage reservoirs, and the water is finally delivered to the orchard or field through cement-lined laterals or cement pipe lines to the measuring hydrant. The distributing system, open flume, or underground pipe lines with delivery hydrants, are of concrete, and to one who has ever used the wooden irrigating flume in orchard or field, its replacement by cement comes as a veritable Godsend.

The driveway leading to the modern ranch house from the concrete boulevard is frequently of concrete. The foundations of the house are generally of the same material, and sometimes the house itself. Walks between house and barn, fence posts, curbings, barn, stable and garage floors, milk-house, manure pit, poultry houses, lawn and yard roller, poultry, cattle and horse troughs, pig wallows, duck pools, all are as like as not concrete on the modern farm.

For gate posts, culverts and wind-walls concrete replaces wood, resulting in permanence where continual repairs once were found necessary. For hotbeds and cold frames and for trash burners, cement is invaluable; in fact, the uses for which concrete is adapted are without end and only limited by the ingenuity and needs of the individual.

ITS VALUE NOW.

Concrete construction on the southwestern farm becomes doubly invaluable by reason of the scarcity of lumber and iron, and the long distances they must be hauled at a time when all transportation systems are taxed to their limit by the military needs of the country. Not only are Portland cement plants to be found well scattered all over the whole country, thus doing away with any very long hauls, but concrete only contains about one-seventh of its bulk of cement, and the sand and gravel comprising the balance of the mixture can almost invariably be found within hauling distance of the ranch team. Furthermore, and at this time an important factor, by replacing lumber and iron, concrete conserves the country's supplies of these important war materials for more vital needs.

Concrete is a conserver of both fertilizer and food. The concrete manure pit will double the value of the winter manure pile. Concrete floors, cribs and silos are proof against rats and mice, thus eliminating an enormous amount of waste over the usual wooden construction. Concrete, by the ease with which it can be kept clean, is a great health preserver by doing away with breeding places for flies and disease germs.

Following is a partial list of construction uses to which concrete is now being put on Southern California farms: Alleyways, barns, barn approach, barn floor, barn foundation, barnyard pavements, base for machinery, washing floor, cellar steps and hatchway, chimney, chimney caps, cistern covers, cisterns, cold frame, corn crib floor, cow barn floors, culverts, dairy, dipping vats and tanks, drinking troughs and tanks, drop gutters, duck pond, engine or pump house, farm buildings, feed cooker, feeding floors, feeding troughs, racks and mangers, fence posts, field and lawn rollers, garbage receiver, granary floors, hen house, hens' nests, hitching post, hog wallow, irrigating canals and laterals, horse barn floor, hot bed, manure pits, irrigating flumes, hydrants and pipe lines, milk house, milk vat, retaining walls, sanitary water supply, septic tanks, sidewalks, silos, spraying tanks, survey monuments, tool house, trash burner, tree repair, well cover and wind walls.

EASY TO HANDLE.

There is no mystery in the use or making of concrete; unskilled labor can build with concrete easier and better than with wood, while to replace iron, concrete can be used on the farm where iron must be manufactured in factory or shop.

Concrete is a manufactured or artificial stone, made by mixing together Portland cement, sand and stone (or gravel.) Various proportions of each are used, depending upon the use to which it is to be put. About half an hour after mixing these materials together the mass begins to stiffen, until, within half a day to a day, it becomes so hard that you cannot dent it with the hand. By a month the mass is hard like stone, in fact, harder and more durable than most stones.

There is not a farm in the Southwest which would not be improved by the use (or additional use) of concrete . . . and there are thousands which have never seen a sack of cement on the place. The extent to which it can be used, however, will be governed largely by the availability and quality of the necessary materials — sand and gravel.

SOME POINTERS.

The following points must be born in mind when selecting these ingredients:

Sand—Do not use very fine sand. If, however, the handiest sand is very fine obtain a coarse sand and mix the two together in equal parts. This mixture is as good as coarse sand alone. If only fine sand is available additional cement must be used—sometimes as much as double the amount ordinarily needed. For example, in such a case, instead of using concrete one part cement, two parts sand and four parts gravel or stone, use a concrete one part cement, one part sand and two parts stone. In addition to being coarse, sand should be clean, that is, free from vegetable matter.

This is known as the "coarse aggregate" of concrete. Great care should be taken in its selection. The pebbles should be closely inspected to see that there is no clay on their surface, as a layer of such clay prevents the binding of the cement. If need be, the gravel should be washed. Dust may be left in crushed rock or stone without fear of its interfering with the strength of the cement, but care should be taken that it is evenly distributed throughout the whole mass, and when much is present slightly less sand should be used.

With regard to the size of stone or gravel, this varies with the character of the work. For foundations or any large, thick structure, use anything from one-half to two and one-half inches in diameter; for thin walls, one-fourth to one-inch stone. The best results are obtained by using a

The Machine Age of Farming.

NEW AND BETTER METHODS. BY H. A. CRAFTS.

TO THE farmers and food producers of California, this is the dawn of the golden era. Already the sun of prosperity has risen above the eastern horizon, and is casting its genial rays over farm, ranch, garden, orchard and vineyard.

The year 1917 has given a good account of itself, not only in things done but in things promised. Bountiful harvests are being garnered; high prices for all kinds of food products prevail; an active market exists, and the movement of all crops is going on just as rapidly as the means of transportation will permit.

Two things only have militated against the rapid transfer of the great crop of 1917 from field to market—the scarcity of farm help, and the congestion of railroad traffic in consequence of war demands.

But, fortunately, the harvest season has been an ideal one, and the farmers and orchardists, by one means and another, are securing their harvests in good condition, and with comparative little wastage.

And it is a reassuring reflection to consider the bountiful crops being harvested in spite of an unfavorable growing season. An early dry spring was followed by a hot summer, two conditions calculated to stunt the growth of vegetation.

But with an increased acreage of nearly all lines of farm crops; improved farm methods; a speeding up of all the factors of farm activity, and a wide application of irrigation have combined to produce one of the greatest harvests in the history of the State.

GOOD MARKETS.

Above this local condition looms largely the unusual and unprecedented demands of the world's markets. This phase of the situation holds out a promise of farm prosperity, not only for tomorrow, but for years to come.

In fact, the farmers of the country are to be, in a large sense, the arbiters of the world's destiny. The farmers are going to be the ruling class. Today the gold of the world, and the credit of nations are being laid at their feet.

As to concrete phases, what of the day and what of the hour? It needs but a glance across the agricultural perspective to be assured of a prevailing condition of transformation. It is not a renaissance merely, but the dawn and morning of a new era.

THE MACHINE AGE.

One thing is certain—the machine age of California agriculture has arrived. Blood and brawn of both man and beast are giving place to the power of gas and the ingenuity of man.

Let us take a look into the great San Joaquin Valley and observe some of the radical, vital changes that today are taking place. Here is the domain of the original bonanza farmer. Here were the great wheat fields that, back in the 70's, made California the leading wheat-growing State in the Union.

As late as 1896 California in a single year produced 45,097,195 bushels of wheat. The lowest ebb of wheat production come in 1912, when California had only 4,200,000 bushels to her credit.

But because California lost her prestige as a wheat-raising State it must not be inferred that she lost her prestige as a grain-raising State. Of late years she has switched sharply to barley raising, and in the year 1916 rolled up to her credit the magnificent total of 46,500,000 bushels of that cereal. And her annual barley product is still very large, this year's crop being expected to reach above 35,000,000 bushels.

This implies that California is still a great grain-raising State, but there may be possible changes in the methods of raising grain. And right here are changing phases.

TRACTOR PLOWING.

The great twelve and fourteen-horse and mule teams that have for years dotted the landscape, slowly wending their way from field side to field side, pulling a nest of gang plows through the yielding soil, are slowly disappearing from the scene, the mules oftimes being sent to Europe to help pull the Allied big guns through the mud.

And the place of these teams is being taken by the modern farm tractor, the world's new bread-winner. This means that the land is plowed better and deeper; that the acreage of cultivated land may be largely and easily increased; and that the process of harrowing, seeding, cultivation and harvesting may be greatly facilitated and rendered easier of performance. Thus a vast increase in production will be accomplished almost as if by magic.

OLD METHODS WASTEFUL.

The old methods of grain raising in California have been wasteful and ruinous. Year after year the same land has been cropped to the same cereal, the land having no manuring and no rest, save in the way of an occasional summer fallow.

The land was seldom plowed more than five inches deep, and often not more than three inches deep. The consequence was that the top soil became exhausted; a hard pan, formed by constant plowing, not only prevented a proper conservation of natural moisture, but also prevented the roots of the growing grain from penetrating the earth to a sufficient depth to get the full benefit of the soil's fertility.

The consequence was that the average yield per acre fell to a low level, and the minimum yield to a point below cost of production. Some fields fell to an average of eight bushels to the acre.

A LABOR SAVER.

But all that seems now destined to be changed. A single tractor does the work formerly performed by forty horses or mules, and needs but a single driver, while the forty animals required four or five.

Moreover, the farm tractor is not a creature of flesh and blood. It is of steel mechanism and the propelling power mere gas. The machine neither eats nor sleeps, and if properly taken care of, needs but few repairs, and endures for years.

It may be worked night and day straight through the twenty-four hours, needing only a change of drivers every eight hours. At night it produces its own light and plods through the dusky hours regardless of time and climatic conditions, tearing off the furrows with undeviating regularity.

NEW FARMS UNCOVERED.

With this powerful engine the plows may be plunged beneath the old plow hardpan, the same ripped up, and a new stratum of virgin soil turned up for the new crop. Thus a whole new farm is acquired, by the simple process of plowing.

In harrowing and cultivating the upturned soil the farm tractor exhibits the same ability. A single tractor will easily draw an assemblage of harrows with ninety-foot sweep and will cover 240 acres in a single day.

Thus the land is prepared for the seeding in the best possible shape. The new tilth is deep and well pulverized and lightened, and lies in the very best condition for receiving the winter rains, and for retaining the moisture thus deposited.

The use of the farm tractor after the manner described has resulted in great increase of yield per acre, an increase in some cases ranging as high as 50 per cent. At the same time the grain produced under the new process is found to be of a greatly improved quality.

TRACTOR VERSATILITY.

This is the machine that is today revolutionizing the farm and horticultural methods of California! Its capacity for amount and variety of duty is remarkable. The tractor will plow, harrow, seed and harvest crops; haul them to market; furnish power to pump water, saw wood, thresh, fill silos, level, drain and reclaim waste land; pull stumps, lift boulders; move buildings, raise tank frames, pull out old orchards and no end of other stunts.

BETTER METHODS.

Another feature showing the progressive spirit that has seized upon the old-time California farmer is the fact that he is changing his crop methods. He has awakened to the realization that irrigation and a rotation of crops are important factors in farm success.

So today, you see all over the San Joaquin Valley, the sinking of deep wells, the installation of pumping plants, and the deep green of growing alfalfa cutting great square chunks out of the old and time-honored grain fields. This means more meat, milk, butter and cheese, and greater relative profits for the farmer.

TRACTOR COURSE AT RIVERSIDE.

With the supply scanty, both of labor and of food for the nation's needs, every possible endeavor should be made to replace human and horse labor on the farm, where conditions make this change practicable, with the work of the marvelously efficient farm tractors American ingenuity has devised. Such is the opinion of the University of California. To hasten the coming of the motor age on the farm, the university, during the latter part of February, will conduct a tractor short course at the Citrus Experimental Station, maintained by the university at Riverside. Such a tractor course held recently at the university farm at Davis, was attended by 184 persons, most of them practical ranchers, and many of them men of middle age and themselves well-to-do land owners. They came from every part of California, and some even registered from Pennsylvania, from Chicago, from Mexico and from Peru.

The experts in agricultural engineering of the university and the demonstrators sent by a number of different factories will give talks and demonstrations during the short course at Riverside on how to use motor tractors economically, how to care for ignition systems, lubrication, valve timing, the repair and maintenance of tractors, and how to make the tractor of the greatest efficiency in obtaining deep tillage and improving farming methods. Each man enrolled will have actual practice in adjusting carburetors, testing gas engines, assembling a tractor, and operating various types of this machine.

No other field crop is so sensitive to interference with its lateral roots as corn, which depends on them not only for bracing, but as well for most of its soil food. The cultivation should be done so as not to cut the side roots, and the same precaution must be observed in working a cover crop in growing corn.

TO CARRY BIG LINE.

The Frost Farm Machinery Company, which is to carry a big line of farm machinery and tractors, has just been opened at No. 164 North Los Angeles street. E. P. Frost, who is at the head of the concern, has had twenty-five years' experience in the implement line on the Pacific Coast. He was for five years with the Thompson Diggs Company of Sacramento, and for five years with the John Deere Plow Company in Portland. He was manager of the Boise Idaho branch of the John Deere Plow Company. For the last two years he has been on the road as Southern California representative of the John Deere Plow Company of San Francisco.

TRACTOR ROW.

Mr. Henderson of the Bean Spray Pump Company is at present in Indio in the interest of the Bean Trackpull tractor.

George B. Miller, president of the Waterloo Gas Engine Company, manufacturing Waterloo Boy tractors, is in Los Angeles to spend the winter months.

The Los Angeles Auto Tractor Company is now putting out a new model, inclosed-gear type. Representatives of the company state it is about two weeks behind in orders at the present time.

The C. S. Anthony Company is handling a unique motor cultivator which is attracting a good deal of attention. The Avery Manufacturing Company was one of the first to realize the advantages in a combination tractor and cultivator.

William Rabb of the Dauch Manufacturing Company is in Imperial Valley in the interest of the Sandusky tractor. Three carloads of Sandusky machines will soon go to the Imperial district.

F. T. Briles, who has been handling different makes of tractors for the last twelve or fourteen years in Southern California, states that the Cleveland Tractor Company of Cleveland, O., will deliver 150 tractors of the new model in this city between now and March. He expects to have the new Bates steel mule tractors in stock some time in February or March.

Some few days ago the Federal government sent out the following to the farm press of the country: "The United States Department of Agriculture wishes every farmer to understand the importance of doubling our poultry production next year. It is a vital part of the general food production campaign, and that campaign must be carried out in all its details to insure victory in this war. We cannot increase any of the meat animals as rapidly or as economically as poultry. The humble hen can play a prominent part in preventing the progress of the Prussian peril. The quickest and cheapest way of adding to our meat supplies is to increase poultry and egg production." All of which is quite true; but what troubles the poultry farmer is that present prevailing high prices for his feeding stuffs compared to market returns for his product, leaves him no margin, much less any inducement to grow more poultry products. Quite to the contrary, there is a lessening demand for day-old chicks, hatching eggs and breeding specimens. Give the hen a running chance, and she certainly will do her share to win the war, but unless she can make it interesting to her manager we are afraid but little will be accomplished.

WHEATLESS DAYS FOR CHICKENS.

Speaking in behalf of western poultrymen, Prof. James Dryden, poultry specialist of the Oregon Agricultural College, declares that an [illegible] wheat.

The United States Department of Agriculture has been feeding wheatless poultry ration in its regular experimental work at Beltsv Md., with results comparing fav ably with egg yields secured on tions containing wheat. The whe less ration is as follows:

SCRATCH MIXTURE—2 pou cracked corn, 1 pound oats.

DRY MASH—3 pounds corn m 1 pound beef scrap.

The scratch mixture and mash were used in about eq quantities. A flock of thirty L horn pullets fed this wheatless tion produced an average of 14 eggs apiece during their first lay year, showing that wheat is not sential for egg laying.

THAT FERTILIZER PROBLEM. BY THOS. C. WALLACE.

BEFORE getting too deep into the discussion of the admitted essentials of commercial fertilizers, a few words will not be amiss about the so-called nonessentials and the chemical and physical action of water as they affect the problem. The use of commercial fertilizers is advanced, if not actually intensive farming.

That farming cannot be called intensive, nor that fertilizing scientific or rational, which allows of the application of fertilizers on the hit or miss plan, or fails to take into consideration the requirements of each crop in the characteristic elements which govern the quality of its produce. How often it is pointed out that one farmer produces excellent quantity and quality of crops by the simple use of stable manure, while another using similar methods of culture, with the same material or fertilization, makes unmarketable or decaying produce.

A knowledge of the mineral requirements of the crops and of the soils in question can reveal the cause of this dissimilar result. There must, however, be a period when some available mineral or minerals essential to the characterization of the crop in question becomes exhausted of its availability, and with that period the quality of the crop will decline, or at least change, and then special fertilization or change of crop becomes requisite. It will be observed from this that the balance or carrying portion of the fertilizer (which amounts to approximately 70 to 80 per cent. of the whole, there not being more than 20 to 30 per cent. of alleged plant food in a ton,) is not so indifferent to the grower, but it is often really the ruling consideration in the selection by a fertilizer.

Fertilizers and Soil.

It has usually been taken for granted that the soil presents to the plant in profusion all the elements except nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium, so that these have been looked upon as comprising the whole complement of the requirements of complete fertilizers. Chemical fertilization, however, falls far short of a science if thus limited. If the quantity of all the soil elements, including the nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium, in ordinary farm soils, be gauged against the total requirements of the crops, we find them far beyond the possible crop needs; nevertheless, the crops fail because of the limited availability of the soil content of these elements.

Why not then apply the same reasoning to the other elements, which, while not necessary to protoplasm, are so decidedly potential in characterizing and qualifying produce? This is what we really do when we choose this or that soil for the exploiting of distinctive crops, but by applying the same reasoning to artificials, they may be made to modify crops in all arable soils. In a pure quartz medium we can meet the requirements of any crop with special fertilizers, and by an intimate knowledge of the soil, and of the requirements of the plant to produce certain desired qualities, we can as surely and as intelligently direct the fertilization to our benefit.

Feeding Value of Water.

As water consists of two of the important elements of protoplasm, hydrogen and oxygen, and is the source of the bulk of these elements utilized by plant life, it is essential to plant life from its chemical composition alone. As protoplasm is the first physical evidence of life in a plant, water is a supplier of hydrogen and oxygen is a first necessity to life action, as these are primary elements of plant nutrition. A portion of the required oxygen is taken by plants from the air during respiration, as is evidenced by the development of some plants under increased oxygen pressure, but the major part comes from the water absorbed.

The fact that plants contain 90 to 93 per cent. water, emphasizes its importance in considering the feeding of our crops. Living vegetable matter may exist under some conditions with only 5 or 6 per cent. of water in it, but when less than that is present death is pretty sure to follow promptly. It may be said that the relations of water to the organism are a very potent factor in determining its form and structure and its size, as the structure of the organs of absorption and respiration responds directly to the water relations of the plant. A long continued exposure of some species of plants to a moist or arid condition results in adaptations suitable to their endurance of changed conditions.

For instance, a plant used to arid or semi-arid conditions will develop fine-ribbed, ribbon-shaped foliage if heavily supplied with water, while a plant used to moist or humid climate, if deprived of water, will develop thick or broad leaves. The reason for this is that the plant in a dry climate needs large succulent leaves to provide water storage for the needs of its fruit and growth, while with a superfluity of moisture at the disposal of the roots it does not require much storage of water in the leaves, and hence disposes with the extra leaf space. It is on the principle that unused organs shrink and finally almost or entirely disappear. These outward changes are accompanied by inward adaptations, and usually result in a correspondingly changed condition of the fruit or produce of the plant.

Physical Action of Water.

Water exerts a physical action in keeping the cells of the plant turgid, or distended, and unless this condition is maintained, respiration ceases by the collapse of the stomata, and one supply of oxygen is shut off. If in constant supply, water promotes growth by keeping the cells of the plants turgid and stretching, which is one of the means the plant has of enlarging. Water is the universal carrier of plant food from the roots of the plants to the stem and leaves. Coming up from the soil in hot weather and being cooler than the atmosphere, water modifies the heat in the plant and thus prevents its destruction by sun heat.

In cold weather the water in the soil, if warmer than the air above it, in entering the plant preserves it from cold. In hot and cold weather the air is thinner and drier, and with the accelerated evaporation from the exposed surfaces of the plant, the water is rapidly drawn up from the soil and transpired into the atmosphere. Thus not only is turgor kept up in the plant, but the actual temperature surrounding the plant above ground is raised in cold weather, forming a means within limits of protecting the plant from frost, and is lowered in hot weather preserving the plant from the rays of the mid-day sun.

Water and Fertilizers.

Water is the important and quite largely controlling factor in production, and to insure even and normal development of rind and carpel the supply must be constant with thorough drainage throughout the growing season, lessening and even stopping when ripening is in order and desired. Generous water supply during the summer hastens the period when ripening may occur, but with the colder weather the ripening may be delayed by keeping up the water supply. The characteristics of the plants or the variety of the plant has much to do with the texture of the rind and fruit, as coarseness may occur from extensive subdivision of cells, particularly large cells. Coarseness also occurs from an unsteady supply of water alternately retarding and encouraging growth. This may be caused by conditions of rainfall or improperly conducted irrigation, or from the texture of the soil, which holds water badly or too well.

The actions of water are importantly affected by fertilizers properly constituted to feed the cells and supply the nutriment necessary to meet the requirements of growth and ripening according to the character of the plant. Without a supply of nitrogen during growth, the development will be rather from somatic than embryonic cells, resulting in inferior material for ripening. Without phosphorus, potash, lime or some other minerals peculiar to the necessities of the plant, ripening will be poor in quality. Some varieties of rind fruits, though very fine celled, become coarse in the rind through the cells of the rind being particularly of the class that subdivide, and their embryonic character causes them to make renewed reproduction so that they establish new growths on the surface of the rind if allowed to remain on the stem past the ripening period. This new growth occurs through a new or continued supply of water, for a plant will try to ripen at its proper period under any circumstances.

Some soils are more prone to produce regrowth or "re-greening" in fruit than others, owing to their retentive power for water. At the same time it must be borne in mind that a cell is more likely to begin regrowth accordingly as it is matured by the action upon it of the mineral elements most applicable to it. The mineral substances most likely to induce ripening in combination with nitrogen are lime, potash, chlorine, magnesia and silica, accordingly as they happen to suit the cultivation sought to be influenced. These substances entering the cell seem to steady the plant and set the fruit at rest. If in too great excess they inhibit growth. Water being a carrier of secondary plant food, capable of entering the plant under some conditions, it is often of importance that in seeking to directly and promptly affect a plant by special fertilization we should have the fertilizer in a condition of easy solution by the soil water. But this has its limitations, as will be noted when discussing the availability of fertilizers.

R. L. Churchill, manager of the California Lima Bean Growers' Association, estimates the lima bean crop of this year in California at 1,552,000 eighty-pound bags. This is about 20 per cent. short of a normal crop. Blackeyes are put at 20 per cent. short and tepary at 50 per cent. short. Of pinks there is a normal crop.

Champion pumpkin of the season.

This huge vegetable has just been placed in the Tulare county display in the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce exhibit hall. It weighs 201 pounds, or just four times as much as Althea Worthley, the little miss who is sitting on it.

ENOUGH PIES FOR SIX REGIMENTS.

Another season's record went tumbling yesterday at the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce when a huge pumpkin arrived for place in the Tulare county display. The largest pie vegetable previously received had weighed 123 pounds, but when the new arrival was put on the scale it was found to register 201 pounds.

The monster pumpkin was grown by George Stobie of Farmerville, who, probably has won the championship for the State so far as a single vine is concernel. On the same plant bearing the 201-pound giant there were ten others, the eleven aggregating in weight 1400 pounds. Reduced to pies, the product of this vine alone would make a slab of dessert for each of nearly six regiments of soldiers averaging 1200 to the regiment, or so, at least, say the Chamber of Commerce statistics.

Honors were won by Mr. Stobie's giant vegetable before it was shipped to the local Chamber of Commerce. When the merchants of Visalia offered a cash prize for the largest pumpkin to be exhibited in the city Halloween night Mr. Stobie took the money easily. He gave the prize winner to the Tulare County Board of Trade, which in turn sent it to the Los Angeles chamber exhibit, where all the world might see.

When the unpacking took place last week one of the most interested observers was little Althea Worthley, who naively asked if she might not have the specimen for a hobby horse.

Following the shipment of the record-breaker to the Los Angeles chamber, Mr. Stobie made a discovery in his field that startled him. He hurried into the house and sent the following word to Mrs. Rose Shelton, in charge of the Tulare county exhibit in the chamber:

"If 201-pound pumpkin does not break records I have just found one that weighs 268 pounds that you may have."

It is said to be doubtful if the kind offer will be accepted, as it is believed the 201-pounder will safely keep the record for the season.

HARROWING AS A MEANS TO THE PRODUCTION OF TILTH.

HARROWING is cultivation and cultivation is the basic principle of tilth. Tilth is the object sought in plowing. Hence harrowing is but a link in the chain of completing tilth by plowing. Nevertheless, there are outstanding points that make harrowing of sufficient importance to be discussed separately or distinctively from plowing.

No doubt the first or most primitive harrow was the peg-tooth. One plan was to get a tree crotch making a "V" angle, with each leg four or five feet long. At a distance of eight or ten inches apart holes were bored with auger, and through these holes wooden pegs were driven to represent a comb. This was a handy harrow for new land, where the farmer had to work among and around the stumps of a cleared woodland. For open fields from which the stumps had been cleared a square harrow was made with sticks about six feet long placed crosswise like a gridiron, and through these sticks wooden pins were driven the same as in the "V" harrow. The object of these harrows was principally to break up the lumpiness left by the plow and to thoroughly mix the top soil while fitting it for a seed bed.

As civilization advanced these ideas were carried out in iron, and devices were added to make the pegs work the soil most thoroughly and to economize in both draft and time. One of these devices is the gearing of the peg bars so as to allow of the pegs or teeth being placed at any angle to the draft. By slanting the teeth backward a finer finish can be made on the seed bed. The slanting backward of the pegs also allows of a harrowing of a grain crop which is growing in a soil which has been beaten by a rain after the crop has sprouted, and which, after a subsequent dry spell, has caked the soil about the grain plants.

This harrow is also used for making what is termed the dust-mulch, which is a fine blanket worked on the surface to cut the capilliary tubes of the soil beneath and prevent the passing off of the moisture by evaporation. Still another use for the peg-tooth harrow is the harrowing of meadows to loosen the soil around the stem-roots of the grasses, and to pull up the running vines of water grasses or weeds that wind around and among the fodder grasses and choke them. Thus we note the progress from the original forked-stick harrow, which acted as both plow and harrow, to loosen the soil among the stumps of newly-cleared land, to the elaborate hinged, linked and chain devices which carry the pegs today.

SPRING TOOTH HARROW.

The idea of the spring tooth in the harrow seems to have been evolved from a desire to go deeper into the soil than the peg tooth, and to lift the soil up, while at the same time the striking force of the curved spring tooth shattered the earth lumps. The great value of this idea is seen in the springtime working of fall-plowed land and summer-fallowed land. These lands settle back more or less upon themselves so that the peg tooth cannot open them up as they should be, but the spring tooth, which is set like the figure 6 turned upside down, digs into and thoroughly loosens the earth. There is probably no tool on the farm which so thoroughly fills the bill as the spring-tooth harrow, combining as it does the light plow, the harrow and the clod crusher in its arrangement of digging, jumping spring teeth.

THE DISC HARROW.

The disc harrow is more properly a cultivator than a harrow. It does not give the combing effect of either the spring tooth or the peg. Its action is better described as a cutting up of the soil as one would do it with knives. But by throwing the disc bars at an angle to the draft so as to make the discs cut anglewise, a sort of light plowing or turning of the soil is effected, which is very advantageous for harrowing in grain which has been sown broadcast by hand.

Nowadays, however, hand broadcasting of seed grain is not common enough to lend value to this use of the disc. The disc does good work in rough land, and in this connection meets a demand which neither the peg nor the spring can as fully satisfy. The disc harrow has no rival in cutting up a plowed sod without lifting it, and as it can be set to do practically everything any other harrow can do, is a splendid all-around cultivating tool.

TILTH THE OBJECT.

As the object of cultivation by harrowing is the production of tilth, all classes of harrows contribute to the work, their choice being governed by the eixsting conditions of the land and the immediate work in hand. We must understand that while shallow cultivation, as in the case of the dust mulch or blanket, helps crops to withstand drouth, deep summer tillage may heighten the bad effect of drouth and do harm by so opening up the soil as to cause excessive evaporation, or loss of moisture from too great a depth, leaving the shallow plant roots to perish. This has been evidenced by plowing corn too deeply in open land instead of just cultivating the surface with a horse hoe.

One advantage of summer tillage with such tools as the disc is the aerating of the soil, which is necessary to nitrification. But too deep cultivation, when it wastes water by evaporation, forces the plants to send roots deeper for moisture, and thus they get down into the unresponsive or infertile soil, from which nothing but water is obtainable for nourishment.

UP TO GROWER.

Apples, well graded and attractively packed, will sell at a profit when others of similar quality but poorly displayed may fail to attract the attention of the buyer, says Warren P. Tufts in a bulletin on the Packing of Apples in California just issued by the University of California college of agriculture. According to the State Commission of Horticulture, there are 40,000 acres of producing apple orchard at present in California, with 23,000 acres of young apple trees coming into bearing. The grower will, therefore, soon be confronted with a 50 per cent. increase in the State's apple production. Considering also that the apple is universally grown, it follows, according to Mr. Tufts, that in order to market the California apple successfully, the highest standards of grade and pack must be attained.

STRIKING COMMENTS FROM VARIOUS PUBLICATIONS.

DAIRY animals are raised for meat rather than for rich men's toys to cast aside after a few years, se the logical type that should win the fairs is the one which makes e most of the highest-priced cuts the least expense, considering the neral conditions to which beef imals are subjected in the sec- ns from which they come, says e Pacific Rural Press. This is nerally said to be the aim of the eed associations, but when an ani- al with the form is sacrificed in e show ring to an animal with orer form but fancier color or eater over-abundance of fat hich often reduces their future rviceability,) it looks queer to the rmer. That farmer is one of the as which breed associations are ending money to interest in pure eds, and breeders are advertising sell stock to; but when he sees essential frills given greater con- leration than ability to make com- rcial meat the advertising is sted on him. Seldom before has ere been less dissatisfaction with dges' awards than this year; yet is suggested that reputable expe- nced buyers for packing-houses ight make the best judges of the al value of meat animals. What you say?

e Bean in Asia.

The importance which the bean s assumed in international trade recent years is one of the ro- nces of commerce says the Japan ciety Bulletin. While it is true at in the Far East its worth has ways been fairly well appreciated, rchants of Europe and America ve only within the last decade alized its value. Today ships make yages half-way around the world th no other cargo than beans, this ndition being brought about by fact that there seems to be no d of the uses to which bean prod- ts may be put.

The growing of the bean stalk it- f has a marked effect in bringing tility to the land.

A large American corporation, the anchurian Developing Company, s purchased tracts of land meas- ing thousands of acres in North- Manchuria with the purpose of sing crops for the American mar- t. It is expected that beans will the principal crop. This com- ny has found that in Manchuria, and of cheap labor, the combined stem of Chinese hand labor and thod with modern machinery ms to be the arrangement which ll give the best results at the least t. When this project is fully de- loped America will be supplied th beans grown on American- ned land with the aid of Amer- n machinery, though probably not pped in American bottoms.

Transportation of beans and bean oducts each spring from New- wang southward has provided ry profitable freight for several itish steamship companies. Up til the outbreak of the war Ger- ny had been the largest consumer these beans among western coun- es.

The soya bean is grown in prac- ally every part of Manchuria, the uthern bean being slightly more luable than the northern, as it ntains less water and more oil. e price of the northern bean has en kept down considerably in the st due to the poor shipping fa- ities along the Chinese Eastern ilway (a Russian owned road.)

It might be mentioned that the ason why the bean is such a val- le product is its high protein con- t. The people of China and pan being principally rice eaters, ve a food product containing tein. Western people obtain this ment by eating meat, but the an supplies it in a cheaper form.

ep Good Investment.

With the advent of high prices for tton and wool, many farmers are king toward keeping a flock of ep, says a writer in the University rm Agricola. Sheep are extremely apted to supplying the needs of nation in the present crisis. Their fulness is two-fold — producing d and clothing, namely mutton d wool.

California is an ideal sheep State d on most farms there is waste d that would make excellent ep pasture if properly fenced. e average farmer would not miss feed consumed by thirty or forty s, and would find the mutton and ol a ready source of income. The urns come at a time when the rage farmer can turn a cash in- ne to good advantage in carrying his general farming operations.

Sheep are useful in keeping down eds about the place and are often ned on summer fallow for that pose. A few farmers have struck on the idea of keeping the irri- ion ditches clean by fencing the ne and allowing sheep to graze ng the ditches. In this way sheep only utilize waste feed to good vantage, but also keep the ditch ks in good order, as gophers will work where the ground is bare kept well packed.

The keeping of a flock of sheep s another peculiar advantage in pplying the family with fresh meat ring the summer. A mutton or b carcass can readily be used by average family without danger it spoiling.

A mutton type of sheep is usually erred under farm conditions, although a large-framed Merino ewe or Rambouillet is well suited for early lamb production when crossed with a Hampshire or Shropshire ram. Merino ewes are noted for their early breeding qualities. They are very hardy, shear well and produce a crossbred lamb of a very desirable market type.

The average ewe will shear about eight pounds of wool annually, which is at present selling for about 65 cents per pound. Under farm conditions at least a 100 per cent. lamb crop should be realized. Every lamb at the age of 5 months weighing seventy to seventy-five pounds was selling for $8.50 per head last summer. Hence the average ewe will return from $12 to $14 per year.

The management of a flock is comparatively simple and inexpensive. For early lambs, ewes should be sheared in July and bred in August or September. Grain stubble is ideal feed during the fall and only in the winter would it be necessary to feed hay. Three pounds of bright alfalfa hay per day per sheep is sufficient. Silage or roots if available are excellent for ewes, suckling lambs, and in case of old, feeble ewes, it might be desirable to feed one-half pound rolled barley per ewe per day at lambing time. As soon as the grass is well started the flock may be turned out again, hence there is but little expense entailed in raising sheep.

Alfalfa pasture is the standard forage crop in California, although there is some danger from bloat in turning sheep on green alfalfa. However, sheep are gradually becoming accustomed to this feed, as hundreds of sheep are grazing alfalfa the year round with apparently little loss. Winter rye is often sown in the fall, and the sheep may be turned into the rye at lambing time. This crop would furnish an abundance of forage even late in the spring. Dwarf Essex Rape is also a good winter forage crop. Sudan grass seeded in April will furnish an abundance of feed by June 1.

Where lambs are to be marketed in June it is important to provide some feed of this kind if natural grazing is limited. Again, the natural grasses dry up about May 1, and some forage crop may be necessary to finish the lambs properly.

With the present meat shortage and the world facing a wool famine, the American farmer will do considerable toward winning this war by increasing wool and mutton production on the farm.

Getting People on Farms.

It was the good fortune of the North in Civil War times to develop its industries and its farms in due proportions, says the Salt Lake Tribune. The war stimulated industries and a wise homestead act attracted agriculturists to the farms of the great West. While the South was waning under the effects of the blockade, the North was growing in population and riches. Immigrants from Europe poured in and took their places in the mills and factories or traveled west to occupy homesteads. Thus a balance was maintained between industry and agriculture, between city and country, between labor and food. The reaction which caused hard times and suffering in later years need not be discussed here, but it may be remarked that the period of distress would have been more woeful and of much longer duration had it not been for the mighty empire which was offering its illimitable resources for development.

Today this empire has been developed only in part. There is still a great West which invites capital and labor and which opens an outlet to the congested East. But unwise laws have closed much of the western domain, building barriers between the people and their natural resources. These barriers must be removed if development is to continue at a pace necessary to restore the balance between industry and agriculture. The people must be assured that going back to the farm will be like going back to Eden. How this shall be done remains for the future to tell, but it is essential that the subject should be constantly in the minds of those fitted to deal with it. It will test the capacity of scholars, statesmen and practical men of affairs. It will be a problem worthy of a great nation and it must be solved.

Community Storage.

The farmers of Chico, Butte county, have during the past year and a half, been taught the value of a new convenience in the shape of a cold storage plant, for which they find ever-increasing uses, says the Selma Enterprise. A cold storage plant was built there for general purposes and especial attention has been given to farmer customers. Drawers or compartments are rented out to the farmers at a cent a day. These drawers will hold about 100 pounds of meat. They are made of well-seasoned wood, which has been dipped in melted paraffine to prevent decay and are arranged in tiers in the room. At first there were 200 of these compartments which were quickly rented to the farmers, but later several hundred more boxes have been added, some considerably larger, which rent for 5 cents a day. They also have a number of rooms, five by five by seven feet high, which are equipped with hooks for hanging up meat and storing other articles of food, which are rented by some of the farmers.

The farmers of any community could soon learn to put such a plant to good use as have the people of the Chico community. They not only keep meat, butter, eggs and other foodstuffs for family use, but they store away fruit and vegetables when they are in season, and several months later go and bring them out as fresh and delicious as the day they were put in.

The farmers of a community would soon learn to appreciate the value of cold storage compartments where they may keep anything they wish. This in addition to the general storage of fruit and produce when there might be need would make such a plant a valuable asset.

The only trouble experienced at the Chico plant was to see to it that everything brought for storage was fresh and in good condition, for a little tainted meat or old fruit or produce will in a very short time work a great deal of mischief in a cold storage plant. After the farmers had been taught the condition in which to bring their products to the plant for storage there was no further trouble.

If there were nothing else to be gained other than the independence of a farmer in being able to buy or butcher a beef, hog or sheep—winter or summer—and putting it in storage and taking it out a piece at a time as the family might need it, a modern cold storage plant in any farm community would be a good investment.

GROWING SPINACH ON LARGE SCALE.

The cultivation of spinach in California is interestingly discussed by Prof. S. S. Rogers of the California University College of Agriculture, in a recent issue of the university farm publication, the Agricola. Prof. Rogers points out the great increase of acreage put out in this crop in the past three years, due to the demand for spinach for canning. The crop, he declares, is adapted to a large part of the State, being successful wherever conditions are favorable for vegetable growing.

The cost of producing the crop, he says, varies with the area planted, the character of the soil and season of year. Under normal conditions, when the crop is grown in large tracts, the cost is declared to vary from $25 to $30 an acre, exclusive of land values. The yield per acre varies from three to five tons. Under intensive methods, six tons to the acre is sometimes possible. The customary price at the canneries is $25 a ton delivered. Sold in the fresh market, spinach brings 2½ to 3½ cents a pound.

Discussing the cultural requirements of spinach, Prof. Rogers says: "Spinach is best adapted to a rich, light loam and is not a satisfactory crop to grow on soil of poor quality, or which will not retain moisture well. Spinach is a shallow-rooted crop and the ideal soil is not as deep as would be desired for such crops as melons or tomatoes. Spinach requires a large amount of soil and atmospheric moisture for maximum yields. The soil should be continually moist up to one inch of the surface and there is less danger from an over-supply of water than from the non-retention of a sufficient amount.

"The plants will stand without injury a relative low degree of temperature, but are likely to be seriously injured by heat. It is very important that before the field is seeded, the soil be in as fine a condition as possible. The soil should be moistened within one-half inch of the surface at the time of seeding. The planting season continues from September to March, inclusively, in the interior of the State, but in the coast section planting may be done early in the fall and may continue until May. The time of planting is dependent largely upon the climatic conditions, as the plants will not make a satisfactory growth during hot weather.

"When seeding before the rains have started, the field should be thoroughly irrigated just previous to planting. The seeding may be done on raised beds or drilled in rows a foot to eighteen inches apart, and the seed should be dropped every inch. In planting large areas the four-row sugar-beet drill may be used. This will space the rows from sixteen to eighteen inches apart and further cultivation may be done with horse-drawn implements. The depth of planting is largely dependent upon the quality of soil moisture and the season of year and varies from one inch to an inch and a half. It is customary to plant from ten to fifteen pounds of seed to the acre, the exact amount depending upon the germination test of the seed and the distance between the rows.

"When planting during the rainy season, provided the soil is free from weeds and of a sandy nature, so that the crop will not pack when wet, no cultivation will be required. The fields are generally cultivated, however, from one to three times. If the plants are spaced not closer than one inch apart in the rows, it will not be necessary to thin. The customary method of harvesting is by the use of push hoes, cutting one row at a time and cutting the plants just below the surface of the soil. The plants should be hauled as soon as possible to the cannery or market.

"The leading varieties of spinach are the Prickley Winter, Bloomsdale and Savoy. The first mentioned is best adapted for fall and winter planting up to January. There has recently been introduced into California a variety known as Prickley Winter, which was formerly grown in Japan. This is not giving nearly used for spring planting, as they do not stand cold, but will make a much better and larger growth during hot weather."

GETTING POTASH IN CEMENT DUST.

That between 71,000 and 75,000 tons of available recoverable potash, about one-third of the quantity normally consumed in the United States, exists in the dust passing through or retained in the flues of the cement manufacturing plants of the country is indicated by analyses made by the Bureau of Soils of the United States Department of Agriculture, according to a recent publication, Department Bulletin 572. By increasing the percentage of potash volatilized, by the addition of annually, or nearly one-half of the normal consumption of potash in the United States, according to the bulletin.

Numerous plants have installed electrical precipitation equipment to recover the flue dust, and are finding the installations good investments, the bulletin declares. Some plants are recovering 95 per cent. of the potash present in the raw materials fed into the furnaces.

The dust recovered in the flue stacks, connecting kilns, and precipitation apparatus is about 4.5 per cent. potash, while that recovered from the precipitation apparatus itself is about 11 per cent. potash. The dust may be used as a source of cement material, may be disposed of as collected for use as a fertilizer or in fertilizer manufacturing, or may be leached to prepare concentrated potash salts.

The Progress of the Shorthorn.

BY R. J. BIDWELL.

FROM the time they grazed peacefully in the fertile valley of the River Tees, and from their earliest importation into this country, in 1783, up to the present day, the reds, whites and roans have steadily advanced, working improvements on the native cattle of every section.

Since the days of our forefathers, when they were known as the "Durham" and "Roan Durham" cattle, the Shorthorn has been pre-eminent as the farmer's cow. They have no rival in the production of both beef and milk, and are equal, if not superior, to any breed for beef, or any breed for milk, placed under the same conditions.

With thousands upon thousands of acres of the great Southwest being brought under the plow each year; with a great cattle shortage over the whole country and with the meat supply shrinking, it seems that a great wave of prosperity for the Shorthorn breeder is at hand. The demand for Shorthorns today, it is certain, is greater than the supply.

BULLS IN DEMAND.

Within the past few months there have been sold twenty carloads of Shorthorn bulls into California, New Mexico, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, Utah and Northwestern Nebraska. There is a decided and growing tendency toward Shorthorns and a willingness on the part of ranchmen to pay steadily higher prices for Shorthorn bulls.

For all practical purposes the Shorthorn has no superior. It is the best steer on grass, and in the lot gives maximum results for the feed. The cow of the breed will yield more revenue than any other when both milk and beef are taken into the reckoning.

The Shorthorn is the most widely distributed of the beef breeds and in buying stock cattle on the market it is possible to make a good selection. This is an advantage not to be ignored. The grade Shorthorn is acknowledged to be a superior steer. Even a moderate infusion of Shorthorn blood imparts the scale and spreading capacity that make the Shorthorn a profitable animal.

A Shorthorn will at 2 years of age give at least 200 pounds more weight than a steer of any other breed and, fixed charges being the same, that added weight means profit.

SHORTHORN VALUES.

Shorthorn values, while steadily increasing, have remained consistent with the demand. At the Pacific International Exposition at Portland, eighty Shorthorns sold for an average of $435, the top price for a cow being $1775.

On December 1, history for the Shorthorn breed was made at Anoka Farms, Waukesha, Wis., when an average of $1557 was made on forty-five head of calves. Anoka Champion, a Shorthorn bull, brought the top price of $17,000, being purchased by B. F. Hales, Oak Park, Ill. This is the highest price ever paid for a Scotch bred bull of the breed, and gives Anoka Farms the distinction of surpassing the record made by the world-famed breeder, William Duthie, who, in the recent Collynie calf sale, sold Collynie Lavender King for $14,175. The honor is thus shifted from Great Britain to the United States.

The university farm at Davis has attracted the attention of the breeding world to California. The 1916 judges of the International Live Stock Show at Chicago placed the university steer, California Favorite, grand champion of the fat classes. At the 1917 Pacific International Exposition at Portland, California Marvel, the university entry, also won against strong competition. These steers are half-brothers, both being out of the same registered Shorthorn cow. At the Portland show also the herds of Thomas T. Miller of Los Angeles, the Pacheco Cattle Company of Hollister and the T. B. Gibson Estate of Woodland carried back to California a notable string of awards, account of which has already been published in the Farm and Tractor Section.

The time will come in California, as it already has in other States, when ranchmen will turn only pure-bred bulls on the range. With her equable climate, diversified feeds and the progressive spirit which marks all her industries, California is well on the way to taking her place among the foremost Shorthorn-producing States.

Good Shorthorns, good feed and water—a strong combination.

SOME WELL-KNOWN NORTHERN HERDS.

The Shorthorn has won high favor north of the Tehachepi, where a number of fine herds have been established in recent years. Some of these herds have made enviable records and have done much to encourage the pure-bred industry generally in California.

The Carruthers farm at Mayfield is well known for its Scotch cattle, and comprises 150 head. Count Glory, pride of the herd, has been exhibited twice on the Pacific Coast—once at the State fair at Sacramento and again at the San Francisco Land show last October. At each show he was made grand champion. Assisting Count Glory is Hallwood Villager, grandson of the great Villager and out of a Lavender cow. Rookwood Monogram, a Dean Curtiss bred bull, and considered one of the best bulls ever bred at Rookwood, is another of the leaders.

Another well-known northern herd is that of the Paicines Ranch Company, founded in 1906. The first importations of this herd were some of the best individuals of the Elmendorf herd of Kentucky, and to these have been added from time to time many other fine animals. The chief herd bull now in use is Champion of Scotland, bred by Capt. Gordon of Inch, North Britain. He is by Newton Crystal, out of Nellie 8th, and was imported to the United States by D. R. Hanna of Ohio, from whom he was purchased by the Paicines Ranch two years ago. Other great herd headers owned by this company are Winsom Prince of the Spicy Princess family; Fond Lavender, a Harding bred bull, and two fine bulls of White Hall Sultan strain. Besides its registered herd, this company also maintains a large herd of Shorthorn cows of pure breeding.

A good herd of Shorthorns in Mendocino county is that of the Hopland Stock Farm at Hopland. The herd, which now numbers 175 head, was started by A. W. Foster in 1905. Mr. Foster is now assisted by his son, P. W. Foster. The herd bulls are Tule King 304655, a son of King Edward; Music Master, a son of the great Ringmaster; Right Choice, a grandson of Choice Goods, and Hopland Lord, by Uppermill Lord, and grandson of Whitehall Sultan. At the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915 the Hopland herd took junior and grand champion bull, senior and reserve grand champion cow, first, second and fourth on 2-year-old cows, first and third on senior heifer calves and second on senior yearling heifers. At the State fair in Sacramento in 1916 they were awarded senior and reserve grand champion cow, first on produce of dam and other premiums. This year at the Sacramento show they secured senior and grand champion cow for California breds, first on senior yearling bull and first on produce of dam, with other prizes.

GREET CHAMPIONS.

The university farm of the University of California college of agriculture celebrated in a fitting manner the achievements of its live stock at the recent Pacific International Stock Show at Portland. The animals upon their return were met by the farm band and escorted like a winning football team to the barns. California Marvel, a pure-bred Shorthorn yearling, bred and raised on the university farm, won grand champion of the show, and St. Patrick, pure-bred 2-year-old Aberdeen Angus, captured reserve. An Angus steer calf entered by the farm won fourth in his class. In the sheep the farm captured first and second on wether lambs, first for pen of lambs, first for pen of yearlings and second and third on yearlings.

BREEDING FOR COLOR.

Corroborating the theory of breeding cattle for color, experimental breeding on Ayrshire seems to establish that cow and bull being both black-and-white produces black-and-white progeny, and the same rule follows with red-and-white animals. But black-and-white bull with red-and-white cow gives black-and-white male calves and red-and-white females. To use a technical phrase, it seems that black-and-white coloring, in Ayrshire cattle, at least, is a simple allelomorph of red-and-white. The black-and-white coloring is dominant in the male and red-and-white in the female.

WARM SOIL.

The hot sunshine on a soil causes evaporation of the moisture and takes the water out of the surface soil. But a warm soil retains moisture to a remarkable extent as against a cold soil. The lesson of this is that by vegetable matter cover crops we increase the absorptive power of the loam, and warm it by the decomposing material, causing it to retain moisture better.

DATES SET FOR SHORTHORN SALES.

At the big Pacific International Live Stock Show, at Porland, California Shorthorns received a goodly share of the awards and made a most excellent showing. This, it is believed, will give a big impetus to Shorthorn breeding in this State.

While in Portland, David J. Stollery, secretary of the California Shorthorn Breeders' Association, had a conference with representative breeders, and as a result, the following dates were set for Pacific Coast sales in February, 1918:

Spokane, Wash., show and sale, February 22 and 23; Mr. Morrison's Spokane sale, February 25; Portland sale, February 26; San Francisco sale, February 28.

California breeders will consign several of their top cattle and from fifty to 100 head of registered Shorthorns of best blood lines will be sold in the San Francisco sale to the highest bidder.

INTEREST IN RABBITS.

Rabbit growing enterprises are reported from various parts of the country, the animals being raised both for fur and meat. A California company is to establish a large fur-rabbit farm and pack the meat as tin-potted hare. Business men of Hamilton, Can., have taken over a fur-rabbit farm and will raise Siberian rabbits for fur and meat. This latter species is said to be comparatively new to Canada. It sometimes reaches a weight of fourteen pounds, is black in color, grows very quickly and one doe will produce about 100 young in eight months. The meat can be produced at 5 cents a pound, it is said, and the pelts are of very good quality for rabbit fur. Uncle Sam is looking into the wild western jackrabbit, which is killed by millions every year as a pest by farmers. It is maintained by the Department of Agriculture that jackrabbit meat is good game when fresh and that the hams when corned and smoked will compare well with German goose hams.

In general farming the size of the farm is a very important factor. The farm should be large enough to give the working force available to the farmer a maximum of productive labor through the year.

Uses of Cement.

mixture of sizes graded from small to large. By this means the spaces or voids between the stones or pebbles are reduced and a more compact concrete is obtained. Moreover, this method makes it possible to get along with less sand and less cement.

REQUIRED MIXTURES.

For ordinary work around the farm (silos, tanks, cisterns, fence posts, well curbs, etc.) use twice as much stone as sand, and twice as much sand as cement; that is to say, one part cement, two parts sand and four parts of stone or gravel.

For sidewalks and gutters a "weaker" mixture is sometimes used, consisting of one part cement, two and one-half parts of sand and five parts of stone or gravel.

The proportions should always be measured by volume.

TOOLS USED.

One great advantage of concrete, so far as the farmer is concerned, lies in the fact that, generally speaking, it necessitates no outlay of tools, for it so happens that most of the tools needed for forms of concrete construction are in everyday use on the farm. The list required includes shovels for each man on the job, at least two wheelbarrows with sheet-iron bodies; a rake or two, a water barrel, several water buckets, a tamper or rammer made of wood with handles nailed to it, a garden spade, a sand screen made by nailing a piece of one-quarter-inch mesh wire screen two and one-half feet by five feet in size, to a frame made of two-inch by four-inch scantling, and a mixing board, consisting of a water-tight wooden platform about ten feet square.

It is a simple matter, to figure [illegible] first figure the number of cubic feet of concrete required; then, by multiplying this by the number under the proper column and required mixture shown in the following table, the amounts of cement, sand and stone or gravel, are obtained:

Quantities of material in C. ft. of concrete:

Mixture—	Cement, barrel.	Sand, Cubic yd.	Stone or gravel, Cubic yd.
1-2-4 concrete....	.058	.0163	.0326
1-2½-5 concrete..	.048	.0176	[illegible]

Suppose the work consists of a concrete silo requiring in all 935 cubic feet of concrete, 750 feet of 1-2-4 concrete, and 185 cubic feet of 1-2½-5 concrete. Also enough sand and cement to paint the silo inside and outside; in all, 400 square yards, with a 1-1 mixture of sand and cement. One cubic foot of 1-1 mortar will paint about fifteen square yards of surface, and requires 0.1856 barrels of cement and 0.0263 cubic yards of sand.

The quantities of material required for the silo will then be found to figure as follows:

Portland cement	57½ bbls.
Stone or gravel	31 cu. yds.
Sand	16½ cu. yds.

The use of concrete on the farm will rapidly become universal not only during the war, when the military needs of the nation will call for all and more iron and wood than can be produced, but during the reconstruction period after the war, when Europe will call for these materials in unheard-of quantities, leaving no surplus except for absolute necessities for home use. And there is no question but that the more he uses it the better will the farmer like concrete for the innumerable purposes to which he can put it. It is safe to prophesy that within the next decade the American farm will be one of the greatest, if not the greatest, consumer of Portland cement in the world.

GREAT SHOWING MADE BY SOUTHLAND'S PURE BREDS.

BY JAMES W. M'ALLISTER, JR.

[The Farm and Tractor Section published last Sunday a brief account of the big Holstein sale at Sacramento, together with photographs of the record-price Southern California animals sold on that occasion, being the first agricultural publication in this end of the State to carry this important news. In the following report of the event by James W. McAlister, Jr., one of the leading consignors at the sale, are given interesting details not included in the first account.—Ed.]

THE Holstein Breeders' Guaranty Sale held at the State fair grounds in Sacramento December 5 was an unqualified success. It is safe to say that a better aggregate of cattle was never offered to the buying public before at auction.

The wonderful average of $943.50 per head was attained for seventy-two head offered, which average is the third highest for any sale ever held in the world, and the highest for any auction ever held in which the cattle were all selected from one State. The two sales exceeding the average for the Sacramento event were the National Guaranty Sale at Detroit, held in connection with meeting of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America in 1916, and the National Guaranty Sale held at the time of meeting of the same association in Worcester, Mass., last June.

The sale opened at 10 o'clock in the morning. The last animal was sold at 11 o'clock at night. The first great thrill came when the wonderfully-bred Korndyke Sadie Vale Star-Rena was offered by McAllister & Sons of Chino about the middle of the afternoon. This heifer had been widely advertised as the highest-record heifer for the seven nearest dams of any heifer ever offered at public sale, and interest in her was increased by the fact that she was in calf to the bull It, famous son of Pontiac Clothilde De Kolb II.

RECORD BREAKERS.

A first bid of $1000 was offered and offers came thick and fast until the price of $2100 was called. Then after a brief interim, the figure of $2500 was reached. The Bridgeford Company of Knightsen then dropped out of the bidding, but F. J. Keisel of Sacramento and Gottshall & Magruder of Ripon carried the bidding up to $3100, at which figure the "leading lady" of the sale was knocked off to Mr. Kiesel. The price is the highest ever paid for a female in the west.

Shortly after dinner the Santa Anita Ranch near Los Angeles, owned by Anita M. Baldwin, put up the fine bull King Korndyke Pontiac 20th and the crowd prepared for a new sensation. This bull, sired by one of the best sons of the Great King of the Pontiac, and out of the famous 36-lb., three-year-old, Miss Valley Mead De Kol Walker, is undoubtedly one of the greatest bred males in the world.

The bidding started off at a lively clip and an offer of $2500 was quickly reached. F. L. Morris of the A. W. Morris & Sons Company of Woodland then announced that he would give $1000 for the use of the bull in his herd for ninety days. The bidding went on up by leaps and bounds to $4000, where it seemed the limit had been reached. Mr. Gottshall of Ripon then announced that he would pay $500 for the service of his State record heifer K. P. Tola Joe to this bull and I. S. Gibson of Williams, Cal., announced he would also pay $1000 for his service for ninety days. Two bidders, W. J. Higdon of Tulare and R. F. Gurein of Visalia carried the bull quickly up to $6000.

For the moment it appeared that the bull would be sold at this figure to Mr. Guerin. The Tulare man, however, finally nodded his head and started things again. Then $6500 was reached and after a pause of a few moments, the bull was knocked down to Mr. Higdon to the accompaniment of loud cheering. No bull ever before commanded such a price in the West.

FOR RED CROSS.

At 11 o'clock the last animal officially entered in the sale had been sold and the total figure of $67,937 for seventy-two animals was reached. A bull purchased by the Consigners and Sales Company from the Santa Anita Rancho was then put up for the benefit of the Red Cross. Donations of $50 apiece were given by twenty-three persons present. Numbers were then put into a hat and drawn out. The California Sales and Pedigree Company, which drew the lucky number, immediately put the bull up again, offering the proceeds to the Red Cross. The animal was finally purchased for $300 after a total of $1450 had been realized for the Red Cross.

Almost any of the animals sold at the sale would have been stellar attractions at an ordinary sale, but as it would require much space to tell of them all, I will mention only one other animal outside the two Southern California record-breakers. The wonderful heifer calf Lady Sadie Vale Joe Karlray, a granddaughter of the famous King Korndyke Sadie Vale out of the famous State Record two-year-old, was offered by Gottshall & Magruder, and knocked down for $1400. This was the highest price ever paid for a calf under a year old at public auction.

SOUTH WINS AGAIN.

The consignment of the Santa Anita Rancho brought the highest average of the sale, $1385.50 for eight individuals. McAlister & Sons were next with an average of $1328.50 for seven head. The consignment of three animals from Alex Whaley of Tulare was third with an average of $1067. For fifteen head offered the A. W. Morris & Sons Company received an average of $951. The Palo Alto Stock Farm averaged $950 for eight head. The Bridgeford Company averaged $929.50 for ten head. F. J. Kiesel of Sacramento averaged $892 for three head; Gottshall & Magruder, of Ripon, $812.50 for three head; A. J. Stalder, of Riverside, $712.50 for four head; W. J. Higdon, of Tulare, $652 for three head; R. F. Guerin, of Visalia, $665 for two head and Dr. E. J. Weldon, of Sacramento, $421 for four head. Prices where only one individual was offered by a consignor ranged from $400 to $1150.

Following are some of the heavier purchases: W. J. Higdon, Tulare, four head, $9950; McAlister & Sons, Chino, ten head, $8370; F. W. Kiesel, Sacramento, six head, $7135; Toyon Farm Association, San Jose, four head, $5900; Alex Whaley, Tulare, three head, $3600; E. D. Barry, Jr., Daggett, three head, $3525; A. W. Morris & Sons, Woodland, five head, $3525; Cornwell & Bibens, Modesto, two head, $2800; J. W. Benoit, Modesto, two head, $1925; and the Bridgford Company, Knightsen, three head, $1900.

The sale was managed by the California Sales & Pedigree Company, with Sales Manager C. L. Hughes in charge. Col. D. A. Rhodes of Los Angeles was in the box and Col. J. E. Mack of Wisconsin in the ring.

In closing I cannot refrain from crowing for Southern California. Northern California, or "Superior California," as the people around Sacramento are prone to call their section, has long made the boast that its cattle were the best in the State. They will be rather at a loss to make the claim stick from now on, what with Southern California taking the sale honors for the highest priced bull and the highest priced female ever sold in the West and honors for best averages right down the line.

POTATO GRADING.

The Federal Reserve Board has recently fixed certain standards for Irish potatoes, so that these grades of potatoes can now be stored by the grower, and loans made on the storage certificates as collateral, in the same way that cotton is stored in bonded warehouses and warehouse certificates issued, which have a value as commercial paper. However, to be accepted in the government bonded storage houses, the potatoes must not only be well grown, that is, free from disease, and in good condition, but they must be graded. This means that some of the preaching about importance of grading potatoes will now have to be practiced, if the grower would realize some of the benefits of the new ruling, which permits him to hold his crop as long as he cares to, or until the market price suits him. Hand-grading is practically out of the question with large quantities, but there are efficient machine graders on the market, operated either by hand or by power. These separate the tubers according to size by passing them over a vibrating screen. The percentage of bruised and diseased potatoes is another factor, which determines the grades. The standard grades as now established are as follows: U. S. No. 1, tubers over 1⅞ inches in diameter in the round varieties and 1¾ inches in diameter for long varieties. Less than 5 per cent. shall be undersized, and an additional 3 per cent. is allowed for tubers injured in any way. U. S. No. 2, tubers over 1½ inches in diameter and not more than 5 per cent. undersized. An additional 5 per cent. is allowed for tubers injured in any way.

THE FOOD SURVEY.

One of the first duties of the bureau of markets this fall was to make a rapid survey of the existing food situation to ascertain as accurately as possible the status of the country's food supply from the farm to the consumer and to get data on normal consumption as a basis for rational production and conservation. It will, perhaps, be news to our farmers to know that the authority of the bureau applies to all kinds of stock feeds, seeds, fertilizers, agricultural machinery and implements and, in fact, to any article required in the production, distribution or use of food. The funds set aside for the bureau's work aggregate $4,240,575.

CARS ASSURED.

Reports made by the traffic department of the railroads to packing-house managers in California is to the effect that provisions have been made for handling the 1918 output of deciduous and citrus fruits. There will, however, be a slower schedule to the East from California than has been maintained in the past. Large additions are to be made to the total of rolling stock by car shops, it is stated, and the railroad officials are confident the supply will be ample. The report says, however, that this result can only be achieved if there is complete co-operation of shippers and carriers in proper and prompt loading and unloading of cars.

Four-foot Soldiers

invented machines that were supposed to be capable of going everywhere are being replaced by the horse and mule. Pack animals are carrying shells and food right up to the trenches in all kinds of terrain. Artillery horses with shells on their backs make their way right up to the guns. We will need animals, all we can get, and we will have to arrange some way to get the necessary food over there for them."

MARKETS SCOURED.

The Allies have been buying horses in the markets of the world and have purchased over a million and a half of America's horses and mules. It will amaze most persons to learn that 25,000 horses have been shipped from Los Angeles and that California has contributed 8000 mules to the total. The supply has been so depleted that the United States finds it difficult now to standardize the animals for the Allies and its own needs, being compelled to take almost any and all offered to meet the demand. Even the mares, America's foundation breeding stock, are now being taken at a rapid rate to feed the war machine. It takes four years to place a horse on the front from natural sources. If our breeding stock must go we have a serious problem to replace our losses and at the same time to supply our war needs.

America had 22,000,000 horses a few months ago, of which less than one-fifth were usable for war purposes. With such a drain as the war is imposing upon our resources, it becomes a question as to whether the supply of animals will be adequate for a long war. We have the consolation of knowing, at least, that the situation with the enemy, hemmed in on all sides as he is, must be and continue to be much worse than that of our allies and ourselves.

Conditions in the horse market for a number of years have been rather discouraging for breeders, so much so, in fact, that stock has been permitted to deteriorate, and in some sections the breeding of horses has almost ceased. The war has revived the demand for horses and has brought it to hitherto undreamed-of proportions. These conditions in combination have created a serious situation and one that must be remedied as soon as possible.

HORSE CONSERVATION.

First of all, it is up to the breeders to conserve our foundation breeding stock at home with the utmost care. The importance of this cannot be too strongly emphasized. Not only must we have horses for the war, but we must have them in numbers unprecedented in the years following the war, for the millions of horses and mules killed in one way and another during the course of the world tragedy must be replaced, and America will have to take the leading part in replacing them. There will be such a market for horses in the next few years as has never been known before.

Secondly, Americans should loyally and whole-heartedly support all organizations having for their object the care and restoration of wounded horses and mules, that all the animals capable of being saved may be preserved for future years of usefulness. Not one of the warring nations has an army veterinary department big enough to care for the wounded animals, although the British, through volunteer aid, have horse hospitals behind the lines with equipment for 10,000 animals. In these hospitals, it is declared, 80 per cent. of the wounded animals brought in are so cared for that they are returned to active service. This service, it is estimated, has saved the government $35,000,000 to date.

Can we afford to do less? With battle losses of horses and mules averaging 47,000 a month, the task of replacing all the animals wounded would soon become literally staggering. To provide the means of restoring all the animals that are not too seriously hurt to respond to skillful hospital treatment will be to take a big step toward the solution of one of the big war problems.

Every horse or mule saved at a veterinary hospital behind the battle lines means not only an animal more assured for war requirements at a time when these faithful and capable dumb soldiers are most vitally needed, but an animal conserved for agricultural or other uses in the years following the overthrow of Prussianism.

TOO MUCH WATER WORSE THAN NONE.

Once and a while one proposes to irrigate wheat, but he seldom has any definite plan or ideas on the subject based on actual experience. Pretty careful, and perhaps exhaustive, experiments have been made under official control, and while the conditions were necessarily local, yet a good general idea has been obtained. It has been shown that over-irrigation is worse than none at all, and the same is true of water applied after planting but before the crop comes up, and after the dough stage.

The experiments have proven a basic theory by showing that the first irrigation that will do good should be applied at about the time of six to eight-inch normal growth of the crop, or say in the five-leaf stage, and that irrigation should not be applied after blossoming, the early irrigation setting up the growth and the one at or just before blossom time filling the grain. If another irrigation is given it should be between these two stages to be advantageous.

Four Holsteins from a farm in the Salt River Valley in Arizona recently brought nearly $2200 in a sale, showing the advance of the pure bred industry in that State.

MANY FIRSTS WON BY CALIFORNIA.

California is rapidly taking a place among the Shorthorn-breeding States of the country and now boasts a number of herds that regularly make their mark at shows and sales and which are disseminating good Shorthorn blood throughout Pacific Coast territory. The quality of California's Shorthorns was convincingly demonstrated at the recent Pacific International Live Stock Exposition in Portland, where the herd of Thomas T. Miller of Los Angeles capured seven first places in as many classes, and where the entries of the Pacheco Cattle Company of Hollister and the T. B. Gibson estate of Woodland took many prizes.

Mr. Miller's first prize winners were as follows: Three-year-old bull, Diamond Choice; senior yearling bull, Greendale Sultan; 3-year-old cow, Imp. Bradsty's Jinny 18th; cow, 2 years old and under 3, Golden Queen; senior yearling heifer, Sultana of Linwood; senior heifer calf, White Mayflower, and senior champion cow, Imp. Bradsty's Jinny 18th. Mr. Miller also took second prize for his aged herd entry.

The Pacheco Cattle Company's winners were: Bull, 2 years old and less than 3, Pacheco Lad 58th, first prize; senior bull calf, Pacheco Lad 100th, first prize; junior bull calf, Pacheco Lad 109th, first; cow or heifer, 2 years old and under 3, Pacheco Lass 80th, second prize; senior yearling heifer, Pacheco Lass 85th, second prize; senior heifer calf, Pacheco Lass 111th, second prize; junior heifer calf, Pacheco Lass 118th, fourth prize; aged herd, fifth prize; calf herd, first prize, and two animals of either sex, third prize.

nipping night air. Japanese growers make little paper caps to cover the young plants as they appear from the ground. A stiff wind often undoes the work of several days.

Excellent plant forcers made from waxed cardboard, with one side open for the insertion of a pane of glass represents a larger initial investment, but the saving is made in their permanency and in their excellent effects from the glass. Watermelons have been started with these forcers in early places and have enjoyed complete protection against a temperature as low as 29 deg.

An upright wire frame of circular design for tomato plants protects them until they are twenty inches high. Over this frame is slipped a manila bag at night. The frame lasts forever, the manila bag only for one season. The advantages derived from these plant protectors is not altogether from actual growth during cold weather. The protection, however, is such that the young plant does get a good foothold and as soon as the mellow days appear it is ready to shoot out and produce two weeks ahead of any plant repotted at that time.

It has been shown that heredity in wheat seed is not as important as good soil and cultural methods. Good seed, good soil and good farming count for more in crop producing than fancy variety.

A Big Thing.

MOTOR INDUSTRY'S PART IN BIG WAR SUMMED UP.

Many Uses of Gasoline Motors Told by One Who Knows the Facts.

FOLLOWING the offer of automobile manufacturers to serve the government in any way, a survey of the industry has been made by Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, to show the kinds of service the motor car is supplying and can supply in the present national crisis. Washington officials are realizing more and more that the present war is dependent upon the motor car industry in as many and possibly in more ways than upon any other industry in this country.

Armies at the front and in the training camps are supplied with food, clothing, ammunition and all other necessaries by motor trucks. The armies in Europe are already using 100,000 motor trucks in transportation service. The United States Army expects to call for 100,000 trucks for the coming year.

Many thousand motor ambulances are used for removing the wounded from the battlefields.

Paris was saved from invasion by rushing an army of 100,000 French troops in motor cars, omnibuses and taxicabs from behind Paris for the battle of the Marne. Verdun was saved by hurrying up ammunition and supplies in motor trucks when no other transportation would suffice.

British "tanks" made the break in the German line that resulted in the victory at Cambrai. These tanks are caterpillar motor tractors, a type of farm tractor developed in America.

Motor tractors are used for hauling heavy guns.

Armored motor cars have been used with success against rifle and machine-gun fire.

Many types of special motor cars are used in army work. They include cars and trucks equipped with wireless apparatus, motor searchlights, motor kitchens, motors mounting anti-aircraft guns, motor-driven emergency hospitals, motor trucks for erecting telephone and telegraph lines, etc.

Motorcycles are employed almost altogether in the war for dispatch carrying.

American automobile engineers and factories developed the Liberty airplane motor which will be built by tens of thousands in American automobile factories next year by the standardized quantity productive methods developed in this industry. It is believed these airplanes will materially help to win the war.

American automobile engineers and factories also developed the standardized United States Army motor trucks and will build many thousands during the coming year. It is only through the standardized production methods developed in the industry that it is possible to manufacture these army trucks in such large numbers and to have the parts in all of them interchangeable. This interchangeable feature will enormously reduce the number of replacement parts that the army will have to carry in stock at the repair depots.

It was the automobile business that made the airplane possible. The automobile manufacturers encouraged the steel manufacturers to evolve special alloy steels that were extraordinarily strong and light and high-speed tool steel for working these hard, tough metals.

The automobile industry also developed the high-speed gasoline engine that has been adapted to airplane and motor-boat work.

The use of motor trucks made it possible to construct the sixteen National Army cantonments in record time. They hauled most of the material used in erecting the buildings at these cantonments.

Manufacturing facilities of the motor car industry are sufficiently extensive to produce most of the materials required by the army, with the exception of foodstuffs. Leading motor car companies are already extensively engaged in manufacturing not only motor trucks, motor cars, ambulances and tractors, but are also producing on a large scale gun caissons and parts, recoil checks, mine anchors, shells, etc. It is entirely feasible for them to make steel helmets, all sorts of forgings, stampings and castings, tents, wagon covers and innumerable other articles of metal, cloth and wood. The rubber tire companies have begun making gas masks and have been making fabric for airplanes and balloons for some years.

In response to the call of the railroads' war board, motor trucks are rapidly coming to the relief of the railroads in their present critical state of congestion, to care for all short-haul freight traffic, in and around cities up to distances of twenty-five to fifty miles. This will enable the railroads to clear the tracks and particularly the terminals for through freight of utmost importance, such as coal, sugar, ore, iron and steel, grain, necessary foodstuffs of all kinds, munitions and other army supplies and troops. Taking over of short-haul work by motor trucks will release many locomotives, cars and train crews for long-haul work.

Army trucks are going to be delivered from the factories where they are built to the seaboard for shipment abroad over the public roads under their own power. They will make the trip loaded with spare parts and supplies, and will be manned by the army motor truck crews that will handle them on the other side. Thus they will avoid the use of many thousands of freight cars and hundreds of locomotives.

Officers, automobiles, ambulances and motorcycles for courier service and machine gun batteries can also be delivered by road if desired.

MOTOR EXPERTS ARE IN DEMAND

Commissions Await Persons with Ability.

Wire from Washington has the Information.

A wonderful opportunity for automobile mechanics to "do their bit" for their country is offered by the government. James G. Roe, a Detroit automobile man, who has been staying in this city for a few days, is in receipt of instructions from Washington regarding a new class of mechanics desired by the government.

Mr. Roe will leave for Washington in time to make his own application for a commission and turned the information at his command over to Harris M. Hanshue, secretary of the Los Angeles Motor Car Dealers' Association. Following is the telegram from Brig.-Gen. Squier, head of the Signal Corps:

"J. G. Roe:

"We are obliged to select with painstaking care motor vehicle shop foremen experienced in handling men who are themselves all-around mechanics capable of doing any motor vehicle repair work and directing and organizing same.

"These are the type needed abroad to serve with motor mechanics regiments now being mobilized. Prefer men over draft age. Under 28 years of age probably cannot be commissioned. The officers would be in charge of 100 assorted mechanics representing all needed trades and capable of operating as an independent unit." Must bring three letters of recommendation absolutely required to go with application for commission. They must also bring a letter showing their qualifications, present employment and salary. They must be American born or naturalized citizens. If you know of any men qualified as above desiring to serve please advise them and make the information generally known among factory and service station foremen. Your continued activity is solicited. Please bring matter to attention of first-class motor vehicle shops and large service stations. Come at your own risk if you think you are capable and can handle the shop repair work as outlined. Twenty-fourth not too late to come at your own risk and prepared to stay.

"SQUIER.
"Per Hall."

Mr. Roe was recommended for a commission by Henry B. Joy, the well-known automobile man. He states that a previous wire informs him that commissions as lieutenant or captain are open to men having shown the necessary ability.

WILL GIVE TIPS TO ALL DEALERS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Economies in the retail distribution and sale of automobiles will be discussed here Wednesday by A. W. Shaw, chairman of the Commercial Economy Board, and representatives of the various associations of automobile dealers. Retail agencies throughout the country are estimated to have an investment value of $600,000,000, and elimination of useless overhead expense is expected to affect a very large saving in their operating cost.

TRAFFIC PROBLEMS WILL BE DISCUSSED.

CHIEF BUTLER ATTENDING BIG CONVENTION HELD AT OAKLAND.

Determined to standardize as far as possible all State and local legislation for the control of automobile traffic, chiefs of police of all California cities, sheriffs of many counties, and representatives of automobile organizations and chambers of commerce gathered yesterday at the City Hall in Oakland for their organization meeting, and will continue in session today and tomorrow.

Chief of Police John L. Butler heads the delegation from the south, and as he is recognized generally as one of the leading authorities in the United States on the regulation of vehicular traffic, it is expected that his opinion will have considerable weight in the final recommendations to be made by the meeting to the next State Legislature.

The convention, presided over by Chief of Police J. H. Nedderman of Oakland, and assisted by the Chamber of Commerce of that city, has for its purpose the elimination of superfluous rules and legislation. "Diversion between State laws and city ordinances, and the difference in the ordinances of the various cities of the State have curtailed the pleasure of motoring and resulted in useless arrests and prosecutions where intent to violate the law was lacking, and where the driver was proceeding on the rules in effect in his own municipality or community," said Chief of Police Butler before leaving for the conference. "It is bewildering to the motorist and a menace to the public to have tourists from other cities enter Los Angeles and proceed on the rules that they have lawfully driven by at home. There are many traffic rules in common, but there are many more that have been added to meet the demands of purely local conditions. Undoubtedly, it will be difficult to eliminate this latter class of rules, but it may be possible to modify them. All the officials, doubtless, will come to the conference with an open mind, determined to protect both the pedestrian and the motorist, but not determined to abolish legislation where there is a demand for it. However, I believe that on such points as the legal rate of speed, passing of street cars, standing to discharge or admit passengers, the manual signals before turning, the legality of safety zones on public thoroughfares, the number and regulation of headlights, carrying of protecting loads and similar themes, there can and will be developed a common ruling.

"Such other subject as the suppression of the theft of automobiles by organized bands, regulations regarding the disposal of second-hand machines which may or may not have been stolen, and the loading and unloading of hire passenger vehicles, heavy trucks, etc., undoubtedly will be considered.

"It is regrettable that pressure of police business generally throughout the State prevents an extended conference on these subjects, which are far too complicated to be conclusively debated at a three-day session, but there is no doubt but that the importance of the themes and the determination of the delegates to simplify legal complexities and to protect the pedestrian and enhance the scope of pleasure for the motorist will result in a conscientious and advanced report on the whole situation which will be of material guidance to lawmaking bodies of both State and local jurisdiction."

This is a Good Idea.

VIGILANCE COMMITTEE TO PROTECT MOTORISTS.

Daring Lawbreakers will be Captured if Suggestion is Followed.

THE world's largest "vigilance committee" has been organized to help cope with the startling wave of automobile stealing which is inundating Southern California from the Tehachepi to the Mexican border.

Never before in the history of crime in the United States has theftdom organized so skillfully to plunder a public as right here, say the authorities. Despite the untiring efforts of the police and the theft bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, 1456 automobiles have been stolen under the very eyes of their owners this year. This is many hundreds more than were stolen in New York City for the same period.

But a ray of light is seen for the better in the most recent activity of the Automobile Club. Through its directors, letters are now being sent from the Los Angeles headquarters to each member of the club, calling him into service as a member of a monster "committee of vigilance."

Twelve thousand motorists will thus be arrayed against the theft gangs which have made this part of America their winter headquarters. Not only will the automobile owners themselves be instrumental in capturing thieves, but largely so in helping to recover stolen property.

Out of the 1456 cars stolen, 1225 have been recovered, leaving 230 as a total loss, representing a valuation of more than $170,000. Although this is a remarkable number of recoveries, considering the huge num-

DISTILLATE
PACKARD TRUCKS

Are you prepared for dependable, low-cost hauling---in any new emergency that may come?

War's demands threaten business at one crtical point–transportation for raw materials, fuel and merchandise.

Traffic tie-ups are forcing dependence on trucks and teams for what was railroad service. And army requirements are almost certain to deplete the market of horses.

To make sure of unfailing supplies and prompt deliveries, far-sighted business men are providing equipment now for broader and more exacting hauling needs to come.

Packard silent, chainless trucks are their first choice because Packard economy, range and rugged strength satisfy the twin standards they must maintain in their undertakings—dependable service and low final cost.

Burning cheap distillate instead of high-cost gasoline, the important first saving on fuel is supplemented by the proven economy of the four-speed transmission. The extra gear gives great pulling power with minimum wear and tear.

Youngsters Being Taught How to Take Care of Roads.

Prison Reform.

TRAIN YOUNG ROAD MAKERS.

Industrial School Turning Out Engineers.

West Virginia Innovation is Good One.

Practical Highway Builders Developed.

Highway engineers may in the future look to the West Virginia Industrial School for practical road builders. The boys at Pruntytown are being trained to fill the need of practical men to operate road-building machinery and to do the actual work of construction which sometimes requires quite as much skill and experience as do the positions held by college-bred engineers.

This unusual educational programme was adopted so recently that a comprehensive report cannot yet be made, but reports made to the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor indicate that the programme will be of the greatest benefit to the country and to the boys themselves.

Here are the objects:

To interest the boys in road building so that they will desire to follow the work when they are released from school.

To train them in the practical line of knowing and doing good work, such as mixing and placing of concrete, the laying and grouting of brick, running and operating machinery, all of which requires considerable skill.

If they make good and become expert in the work, the State Road Commission will be in a position to recommend them and find them employment after they are released.

While the boys are being trained, their labor will be a great help in the construction of the road planned, thereby being of immediate benefit to the community and State.

At present 50 per cent. of the grading of a brick road on a concrete base from Fetterman to Pruntytown is being done by boys.

REASONS WHY YOUR SPEEDOMETER FAILS.

When the speedometer fails to register it generally means that the flexible shaft end is not making contact with the rotating shaft of the speedometer. At the ends of both of these are flexible joints and if the shaft pulls away from the instrument even slightly there will be no registration. This is because the shaft in turning does not turn the shaft in the speedometer. The remedy is to disconnect the shaft at the instrument end, push it tightly in place and then lock it.

GOOD USE FOR OIL IN COLD WEATHER.

When the crankcase is drained, the oil after being thoroughly strained may be used in the gearset, during the cold weather. This oil is of just the right consistency to give good results in gear set lubrication at this time.

Yes, she's driving her own car now, the chauffeur's in France.

One of the results of the war has been the increased popularity of the inclosed car driven by the owner. The one shown in the photograph is a National "twelve" touring sedan, one of the niftiest creations we have see n in a long while.

We Surely Hope So.

LOS ANGELES MAY GET BIG ASSEMBLING PLANT.

"I THINK we will be assembling Republic trucks here before the end of the winter season," stated George W. Moore, treasurer of the Republic Motor Truck Company of Alma, Mich., who is in Los Angeles. Moore reached here early last week to settle, if possible, at an early date, whether the Republic assembling plant for the Coast shall be located in this city or in one of the bay cities. The president of the company, F. E. Ruggles, is expected within a few days.

The plant of the Pacific Coast Planing Mill Company on Santa Fe avenue and just across the Vernon line was purchased by the Republic company last July with a view of making it the first of six assembling stations to be established in this country. It is intended it shall serve the Pacific Coast, Central and South America, Mexico and westward overseas trade. San Francisco, it is said, has made considerable effort to have the company change its plans and locate there. Moore favors Los Angeles, although he admits that there is a difference of opinion among some of the factory officials.

"In the fiscal year recently ended, we manufactured, to be exact, 12,917 trucks of all capacities. This year our output will be doubled. We are building up an excellent trade in Mexico and in Central and South America as well as in Hawaii. Our Mexican exporting is now handled through Vera Cruz, but with the starting of an assembling plant on the Coast, probably all those shipments will go from that into Mexico by way of El Paso," said Moore. He declined to state what government work is to be handled by the Republic factory.

While here Moore is making his headquarters at the D. F. Poyer Truck Company, distributor in Southern California and Arizona of Republics. He is an ardent believer in the future of Los Angeles and he remarked that since he was here early last summer, many important building changes had been made or were in progress.

OIL AND NOT GREASE FOR THE GEARCASE.

During the colder half of the year, gearcases packed with grease will cause the gears to run practically without lubrication, because the grease sticks to the walls of the housing and little if any gets to the gear teeth. Oil and not grease is the proper lubricant for the gearcase at any rate during cold weather.

New Series.

OFFERS SPECIAL DISPLAY OF THE LATEST MODELS.

AT ONE time a majority of the season's new models appeared at the New York show in January, but each year the time was placed ahead until now new models begin appearing in June, and continue for seven or eight months. The Nordyke Marmon Company, although long ago discarding the practice of yearly models, has still retained the winter as time for the appearance of the new series.

The first of the new series was received by Al G. Faulkner a couple of days ago, and all this week a special display of open and closed cars will be held at the local display room.

The new series Marmon, like its predecessor, will be known as the 34. Important features, such as the aluminum engine, special frame and running board construction, graduated rear cross springs and other distinctive points have been retained. The windshield slopes back at a 10 deg. angle. The mounting of the latter is unusual. Instead of supports terminating at the cowl, they extend down to the main frame channels. Other small changes include a plain bearing fan instead of the ball bearing type, magnetic tank gauge, one gear for switch, gear lever and tool box locks, tonneau light and glass window in top.

In addition to the standard bodies a large assortment of special bodies will be available. The Bijur starting and lighting system will be standard equipment. The vacuum control of the oil feed will give just the proper amount of oil at all times.

The wheelbase is 136 inches, and the spring suspension that has made the Marmon one of the easiest-riding of cars has been retained.

In building the Marmon the de- [illegible] to reduce weight, increase efficiency and add to the comfort of the driver and passengers. Often one part is made to do the same work that several parts are required to do in conventional design; lighter metals have been selected to replace heavier metals without the sacrifice of strength.

Aluminum is used extensively. A large part of the engine, touring and closed car bodies fenders, hood, radiator shell, differential housing, transmission case and many other castings, generally cast iron or bronze, are of aluminum. As an example, the engine of the Marmon weighs 400 pounds less than the engine of like size and power, but of conventional type.

One of the most prominent features of the Marmon design is the use of compound cantilever cross suspension rear springs at the extreme end of the frame.

Being Practical, Efficient, Economical, with your War-time Motoring

BEFORE, the War, motor car leadership was a peculiar thing. It was impossible to estimate the worth of a car by the way the public thought of it.

Buyers were wonderfully tolerant—they forgave any make of car so long as a new model was announced for the next season.

With new features each year, additional "extras" and changes in mechanical design almost any car could gain a certain amount of popularity. It took the war to teach the most liberal public in the world that a car's performance is the measure of the car itself. That the only way to judge a car is by its record.

War Conditions Change Public's Motor Car Requirements

Before the public mind was on something else than economy in gasoline, tires and oil, utility and efficiency.

Contrast that condition with the present demand for the Franklin Touring Car.

Here is an economical, safe, reliable car, adaptable for all family requirements—a car any member of the family can drive.

It is the choice of practical men who like to see results—not read about them.

This type of buyer is increasing daily. He is learning that the first step toward a good purchase is to test all "claims" and take nothing for granted.

He is learning the facts back of the present trend toward the Franklin. The scientific principles that always make Franklin demand exceed Franklin production.

Scientific Light Weight Curtails Waste in Gasoline, Tires and Oil

The Franklin Touring Car weighs 2280 pounds—scientifically constructed of the finest materials. It is this scientific light weight that is responsible for the car's remarkable comfort, efficiency and utility. It is Direct-Air-Cooling that eliminates 177 complicated water cooling parts along with freezing, over heating and other cooling troubles.

It is a combination of scientific principles and finest materials that make the Franklin the most economical fine car in America.

Thrift in motoring is no longer optional to the car owner. It is a national necessity.

The Franklin Touring Car is fundamentally a car of thrift. It's built to economize. Facts prove it daily.

And facts are not at all a bad foundation for basing one's judgment about any car.

STILL MAKING BETTER ROADS.

Southern Counties are Active in the Good Work.

San Diego-Imperial Highway is Agitated.

New Scenic Route is Also Demanded.

Good roads activity has not stopped in Southern California, despite certain unforeseen obstacles arising from the general condition of the world affairs.

Motorists who are saying: "And where do we go from here?" will have a better chance than ever to satisfy this wanderlust, if the plans of certain communities in the southern part of the State are brought to a satisfactory conclusion.

In the interests of the large motoring fraternity, officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California have prepared a resume of the new highway work contemplated in this part of California, to indicate to those who tour that attempts are being made to provide visitors and local residents alike with brand new "happy hunting grounds."

ACTIVITY.

San Diego county, the Imperial Valley and some of the counties to the north are particularly active at this time along these lines, according to the automobile club statement. Some of the roads being sought are for utilitarian purposes, mainly, while others are frankly scheduled to open new scenic paradises.

The ever-fertile problem of providing a good route between San Diego and the Imperial country has never been allowed to die of inanition, and the coming of the winter months has made of it a live issue. With Federal assistance, say the boosters for that section, the highway between San Diego and Shepard bridge, a distance of eighty miles, may be completed within the next two years.

SOONER THE BETTER.

They feel that if it will take that long to build it, the sooner they get at it the better. It is quoted that the approximate cost of that highway would be $1,250,000, or $15,625 per mile, which seems a pretty stiff price, even in bargainless and Hoover days. However, those advocating the route in the Imperial country are apparently not daunted, and periodical "scouting trips" travel between that section and San Diego to arouse enthusiasm in the project.

There is another road matter of a different coat in the San Diego county district. It is the opening of the historically famous Lagunas paradise, of Indian lore—"a wide sweep of green glades nestled in a cup of the Laguna Mountain range of San Diego county," as its boosters term it.

HOW REACHED.

The new scenic Mecca is to be reached, according to report, from the San Diego-Imperial highway over a government road from ten to twelve miles in length and eleven and a half feet wide. That this road will be open for travel some time in February is the confident belief of those most interested in the proposition, who seem to be public-spirited citizens bent upon creating another Yosemite for Southern California.

It is to this Lagunas territory that the north came for its supply of turpentine at the time of the Civil War, according to statements made recently by the Indians in that locality, and they point with a certain amount of pride to gashes in the pine trees there, which have never quite healed. This highway project does not seem to be press-agented by any other than the good roads men of the southern counties.

LATERAL LINE.

In San Luis Obispo county, support has been pledged by the Supervisors for the building of the lateral line to connect with the State highway at Paso Robles. This lateral will be built from Bakersfield and the county's share of the expense will be $426,000. The Supervisors have called a mass meeting for this month, when plans will be discussed whether the county shall raise the funds by a bond issue or by direct taxation extending over a period of four years.

Even with the cessation of the majority of highway construction at this time, due to the Federal embargo on cars for the hauling of cement and building material, steps are being taken in the right direction, point out Automobile Club of Southern California officials, in preparing for more good road work when the embargo is lifted and this kind of improvement can again be put under way.

TOURIST OWNS FIVE CARS OF ONE MAKE.

EASTERNER WHO WILL WINTER HERE HAS REAL STABLE OF GAS MACHINES.

A. D. Smith, founder of the Smith Form-a-Truck Company, who with his family drove to Los Angeles from their home in Chicago in a Stearns-Knight eight-cylinder touring car, is the owner of a "stable" of automobiles and five of them bear the "Knight" trade mark. The Stearns-Knights owned by Smith include a limousine, eight and four-cylinder tourings, coupe and chummy. With his family he will spend the winter in Southern California.

A shipment of cars now on the way from the factory to Lynn C. Buxton, Stearns-Knight distributor for Southern California includes three owned by easterners, who will arrive shortly in Los Angeles for the winter. One of these Stearns-Knights is owned by a brother of Paul Shoup. "And I am advised that many others are to follow," said Buxton.

A feature of the new Stearns-Knight chummy is the third door which is placed on the right-hand side and which provides entrance and exit for the passengers on the rear seat without disturbing those in front. It is a nifty job and is pointed to with pride by Buxton, so long as he can keep one on his salesroom floor.

Elgin Six

"The Car of the Hour"

Distinction and Comfort

The Elgin Six is the only car selling for less than $1,250 which has the fashionable center cowl and the "V" type radiator of the high-priced European models. Its beautiful yacht line design was established by a famous artist and gives the Elgin Six a style and distinction that set it apart from the monotonous design of the average car.

Elgin engineers have perfected an improved rear spring suspension, found only in the Elgin Six, which sets a new standard of motoring ease and comfort at high speeds, reducing shock and vibration to a point not surpassed in any car at any price.

The special construction of the Elgin velvet-acting clutch enables the Elgin Six to be started on high gear, eliminating to a large degree the necessity of gear shifting, under ordinary conditions, thus removing the last barrier to the safe and easy handling of a motor car by women.

Endurance and Economy

The Elgin Six, now in its second triumphant year, has stood "The Acid Test" by winning perfect scores and highest honors in some of the most gruelling endurance and economy runs of the past year.

Three Elgin Sixes, on a hard two days' run, under the auspices of the Chicago Motor Club, made perfect scores and averaged 25.6 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

The Elgin Six has established a new record of 1,626 car-racking stamina-testing miles in 67 1/2 hours between Chicago and Miami, Fla., over the steep, rocky mountain grades of Kentucky and Tennessee, the heavy sands of Georgia, and the slimy, treacherous swamp roads of Florida.

Many other remarkable Elgin performances have firmly established the Elgin as a Mechanical Masterpiece and the champion for long-sustained speed, endurance and economy.

SPEEDY RUN MADE THROUGH VALLEY.

One of the fastest drives on record between Oakland and Los Angeles was recently made by Al Bennett in his Glide light six. Leaving Oakland in the "wee small hours of the morning" he arrived in Los Angeles in time to eat his evening meal with his friends, the exact running time being thirteen hours and fifteen minutes.

Mr. Bennett claims that he knows nothing about the racing game, but having owned the Glide for many months without having the opportunity to find out what it would do, he decided to "let her out" on this trip. The valley route, over which the run was made, proved to be in very good shape and almost free from detours and obstructions. The run was made from Bakersfield to the center of Los Angeles in only four hours.

In talking with Mr. Bennett he states that he bought the Glide car from C. S. Anthony, the Southern California distributor, because he knew of the reputation of Glide cars through the Middle West, where the majority of them have been sold.

Columbia Six

That Something—

You cannot define it—that makes you walk over to the curb to see what make of car is standing there—that quickly draws a small crowd of others equally interested—is conspicuous in the Columbia Six.

"That something" that makes the driver who has been passed eager to see the name on the hub caps of the streak that has gone by, and then wish he had a car like it—

"That something" that stirs your pride as you go gliding up the city street or speeding along the country road—

"That something" that makes women remark—"What a beauty" and men exclaim—"It certainly is a pippin"—

"That something" that makes the small boy's eyes kindle as he says "I wish Dad would get a Columbia Six."—

You can't appraise it. But you can sense it the minute you see a Columbia Six.

It isn't just the winsome beauty of the car nor is it just the power. It's a combination of these with "That something" that you cannot weigh, measure or describe. It is as elusive as the sparkle of a diamond is elusive, but it is just as real, just as captivating—just as genuine.

And it must be IN the car ALL THROUGH or it simply can't shine out.

Sooner or later it will win YOU to the Columbia Six. Buy now while the price is still $1495 Los Angeles.

HINTS TO DRIVERS

FROM MY EXPERIENCE

BY BARNEY OLDFIELD

JOIN an automobile club. Be an active member. Persuade your friends to follow suit. And work. Make your club an active, live organization, keeping it busy in furthering the interests of motorists. Help others and at the same time reap benefits yourself.

I have seen so much good work done by clubs that I am an absolute enthusiast on the subject. Every motorist in America should be a member of an active association. He owes it to himself as well as to his community, for clubs not only help individuals, but do much civic work worthy of praise.

Following up the good of the local association the big national body lends a helping hand the country over. All clubs should be affiliated with a national organization. In this country the parent body which does nation-wide work is the American Automobile Association. Its activities are felt in all lines of endeavor which are for the betterment of motoring. It nationalizes the local club's efforts.

It is the local organization which lends its benefits mostly and particularly to the individual owner. It furnishes him with a meeting place for the discussion of motor subjects. It keeps him informed of all matters vital to local driving—from road conditions to epidemics of auto stealing. It brings him in touch with his fellows of the motor circle and gives him opportunities to consult them on all kinds of car subjects.

But the greatest good done by the local motor club is of civic character. Laws are reformed at the suggestions of studious motorists. Roads are built upon the preachments of club members. Thieves are caught by the activities of the association. Tips are given on every side resultant from experiences of fellow-clubmen. Sign boards are placed, tours outlined and hundreds of well-paying undertakings performed through club efforts.

I know many miles of fine roadway built exclusively through the instigation and untiring work of motor clubs. I know of many thousands of signboards, warning notices and helpful bulletins erected and distributed by clubmen. I know of speed traps made useless and of many frights to motorists removed through organizations. I know of so many good things done by clubs which individuals could not have accomplished that I want to lend any influence my words may have to the upbuilding of motor associations.

Be a good citizen and good motorist by joining your local club. It will pay you. If there isn't a club convenient, organize one.

Probably more good work has been done by the Automobile Club of Southern California than any other single association in the United States. This is said with a full realization of the wonderful activities by other clubs. But the Californians have been particularly active for years and the club is generally referred to as an ideal organization.

Realizing the great drawing power of good roads in a community and the powerfully paying investment of such, this club has not only gone out and worked for the building and maintenance of roads, but has done much to keep them ideal for motorists. Signboards, warning boards, road condition reports and all the thousand and one detail performances possible to excellent motoring conditions have been accomplished. And yet the club is more active today than at any time in the past. It is a wonderful club to pattern after.

Thousands are drawn from all parts of the country to California because of the civic virtues shown by this club. It pays all classes of citizens, and is consequently fostered by many who are not motorists.

Nineteen Hundred and Eighteen will not see any automobile racing in America unless the sport is of an outlaw character. This will play havoc to some tremendous investments and will take from the public one of the finest sports which serve to relieve the depression of war. I am of the opinion that this step was most unwise and do not believe it is in sympathy with the wishes of President Wilson and his advisers. Time and time again President Wilson has asked that the sports continue. He has insisted upon baseball, football and other games.

It strikes me that if most of the sports are to continue, surely automobile racing should not be barred. The majority of racing drivers are past service age, though I admit they could be of service one way or another. But I honestly believe that such men as Chevrolet, De Palma, Mulford, Cooper and Hearne could render a great service to our country by continuing the sport. However, I am willing to yield my opinion and lock up my cars until the sport can be resumed under full authority.

The owners of the great speedways will suffer most from this ruling. Especially is this true with reference to the board tracks. The deterioration in these plants will be enormous and if the ruling continues through 1919, the effect will be almost ruinous for the majority of plants. The brick course at Indianapolis will be about the only track not to suffer.

TIPS FOR MAKING TERMINAL CONNECTION.

In making an ordinary connection to a battery terminal, the stripped end of the wire should be wound around the binding post in a clockwise direction. When the screw is tightened, it will be turned to the right and with the wire wound in the same direction, there is a tendency for it to wrap all the tighter around the post. When the wire is wrapped the other way around, it tends to unwrap when the screw is tightened.

"Jordan will tell you that green is the softest and most pleasing color because nature chose it for the grass, while red is the most striking shade shown for the reason that nature chose it for the setting sun. They told me at the factory that he goes into stores, selects various-colored ribbons, lays them on a table, their edges overlapping, and studies them for new shades that will appeal to women. And it is said of him that he is always digging into other departments in much the same way," continued Weaver.

Some of the 1918 Jordans now on the way and which include sport limousines, broughams, sedans and the striking new "sportsmarine," have the Jordan colors in greens, tans, blues and maroons. These cars should be on the Seager salesroom floors the latter part of this week, it is expected.

USED-CAR MARKET IS MUCH IMPROVED.

There has been a marked improvement in the used car market, according to John T. Dye, one of the largest dealers on the Pacific Coast, who states that the early influx of tourists, in considerable measure, accounts for the briskness in sales.

"There are many who come to Southern California for the winter and who, upon their arrival in Los Angeles begin looking about for a good used car. As a rule this class of buyers figure it is cheaper to let their own car remain in the garage back home, buy a used car for use during the winter and then dispose of it a small discount when they are ready to go back East. If you will use just a little thought, you will find that such purchasers save considerable by such a method," said Dye.

LOS ANGELES TO SAN DIEGO
5 DAY ECONOMY RUN

Remarkable economy run completed by light truck.

Here is Frank M. Houser congratulating the driver of the Maxwell one-ton truck following the successful completion of a six-day run between Los Angeles and San Diego, carrying a large overload of Violet Brand Shortening.

Real Economy.

REMARKABLE RECORD IS MADE BY LOADED TRUCK.

TWENTY and three-tenths miles per gallon of gasoline, made under a load totaling more than 50 per cent. greater than its rated capacity, is the sensational record of the Maxwell truck which completed a remarkable series of three round trips from Los Angeles to San Diego, last Thursday.

Complete data on truck economy records is not available, but it is believed this is a world's economy record for vehicles of its type, and the facts of the runs show that the Maxwell carrier made an endurance and consistency showing equal in importance to its economy record.

The high gasoline mileage figure was made on the last lap of the trip, when the truck was carrying its ponderous load from San Diego to Los Angeles, but the figure made on the going trip the day previous totaled 17.6 miles per gallon in spite of a sand storm between Santa Ana and Irvine.

The series of three round trips carried the Maxwell truck a total distance of 792 miles. The route includes such barriers to economy as several miles of rough, dirt road, innumerable small hills and the formidable Torrey Pines grade.

The running time for the three round trips was 50h., 15m. In this length of time the Maxwell truck carried 19,230 pounds of a Los Angeles-made shortening in cartons.

The weight of the truck chassis is 2500 pounds. The load carried on this sturdy chassis consisted of the truck body, cab, two men (driver and observer,) extra tank of gasoline and 3205 pounds of shortening, the overload of shortening representing 1205 pounds more than the rated one-ton capacity of the Maxwell truck. The record made by the truck is all the more remarkable because of this heavy overload, and it is certain that had pneumatic tires been used, and a load of only one-ton been carried the gasoline mileage would have almost equaled that of the average small touring car.

No devices for increasing economy were resorted to, the entire run being made in exactly the same manner an owner-driver would put his truck through a series of similar trips. The truck was almost new, and could hardly be said to have been thoroughly limbered up before the start of the great feat.

That the remarkable 20.3 mile figure was made came purely by way of incident, as the demonstration was planned simply as a test of the utility of the truck in carrying semi-perishable commodities over what is known in railroad parlance as a "short haul."

The demonstration was made jointly by the Lord Motor Car Company and the Hauser Packing Company, the former concern furnishing the truck and the latter supplying the ponderous load of their shortening, a semi-perishable article. In view of the fact that the Hauser company is supplying enormous quantities of provisions to the soldiers stationed at Camp Kearny, this trucking demonstration has added interest from a military standpoint, for it proved conclusively that should there be a serious shortage in freight equipment the boys at the camp would not be without "chow" at its proper time. So practical did the test prove trucking to be in making short hauls that predictions have been made a trucking caravan running on regular schedule and carrying supplies from various Los Angeles firms may soon be put on the road between here and San Diego.

"As compared with the cost of sending a like amount of supplies by freight, plus the cost of drayage at both ends of the line, this series of runs made by the Maxwell truck has proved not only that the freight car has a dangerous rival in the truck on short haul transportation, but that the truck is very much ahead of the freight car in both speed and economy, with the added advantage that the truck takes its load at the warehouse in Los Angeles and delivers it at any point desired, obviating the necessity of drayage charges," said Harry A. Lord yesterday.

"Every part of this run was carefully checked by an observer appointed by the Hauser Packing Company. The load was weighed on State-inspected scales, and certificates to this effect are on file in our salesroom. The truck was stock in every respect, and none of the devices often resorted to for boosting gasoline mileage figures were employed. Solid tires were used, and the truck was driven exactly as an owner would have driven it. Its load of 3205 pounds was greater by 1205 pounds than the rated capacity of the truck, and exceeded the average load used on one-ton vehicles in the service of owners. The showing made by the Maxwell truck has been most gratifying, and has been a decided surprise."

AUTOMOBILE FINISH NEEDS PROTECTION.

COLD WEATHER IS HARD ON PAINT UNLESS PROPER CARE IS GIVEN.

Now that winter weather is here again, the problem of proper care of the automobile finish comes forward. Providing the car owner uses a little care during the cold weather, he need not have his car finish marred to any marked extent.

The paint of a car is composed of three principal parts, First, the foundation or priming coats; second, the color, and, third, the protective coat. The protective coat is a heavy, hard surface of transparent varnish, which protects the softer coloring base from the inroads of the weather. If this protective coat is kept firm, the color coats will hold their original brilliancy.

The following advice on the care of the automobile finish in winter has just been received by L. V. Starr, vice-president of the J. W. Leavitt & Co., distributors for the Oldsmobile for the State:

"Never try to wash the car out in the cold. Take it in where it is moderately warm. Then use clear, cold water. The cold water will harden the varnish on a new car, thereby preventing abrasion. If you use any soap at all, use only a limited amount, as free acid or alkali tends to soften the finish. Soak the mud thoroughly with a small stream of water until it is washed away. Never use hot water and in drying it, avoid the use of a chamois that contains any sand or grit. If polish is necessary, use a good grade, then rub off the surplus.

"Never allow a car of fine finish to stand in a barn or stable where animals are kept. Ammonia caused by refuse will check and ruin the finish.

"Don't store in a garage that is overheated. This caution applies to what is probably the greatest enemy of the fine body finish. There are people who may think the above extraordinary, but there are any number of garages in this part of the State that are heated in the winter time.

"In an overheated garage, the body of the car expands gradually. If the car is then placed out in the cold, there is bound to be a certain amount of contraction. The sudden contraction in cooling causes the paint to check. Bearing in mind this direction along with those given before, those who own good cars and have taken a pride in their finish, will be able to drive throughout the winter months without severely damaging the finish."

TIRE FIGURES ARE QUITE STAGGERING.

In the ten Southern California counties there are 127,504 automobiles, of which number 79,956 are in Los Angeles county. Because of the ideal weather conditions and network of more than 10,000 miles of real good roads in this territory, motorists travel persistently. They travel probably more than motorists in any other part of the United States, and at the same time they get a greater mileage from their tires, which again shows the economy of good roads.

It is conservatively estimated that in view of intensive motor travel in the Southland that an average of six tires a year are purchased for each motor car. This would give the ten southern counties an annual tire bill of 762,224 tires, and Los Angeles would buy 479,736 of these casings. An ultraconservative estimate of five tires to the car would even produce the staggering total of 635,270 casings for the southern territory and 399,780 for Los Angeles county alone.

With prices varying considerable and changing from time to time, it is difficult to reach a definite average cost of tires, but $25 each will come fairly close, for the sake of argument. On that basis the 762,224 tires consumed annually in Southern California would cost a total of $19,058,100, and Los Angeles county would be spending $1,998,900 for 79,956 casings.

To accommodate such an energetic army of twentieth century explorers on rubber tires is no small task for the tire dealer. He must buy in carload lots and buy often. An example of the tremendous scope of the business was given last week, when the Tire Company of California received a single shipment of six carloads of casings numbering 4378. It is "some load," as Manager Shiffner described it, but he is accustomed to quick action.

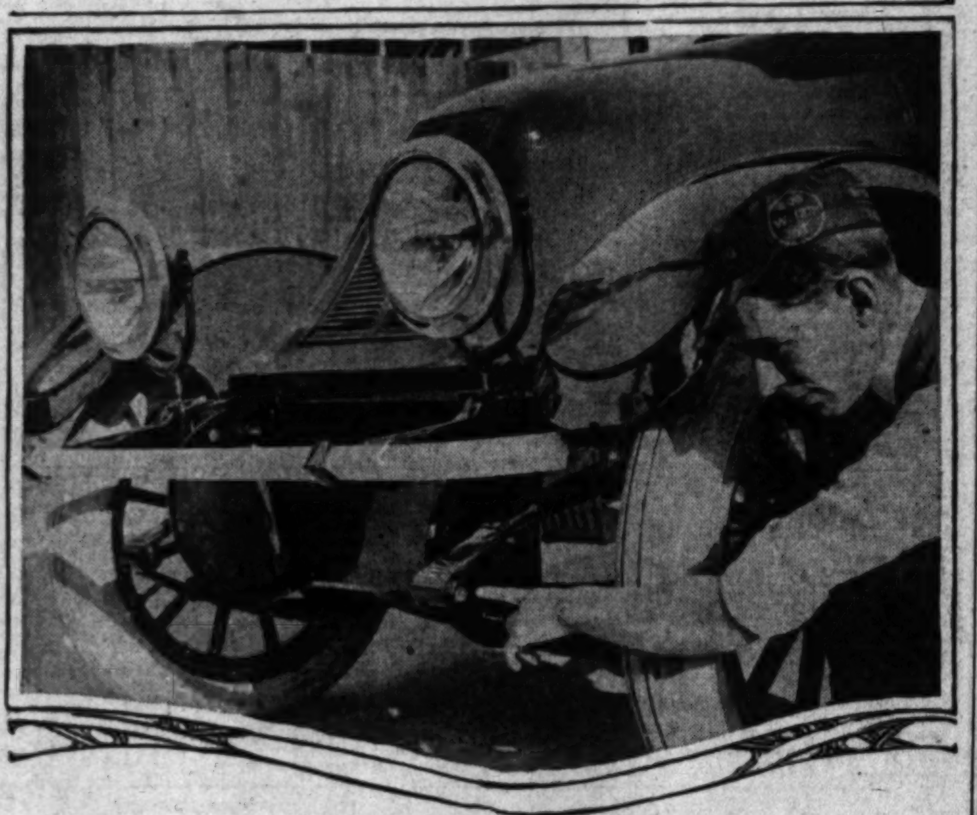
Accuracy Essential in Automobile



Accuracy to an infinite degree.

The modern automobile is built by the use of the most complicated machinery, and the automatically adjusted nut on the spring clip of the Franklin car is being pointed out by Earl Weaver as an example. This is regulated by an automatic nut driver which is so adjusted that the clutch slips when the proper tension has been reached and therefore all nuts are tightened to the same tension.

Protect Motorists.

ber of machines taken, the automobile club directors and the police department wish to reduce it by 60 per cent.

That this 60 per cent. reduction in the loss to motorists can be accomplished with the full membership of the big motoring organization working with the authorities is the statement of officials of the club's theft bureau, which has been in operation three years, and knows more about the motor car stealing tricks of thieves than any other one body in the United States.

Since the Automobile Club started in to actively combat the theft situation here its bureau has recovered 620 automobiles, stolen from their owners. Now all the club members will work hand in hand with the bureau.

It was pointed out yesterday that there will be approximately 5000 resolute motor car owners enlisted in the mammoth drive in the city of Los Angeles alone, with an additional 600 in Hollywood.

San Diego, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, Riverside, Pomona, Redlands, Pasadena and other Southern California cities will each have its hundreds of motorists working to stop the thieves—not only by locking their own cars, but by being actively engaged in the work of apprehending thefts and reporting suspicious circumstances.

Just what is expected of those asked to join in the movement is shown in the following letter which is being mailed to all automobile club members this week:

"Automobile thefts are increasing at an alarmingly rapid rate, notwithstanding the fact that the automobile theft bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California has succeeded, since its inauguration three years ago, in recovering 620 automobiles and in apprehending 121 automobile thieves.

"We therefore deem it advisable to make even more strenuous efforts, if possible, to put a stop to this increase in motor car theft, and to this end we are asking your zealous co-operation in assisting this bureau by reporting to it, or to your respective police authorities, whatever comes to your attention relating to abandoned cars on public or private thoroughfares, or left in public or private garages; cars being offered for sale at ridiculously low prices or persons renting private garages under suspicious circumstances; persons other than dealers offering for sale tires or accessories—in fact, anything that may pertain to automobile thievery.

"Again impressing upon you the necessity of your earnest co-operation, and thanking you in advance for the same, we remain, the "AUTOMOBILE CLUB OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA."

Genuine Efficiency.

CLOSEST ACCURACY PART OF AUTOMOBILE BUSINESS.

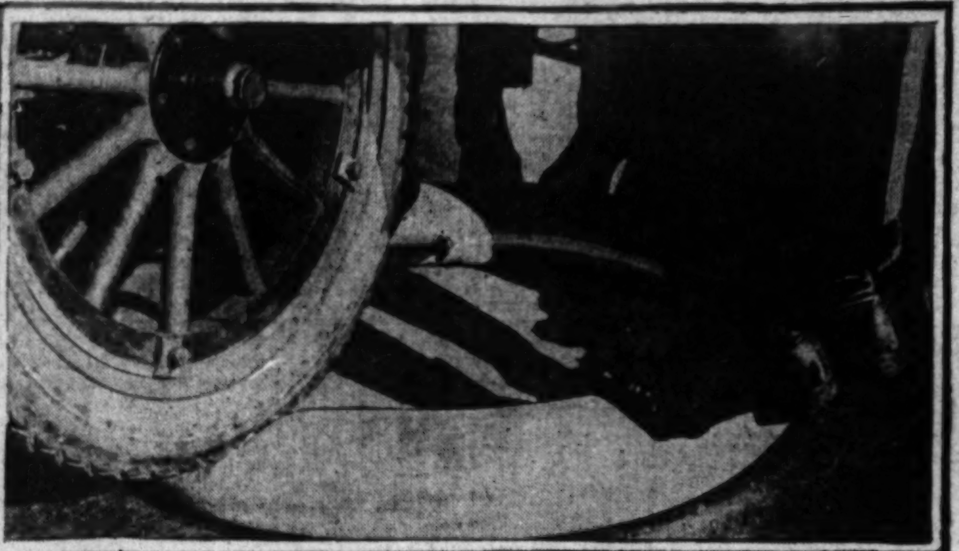
ONE one-thousandth of an inch represents one-third of the thickness of a human hair. Instruments so finely adjusted that they measure to this degree of accuracy are in use in many departments of the Franklin Automobile Company. The fallibility of man is reckoned with, and to prevent the possibility of making a mistake automatic tools are used. As an example, the tension of the spring clips on Franklin cars is regulated by the automatic nut driver operated by compressed air, which is so adjusted that when the proper tension has been reached the clutch slips and further tightening is prevented. It is impossible to tighten one nut more than another.

Very few motorists realize that the modern automobile represents the highest development in manufacturing, when the number of automatic devices that are used in its construction are considered. In the Franklin factory at Rochester, N. Y., are a number of machines that Ralph Hamlin, the Franklin dealer in Los Angeles, says do humanly impossible things. Every visitor to the factory always shows deep interest in the advanced methods of manufacture, the special machinery and fine instruments, all of which have been devised for the perfection of the famous air-cooled car.

An inspection of the multiple drills will show how time is conserved. The Franklin company is a leader in war-time efficiency. Some of these drills are used in making the holes in the crankcase, and work that formerly required an hour and a half by single drills is now accomplished in one and one-half minutes.

The Franklin company, like others, formerly cut out the material for the tops and side curtains one piece at a time by hand shears. Now the work is done by an electrically-driven cutter that cuts from twenty-six to one hundred pieces at one and the same time, depending upon the thickness of the material.

All the screw holes in the crank and sill are drilled simultaneously and to exactly the same depth. The machine which accurately locates all screw holes and cuts the countersink at a very rapid rate is one of the most interesting in the wood shop. Second only to this, Mr. Hamlin says, is the magazine screw driver, which feeds the screw automatically and drives it to a uniform depth along the entire length of the frame.



Alas, if all inner tubes would do this.

Here is a real test of pressure on an inner tube. Pumped up to sixty pounds pressure four large and lumpy young men parked themselves, with both feet on the tube and another party drove one wheel of his automobile on just to see what would happen. This tube is the Palmer Sea Island cord and the photograph shows that it stood up under the test.

EASTERNERS WILL COME HERE EARLY.

That many easterners who are planning to visit Southern California this winter will come early and so avoid any hindrance that might exist if the government takes charge of the railroads is the belief of Roy R. Meads, general manager of the Pacific Rubber Company, distributor of the Horseshoe tires.

"There are many in the East who fear if the government assumes charge of the railroads that passenger travel may be restricted by the removing of certain trains from existing schedules in order that troops and munitions may be moved more freely. I know this feeling exists by correspondence I have received," declared Meads. "These people—that is, a great many—want to get to California and presumably are not going to worry about getting back after they get here."

CHESS.

As previously announced in these columns, E. W. Gruer, formerly of San Francisco, has permanently located in Los Angeles. Having met him twice in telegraph matches, both of which games were drawn, considerable interest attached to our first face-to-face meeting on December 2. We played two games, each winning one. The first will be found below and the second will be given next week.

Now, with Gruer, Rubenstein and Drouillard, former 'Frisco players, here, the new talent, such as Testa, Stephenson and Fawcett looming up, and the old stand-bys, Waterman, L'Hommede, etc., still on the job, we should be able to put out a chess fleet that would sink anything this side of Chicago, especially if we could get some of the old-timers, such as Perry, Peterson, Whipple, Woodward and Struve, to take an active interest. We particularly need Admiral Perry to take charge and infuse us with the "Los Angeles expects every man to do his duty" spirit. Perhaps a match could be arranged for Washington's Birthday. Think it over, Admiral!

a—An unusual move, either P-Q4 or P-Q3 being more frequently played. P-K3 or P-QB3 may also be adopted. I find the move was adopted by Mieses against Capablanca back in 1913, although I had before running across this game sent a short analysis of it to the British Chess Magazine, thinking it a novelty.

b—This is the idea and was not played by Mieses. Black forces the exchange before White can get his pawn to K4, so as to compel him to retake with the QBP and not the KP.

c—In answer to this move, White could play P-K4 at once, as if knight took, he would have Q-R4 ch. For the same reason on Black's next B-B4 would be useless, although P-KKT3 might be a good variant.

d—Kt-Kt5, to follow with P-B4, was probably better.

e—Compelling Black to either take at once or retire, giving White the opportunity for P-KKt4 later.

f—Preventing P-QKt4, which might be followed by a demonstration on the queen's side.

g—White declares his intention with this move of proceeding with an attack by P-KKt4.

h—White naturally prefers to retain his queen's bishop rather than the king's, as the former has far more liberty.

i—KtxB was better.

j—A wild advance, to which the loss of the game may be ascribed. Black counted on White's reply P-B3, when P-R5; B-R2, Kt-R4 followed by Kt-B5 would have followed, but the actual reply of White is much better.

k—Black is in a bad way here, so tries a little diversion on the queen's side.

l—Well played and much better than the obvious Q B7 ch.

m—If king moves, R-B7 follows and if Q-K3, there is P Q7.

n—Forces Black's reply, as now both bishop and knight are attacked.

MOTOR TRUCKS MAKE DELIVERY PROMPT.

GROCERY FINDS ITS MACHINES AVERAGE SIXTY MILES EACH DAY.

Because of the demand of customers that their supplies be brought to them and without unnecessary delay, speed in delivery has become one of the most essential assets to any successful retail merchandising concern. Due to the greater speed and larger radius, practically all the large retail business firms have standardized upon motor delivery. Merchants know full well that a satisfied customer is the best adjunct they can have and nothing proves more satisfactory than promptness in delivery. This can be brought about through the use of a light truck better than in any other way that has yet been devised, according to W. O. Gates of the Smith Form-a-Truck Sales Company.

Included in the delivery service of one of the largest retail grocers in Los Angeles are six Smith Form-a-Trucks. A detailed report of the trucks is kept daily and this shows that they average almost sixty miles each day. Special bodies were built for these trucks and in conformance to the delivery system they leave the store loaded to full capacity, which is one and one-half tons. It has been found more practical to load the trucks to capacity and furnish the driver with a definite route than permit him to run about aimlessly with only a partial load. This improved service not only builds up the business, but it holds it and makes the profits.

ANGELENO SENDS WORD FROM FRONT.

MAJ. RYUS, VETERAN AUTO MAN, WITH PERSHING IN FRANCE.

Maj. H. D. Ryus, one of the veteran automobile dealers of the Coast, has been with Pershing in France almost from the start of American participation in the European war. He left his office in San Francisco and was near the firing line within six weeks.

Ryus has written many interesting letters home, Don Lee receiving a note from him last week, telling the Cadillac distributor that the former Los Angeles dealer had under his charge a fleet of Cadillac eights that are doing great work. His letter follows:

Office headquarters, First Division,
American expeditionary forces,
France, Nov. 12.

From Maj. H. D. Ryus, Q. M., U.S. R., to Don Lee, San Francisco, Cal. Subject, Cadillac touring cars:

(1.) I thought it would interest you to know officially that Cadillac cars are at the front, and that your old friend and competitor in the automobile business is handling a good big fleet of 1917 Cadillac touring cars that are doing some wonderful work under the most severe circumstances and standing up to the service in splendid shape. No car was ever called upon to do more, and so far not one has failed us.

Yours for success,
H. D. RYUS,

STAR SALESMAN IS GIVEN NEW POSITION.

STUDIES AUTO TRADE FROM A TO Z AND PROMOTION IS HIS REWARD.

Robert E. Breyer, for the past five years one of the leading salesmen in the Don Lee Los Angeles house, was promoted last week by Manager J. E. Brown to the position of sales manager. Breyer immediately took over his new duties.

During the time Breyer had been in the Don Lee employ he has sold more Cadillac cars than any other salesman and has been a consistent winner of the sales contests. He has made a thorough study of salesmanship and the car he sold, with a result that for the past four years he has lectured on the cut open chassis at the motor car shows in Los Angeles and San Francisco. He has also talked before local organizations on motor cars and their construction.

ENCLOSED CARS IN USE BY THE ARMY.

The United States government has placed the stamp of approval on the inclosed type of motor cars. The officers of the army will be supplied with cars of this description, the four-door Cole eight sedan having been adopted. This car is known as the five-in-one model because of the variety of adaptations to which the body may be put, and these are said to have made it preferred for officers' equipment. The Cole eight distributers in Southern California, the Irving Motor Car Company, has been notified that an increase in the price of these cars will become effective January 1. It will amount to $200 on the touring and Tuxedo roadster models.

WIRE INSPECTION SHOULD BE FREQUENT.

One of the inspections that should be frequently made is of the wiring system to see that insulation, contacts, etc., are intact. Especially in the one wire system poor insulation will cause endless trouble, as in this method of wiring only one ground is necessary to cause a short circuit. In making these inspections each wire should be traced from end to end and every intermediate contact should be examined.

You should try this cute little climb some day.

This is the back of the Knob Hill testing ground on wich many of our local salesmen demonstrate their cars. This rear grade is a very steep one, which is not tackled by many. The car shown is an Apperson eight, driven by E. W. Johnson, who takes it in second gear.

Straight From The Shoulder

Fourteen months ago we came to Los Angeles, hung out our shingle—rolled up our sleeves and inaugurated a policy of "square dealing" that has more than justified itself.

The best advertisements we write today are owners' orders—every owner of a Leach sold car is a "Dyed-in-the-Wool" booster.

Why?

—Because it has never been an effort with us to please—it is a pleasure to put ourselves out to thoroughly satisfy each and every one of our customers.

—Because we stand unreservedly for a "square deal"—we insist on owners' satisfaction with no "ifs" or "buts."

—Beause we carry four lines of motor cars—the Dort, the world's record economy car—the King "8," the only car adopted for U. S. Marine Corps light armored cars; the Liberty Six, the family car; and the Premier, the Aluminum Six, with magnetic gear shift—each the leader in its price class and rightly suited to the purse of those in each respective walk of life.

If you want real motor car owner service and an "honest-to-goodness" square deal, you will buy your next motor car from Leach. Remember! Four lines to choose from—ranging in price from $825 to $2450, delivered here—the Dort, the Liberty, the King and the Premier.

Hudson Again Is the Mode In Fine Closed Cars

The leadership long held by Hudson as a builder of fine closed cars is more pronounced than ever this Fall. The Fall models are beautiful, faultless in finish and design—correct in every detail. The individuality and smartness of the Hudson Limousines and Town Cars are reflected in more expensive custom-made bodies, for Hudson sets closed car mode.

This year the body lines are slightly changed—not extreme—but sufficiently different so as to never appear commonplace. Rich, quiet colors with costly fittings of exquisite design characterize the interiors.

There is none of the sluggishness in Hudsons so generally found in cars of the closed type. The powerful Super-Six motor with its great flexibility and smoothness gives Hudson closed cars buoyancy and a reserve strength that is sufficient for any emergency.

Reasonably prompt deliveries can be guaranteed if selections are made early.

Interesting.

CLOSED CARS WILL BE ON DISPLAY THIS WEEK.

DURING the coming week the exhibition of Chalmers closed models at the Greer-Robbins salesrooms will be of much importance to local motorists. The complete line of the latest inclosed cars will be on display.

The Chalmers factory is among the first manufacturers to realize that their closed vehicles must always be censored by discriminating women, consequently they have always striven for the regal. Like other makes of "rolling palaces," they have in past years copied much from European dictation. This year, however, the Chalmers engineers and designers have reached out with a broad, fine, original touch of design which strikes one at first glance as "enthusiastically righ," and a closer inspection of the details develops a bewildering attention to detail.

The latest closed creations which are to be on display are as follows: Limousine, limousine landaulet, town car, sedan and cabriolet.

The motor, the "Chalmers Record Motor," is, of course, the latest thing mechanical, high-powered and built to develop all the possible power out of the low-grade gasoline which now prevails in the automobile fuel market.

Simplicity.

"ABSENCE OF VIBRATION" MAKES HIT; SELLS CAR.

THE sale of one of the new sixteen-valve Stutz cars was made last week purely on the "absence of vibration," which is one of the characteristics of this car, and which is based on so simple a principle that it is easy for the layman to readily grasp it.

"Simplicity has been the one thing which Harry Stutz and his engineers have been working around," says Walter M. Brown of the Walter M. Brown Company, the distributors here for this car," and a glance under the hood of a Stutz shows that this is the keynote of the wonderful smoothness of power which is found. "Working on the quite apparent assumption that four cylinders are more simple and more desirable than a multiplicity of cylinders, other things being equal, it is quickly seen also that the counter-balancing of a four-cylinder crankshaft is accomplished with the least trouble, and with the greatest possible accuracy.

"So smooth is the working of this mechanism," says Mr. Brown, "that there is absolutely no vibration, but a perfectly smooth operation throughout, and when this was explained to a certain customer this last week and a demonstration given it sold the car immediately."

Comparison.

CLAIM AUTO DASH HARDER THAN STINSON AIR TRIP.

CONSIDERING that it took Katherine Stinson, the aviatrix, seven hours to fly from Los Angeles to San Francisco in practically an air line and without a stop, the performance of Ted Beaudet, who drove a Cadillac eight between the two points in 9 hours and 38 minutes, becomes all the more remarkable.

Beaudet made his great drive at night, nineteen months ago, and while the nervy woman's feat of being the first to travel, non-stop, between the two points in an airplane is one deserving the greatest praise, it cannot be denied that from a standpoint of speed, Beaudet overcame difficulties equal to those of the flyer.

The route traveled by the airplane must have been fully forty miles shorter than the automobile road, as there are no mountain grades or twisting canyon roads. Truly the air currents are treacherous and often difficult to overcome, but there are not the dangers of taking turns too fast or slipping off the road into the soft dirt or sand at the side of the highway.

The airplane traveled at sixty-two miles an hour for most of the distance. To maintain his schedule it was necessary for the Cadillac to travel over eighty miles an hour at times. Another remarkable feature of the Beaudet trip was the fact that the last 100 miles was made in a light rain.

Needs Passport.

TAKES HARD RIDE ON THE MEXICAN SIDE OF BORDER.

THE line between California and Lower California is by no means an imaginary affair these days, according to J. S. Woollacott of the Harold L. Arnold organization, who returned last week from a business trip into Lower California. Woollacott drove the famous Death Valley Dodge from Tia Juana to Tecate, on the Mexican side of the line, over a road that was hardly worthy of the name.

"As far as passports are concerned, it is just as much trouble to go to Tia Juana as to Paris," said Woollacott yesterday. "You need a full-fledged passport to get across the line. Before you can get it you must thoroughly convince Uncle Sam's officials that you are not an alien enemy or a draft evader, and that you are going for business and not pleasure, and be vouched for by a citizen and a property owner. Then with your picture and full description on your passport you can get across the line.

"Naturally you can imagine what these regulations are doing to the towns across the border. Tia Juana looks like a summer resort in January. It was the travel from over the line that made that town, of course, and there simply isn't any travel these days.

"I drove from Tia Juana to Tecate over what certainly deserves the medal as the prize bad road. Sand, rocks, mud, chuck-holes, gulleys and cross-washes grow on that road in greater luxuriance than I have ever seen elsewhere. But old Death Valley Dodge ambled over it without a particle of trouble, despite her 50,000 miles of rough service. I did not even have a puncture on the entire trip.

"At Tecate I crossed the line back to the American side. From what I saw of the way that soldiers are guarding the line, I certainly would not want to try and get across without a passport.

"The road on the American side of the line from Tecate to San Diego over the Poteerp grade is in the worst condition I have ever seen it. If you are looking for a pleasure trip, don't consider driving from San Diego to Imperial over that road, for it is dust and chuck-holes all the way."

Cheerful.

BUY NOW, IS ADVICE OF EXPERT AFTER LONG TRIP.

CONFIDENCE in the future of the automobile industry has been restored by the announcement in Washington of definite policies relative to the production of passenger vehicles, and manufacturers are now engaged in the season's output in an optimistic frame of mind, reports Sid Black, assistant sales manager of the Chandler Motor Car Company, who has been in Los Angeles for a few days visiting Earl V. Armstrong, Inc., the Southern California Chandler distributors. Mr. Black has been in the southern States and other Pacific Coast cities and gives it as his observation that the section of the country west of the Mississippi is in a very stable condition.

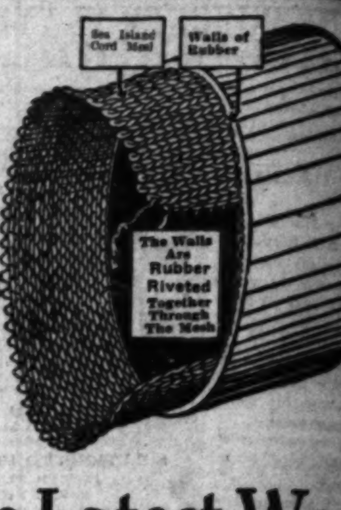
"The people on the Pacific Coast should take heed of the manufacturers' warning to buy their automobiles now," said Mr. Black. "'Buy now' has a particular significance for this coast because of the distance from the automobile factories. One of the most serious facts that the industry has to face today is the existence of a freight car shortage. It used to be that the Chandler factory could get any number of fifty-foot box cars in which to ship automobiles that might be desired, but now it is almost impossible to get one of these cars. They are all being used for shipping grain from the West to the Atlantic seaboard points. Thousands of them are now tied up in eastern freight yards due to the congestion existing there. It looks as if the government intends to take over the operation of the railroads and when it does, cars for shipping automobiles out here will be scarcer than ever. Short hauls will be given preference in order to make the cars serve the greatest number of users.

"The Chandler Motor Car Company is devoting all its resources and energies to manufacturing automobiles. We are not making any war materials although we have been offered the opportunity repeatedly. We have approximately $1,000,000 worth of materials for making Chandler cars stored in our warehouses and shall continue our production uninterruptedly. The possession of this material means a great deal to Chandler dealers throughout the country as having this stock already on hand means there is no likelihood of an early increase in the price of Chandler cars. It always has been the policy of our company to build as fine a car as possible and sell it at as low a profit as is commensurate with good judgment. We prefer to keep our prices down and nothing but the force of circumstances ever can influence us to make any advance."

THIS ARCHITECT IS PEEVED AT ROADS.

Encountering what he claims to be "the very worst roads in Christendom," Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Rhoads of Denver reached town after a motor trip between these two cities which took them through Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona.

Mr. Rhoads is architect for the International Rubber Company of Denver, manufacturers of the Gates Half-Sole tire, and is the man responsible for the exceptionally fine lot of buildings which make up this mammoth tire plant, recognized in Denver as a model factory.



Sea Island Cord Mesh
Walls of Rubber
The Walls Are Rubber Riveted Together Through The Mesh

The Latest Work of the World's Greatest Inventor of Tires

The man who has made every important improvement in pneumatic tires from the day of the bicycle up to now has given to the motor world an inner tube that solves every tire problem.

You need no longer worry about tire expense—your casings will give thousands of miles more service if you use Palmer Safety Cord Inner Tubes.

By an ingenious device Sea Island Cord is woven in such a way that it has the same sh and same elasticity as the rubber walls of the tube in wh it is vulcanized, but at the same time having the addit advantage of air strain resistance.

The ordinary inner tube holds air strain only when supported by the casing. It has n tensile strength of its own. It must rely upon the casi to withstand the air strain.

That is why casings, when cut or worn spots, or when weaknesses develop, blow out, ru ing not only casing, but the tube as well.

The Sea Island Cord mesh in the Palme Tube carries one-third the air strain and give strength to bridge over the weaknesses of the casing, mak blowouts almost impossible and assuring you great creased tire mileage.

Palmer Cord Tubes can be repaired ju as any other tube is repaired; it is light, it is circ lar cut to fit the casing, and its ends are vulcanized toge not cemented.

Kerosene Kate bucks the snows.

Here are a couple of photographs taken of a Reo six which stepped over the high Sierras, using kerosene as fuel. The photographs were taken on Ebbitts Pass, 8000 feet in the air.

AUTO ACCIDENTS ARE DECREASING.

MORE EXPERIENCE IN DRIVING AND FOOL-PROOF CARS ARE RESPONSIBLE.

Encouraging information showing that the number of automobile accidents lately have greatly decreased, was given out by J. V. Baldwin, Southern California distributor for the Mitchell car.

"Figures bear me out in this assertion that in spite of the increasing number of automobiles now in use, the accidents reported to the police of the larger cities of the country are on the decrease," declared Mr. Baldwin.

"Of course this is due to a number of causes in which more experience in driving on the part of motorists, as well as machines that respond more rapidly to the driver's wish, are included.

"The cars manufactured today are in many cases almost foolproof, and if the driver will adhere to a few simple traffic rules he need have no fear of accidents. Then, also, there is less speeding and greater conservation in driving, which also tends to eliminate danger of accidents.

"It was not long ago when the automobile accident was more or less the staple news of the day," continued Baldwin. "It crowded all other news material on Mondays, following fine Sunday weather in the country. It was the stand-by of the Coroner and it kept the repairer of telephone poles in steady jobs."

GOOD HINT ABOUT THE WATER CONTROL.

An effective, manual water control may be made by removing the rubber hose between the top of the cylinders and the radiator and replacing it with a metal one, containing a shut-off valve of the butterfly type, such as are used on carbureters. A rod from this valve is extended through the dash and enables the driver to regulate the amount of water flowing through the system and hence to control the temperature of the engine.

Quite a Real Feat.

KERENSENE FUEL WORKS IN MOUNTAIN SNOWDRIFTS.

WHILE the Allies are asking the refineries to produce a higher grade gasoline of uniform standard, the motor car industry is striving to make motor cars, trucks and tractors work efficiently on the lower grades of distillate and kerosene. That this can be done successfully was demonstrated on two strenuous trips made by J. C. Skinner of Stockton when he drove a Reo six over the summits of the high Sierras, the first time using kerosene only and later repeating the trip a few days ago on distillate.

Deep snow on the summits of Sonora and Ebbitts passes made the going difficult and the low temperatures encountered gave conclusive proof that the lower grade fuels will work under most conditions that a motorist is likely to encounter.

Circling the high Sierras by way of the Sonora and Ebbitts passes requires a trip of 358 miles and the party of Stockton men had to buck snow for thirty-five miles of the trip. This was drifted in places from three to four feet deep, but by bucking the drifts at high speed the Reo plowed through without the crew having to resort to shoveling. Sonora Pass has an elevation of 9624 feet, second only to the Tioga, which is the highest of the Sierra passes.

Ebbitts Pass is 8800 feet, but on account of deeper snow offered more resistance to the progress of the car than did the higher summit.

Grant Merrit, superintendent of the three branches of the Alpine State highway, declares that the heaviest slowfall recorded in the world falls on the summit of Ebbitts Pass. He welcomed the party at his place in the mountains and said that never before to his knowledge had a car been over the summit so late in the season as the Reo made the trip.

Since the second trip was made heavy snow has fallen and there is every probability that no other cars will be able to get through before next spring, when the snow has gone.

While the first trip was ample demonstration that the low-grade fuels, such as kerosene, are practical, Skinner's sporting instincts led him to make the second trip, which, on account of being later in the season, was more likely to be fraught with disaster if a heavy storm came up while the party was in the mountains. In that case the car would undoubtedly have peacefully reposed under a blanket of snow for the winter. A competing dealer succeeded in cutting the time of the Reo on the first trip from twenty-eight to twenty-six hours, but had the benefit of the trail that the Reo had broken. Skinner, not to be outdone, filled the fuel tank of "Kerosene Kate" once more, this time with distillate, and cut the time to twenty hours and forty minutes, and now the snow-blocked road will doubtless leave that record to stand for the rest of the winter, as a later attempt by another car has proven futile.

The grades on the two passes are very steep in many places and offer so many difficulties that few motorists care to drive over them, but efforts are being made to make many improvements and in time open up to the motoring public one of the finest beauty spots in the State. Those who have dared to make the trip that circles the high Sierra summits declare that the scenery rivals that of Yosemite or any other of our famed beauty spots in the State.

Stands Test.

ENGINE LITTLE ALTERED AFTER FORTY MONTHS.

THE Haynes light six engine, introduced more than three years ago, is continued almost without change in the 1918 models. "It is a matter of much satisfaction to the Haynes company that after forty months of terrific usage only minor betterments in this motor have been required," says Froman Speers, local Haynes representative.

The L-head type engine with 3½-inch bore and 5-inch stroke and a brake test of fifty horse power is maintained. The intake manifold is cast integral with the cylinder block, and is entirely surrounded by a water jacket. In this way the manifold is kept at a constant temperature, practically eliminating condensation. The air is heated before it enters the carburetor by a box around the exhaust manifold, and with this the heavier fuels are better vaporized.

The lubrication is of the circulation-splash system, in which oil is pumped directly to the main bearing pockets, the troughs into which the connecting rods dip, and the timing-gear case. The circulation of the oil is by means of a piston pump operated off the camshaft drive, eliminating noise.

The transmission is mounted with the motor as a unit and is unchanged with the exception of the gear ratio and case alteration for mounting the starter. The ratio on low gear has been changed to give a greater tractive effort, called for in different localities.

The clutch is the standard ten-inch Borg & Beck patent, which is of the single driven dry plate type with a non-gran bushing carried in the flywheel to line up the transmission stem gear.

TOPS ARE TURNED OUT IN ONE DAY.

Tops while you wait! The motor industry is being speeded up rather than slowed down by the war, according to the indications in Los Angeles. One instance is found in the Grand-avenue shops of George R. Bentel, where tops are being delivered for the most popular makes of cars in one day. Last week a telegraphic order from Arizona was filled in eight hours, the top being crated and on its way in that time.

"This is how we do it," Bentel explained yesterday. "We take a car and make patterns of tops to fit it. Then we can go ahead and make as many as we wish, each top having the appearance of having been 'tailored' for that particular car.

"We found it necessary to do this because of the increased number of orders which have been coming in, not only from Los Angeles, but the surrounding country as well. We have found Arizona a particularly live field for tops.

"The Arizona sun and alkali dust soon put a top out of commission. We have made up tops of special materials to resist the elements such as the motorist must combat there."

The Bentel forces also have found an increasing demand in Los Angeles for inclosed bodies. These chilly nights have brought in many orders for bodies which convert the family car into sedans.

MANY DIFFICULTIES IN CARE OF VALVES.

The principal disadvantage charged against the valve-in-head motor, especially those of the valve-cage type, is the difficulty of properly cooling the valves. This difficulty is not pronounced in the case of the inlet valves, because the incoming gas is cool and keeps the valves fairly cool, but it does mean that the exhaust valves will need frequent grinding. In many cage-type motors the cages must be watched to see that they do not turn around and thus cut off the inlet or exhaust.

HOW TO GET RID OF SPRING RATTLE.

After the car has been in continuous service for a long period, a certain amount of wear develops in the spring bolts, since the action of the springs is constant. This wear results in a most annoying rattle, which is especially noticeable in going over rough places. It may generally be removed by wrapping thin sheets of metal around the bolts and then replacing them in their mountings in spring and bracket. Of course, the best way is simply to discard a worn set of spring bolts and replace them by new ones.

GRAVITY TANK CAN GET AUTOIST'S GOAT.

In every gravity fuel system, there must be a means for air to enter the tank to replace the gasoline that has been drawn off. Usually this opening takes the form of a small hole in the filler cap. If this minute opening gets clogged with dirt, the flow of fuel will stop. Symptoms of this trouble are just the same as if the supply of gas had been exhausted, but investigation shows plenty of fuel in the tank. Removal of the obstruction starts the flow again.

WATER PROOFING TO PROTECT MAGNETOS.

In cars fitted with a magneto, it is no uncommon occurrence at this time of year to have trouble develop because of water getting into the device. Sometimes drops of water get in between the horseshoe magnets and prevent the magneto's functioning. To prevent any such trouble, not only from water but from oil or grease, it is an excellent plan to slip a leather cover over the entire machine. Some supply dealers have covers of this kind in stock, but if not any harness maker can manufacture one to order. The expense is small and the relief from this type of trouble is worth all it costs.

HILL CLIMB TO BE CALLED OFF.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Dec. 15.—In line with the decision of the A.A.A. to sanction no race events of any kind during the period of the war, San Bernardino automobile dealers today decided to abandon plans for the second annual "Rim of the World" hill climb next April. There was strong setiment throughout Southern California for holding a climb on the famous Waterman Canyon switchbacks, but the local dealers' association, under whose auspices the first event was held, adopted a resolution declaring that it was for the best interests of the industry and the government to refrain from holding any automobile contests as long as the nation is at war.

DON'T FORGET ABOUT THAT TOWING ROPE.

No one cares to think much about being towed home, but not to make a bad matter worse, some thought should be given to this subject. In attaching the rope, which is to be used in the towing, many drivers fasten it to the axle, which is wrong. The rope should be fastened to one of the front portions of the frame, so that the pull comes on the chassis. The same thing applies to the car doing the towing, except that the rope should be fastened to some part of the rear frame.

CAMP LEWIS SENDING A REAL TEAM TO PASADENA.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CAMP LEWIS, Dec. 10.—The team of warriors from American Lake which tackles the redoubtable and undefeated Marine football eleven from Mare Island, at Pasadena New Year's Day, is the greatest football machine ever seen in the Northwest. One lonely defeat, and that way early in the season when the team was without the services of several of its stars, mars the great record of this service team. Following are some facts about the coaching staff and some of the members of the squad which will go south for the big game. A few of the players are not mentioned below, as their records were not available:

Head Coach Lieut. W. L. Stanton.

Former coach of the Occidental College (California) eleven. Lieut. Stanton has done wonders with the Camp Lewis all-stars and has shown himself to be one of the Coast's brainiest grid mentors. He is a football student and knows the game from every angle.

Lieut.-Col. W. H. Jordan.

Lieut.-Col. Jordan is on the Camp Lewis eleven's coaching staff. He is well known in Coast athletics and is a former Multnomah Athletic Club (Portland) coach. He also coached the Three Hundred and Sixty-second Infantry officers of Camp Lewis this season and his team is the only machine to hold the Washington State College team, Pacific Coast conference champions, to a tie score.

Maj. J. L. Wier.

Another member of the army team's coaching staff, and a grid player with a national reputation. Maj. Wier is a former West Point lineman and several years ago was the unanimuos choice for a tackle position on the All-American team. He is regarded as an important factor in the army team's drive. He formerly coached the Sherman Indians.

Half-back "Midget" McKay.

Undoubtedly one of the greatest half-backs that ever appeared on the Pacific Coast. "Midget"—he weighs only 148 pounds—has been the shining star in the army attack all season. His long runs of fifty yards or more have become a byword of army fans this season. In the Marines-Army game in the Tacoma Stadium, November 10, witnessed by 25,000 people, McKay stood out as the star of the game. He is chain-lightning fast and runs low. McKay graduated from the University of North Dakota last June and captained the 1916 North Dakota machine. McKay is a great kicker, also, and does the team's punting.

Half-back Lowell Romney.

Running mate for the redoubtable "Midget" McKay, and another member of the army's sensational light back field. Romney weighs 146 pounds. Despite his smallness of stature he is a smasher, and critics call him one of the best end runners on the Coast. He has skirted the enemy's flanks for consistent gains. Romney starred with the Utah "U" eleven for several years and is a member of the famous athletic Romney family of Salt Lake.

Quarter-back Roy Sharp.

Sharp is well known to California football fans. He was the shining light of the University of California team for two years, and is the same diminutive chap that nearly defeated the great Dobie's University of Washington eleven single-handed in 1915. Dobie won, 13 to 7, but Sharp nearly upset his plans. Sharp weighs 138 pounds, but his dodging ability makes him the hardest man on the team to "spill." He is a great open-field runner.

Full-back "Lanky" Craig.

The giant of the team, standing 6 feet 4 inches in his stocking feet. Craig weighs 181 pounds, but, despite his slender stature, looks good at full. "Lanky" played with the University of Wyoming for four years and was an all-star man.

Lieut. "Bill" Russell.

Captain of the army all-stars, this stocky lineman has proved himself a veritable stonewall on the defense. He is a Californian and played with the U. of C. team for two years. Russell weighs 188 pounds and tackles everything coming his way. One of the few officer-regulars on the team.

Fullback "Monty" Montieth:

Monteith alternates with Craig at full-back. He is a University of Oregon lad and the coming Tournament of Roses game will be his second appearance in the annual New Year's classic. Last year he played halfback for Hugo Bezdek's great Oregon machine that trimmed Pennsy 14 to 0 on New Year's Day. He punted for the Oregon team. Monteith weighs 175 pounds.

William "Chubby" Snyder, guard:

Another member of the Oregon "U" team that helped Bezdek trim the Pennsy eleven at the last Tournament of Roses battle. Snyder is one of the best linemen on the Coast. He weighs 196 pounds.

Kenneth Bartlett, tackle:

Regarded as the most consistent lineman on the all-stars team. Bartlett is also going to play his second Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena. With Snyder, Monteith and several others, he was a star on the Oregon "U" team last year. Bartlett weighs 175 pounds and is a world beater on defense.

"Jumbo" Hunter, tackle:

Hunter is a veteran of the Washington State College team and for two years was an all-Northwest conference lineman. He is only a sub on the great division team, however. Hunter weighs 200 pounds.

Lieut. Dixon Kapple, back field:

Kapple has proved a valuable man at both quarter-back and half-back and will no doubt get in the Pasadena battle. He starred with the Utah Aggies last year and was an all-Rocky Mountain back field man.

"Big Sam" Cook, tackle:

Cook holds down the tackle opposite Bartlett. He is one of the best-known linemen on the Coast. Playing with the Oregon "U" team for two years, he was picked as an all-Coast tackle. In his last year of scholastic work he shifted to the University of Montana and starred there, again winning an all-star berth. He is a bearcat at roaming defense and his 197 pounds of weight "busts 'em" in great shape.

Lieut. "Tex" Turner, end:

Turner has played a good end for the division team. He weighs 165 pounds and is a former U. of Texas player. He has smashed the opposing interference in great shape.

Lieut. E. H. Lynch, tackle:

One of the army's 210-pound tackles. While not a regular, he has done good work for the army team. He is a hard man to get by.

RED SOX ENLIST.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

BOSTON, Dec. 15.—Two more members of the Boston American League baseball team enlisted in the navy, it was learned today. Pitchers Pennock and Bader signed as yeoman, making eleven members of the team to enter war service.

From Camp Lewis.

Here are two star backs and two of the coaches of the army gridiron team which plays the Marines at Pasadena New Year's Day. Coach Stanton, below, formerly ordered the rah-rahs of Pomona and Occidental around the lot, while Maj. Wier was once coach of the Sherman Indians.

DROP WRESTLING AS COLLEGE SPORT.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SPOKANE (Wash.) Dec. 15.—The Northwest college conference today officially dropped wrestling as a college sport for the duration of the war and curtailed activities in baseball, basketball and track and field events. It was announced that tennis will be confined to a single meet between teams representing Idaho, Washington State College, Whitman and Montana.

GAS MAGNATE IS OUT AFTER QUAIL.

Champ S. Vance, second vice-president of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation, is hunting quail on the O'Neal Rancho today. He hopes to get the limit and his friends say the limit for Champ is three quail. He is armed with enough ammunition to sink a submarine and his gun is near the gauge used by the Puritans to kill wild turkey.

"Get me the biggest gun you can find and fifty rounds of ammunition," was the order Champ gave his chauffeur before starting on his hunting trip. The auto driver purchased fifty boxes, instead of fifty rounds, of No. 4 shells and friends of the well-known gas chief are afraid the quail, if he gets any, will be all shot to pieces.

A Question of SERVICE

We don't ever want a customer to say that we did a job cheaply—but poorly. We'd rather have him say that we charged a fair price—and delivered real workmanship. That's why we successively outgrow every plant we occupy—and why we now use two large buildings—one for batteries and one for starter, magneto and generator work.

REO

Low First Cost—
Lower Upkeep

WE REO FOLK seldom talk price, save incidentally.

FOR THE REO PRODUCT is not designed nor made on a price basis.

WE NEVER HAVE succumbed to the temptation to meet a price competition or to build a car to come within a pre-determined figure.

OUR AMBITION has been to build the best—not the most—then set the lowest price possible, based on actual cost plus a small margin of profit.

NEVERTHELESS, it is a fact that this 1500 pound Reo is one of the lowest priced, high speed trucks on the market. Quality and equipment considered, it is the cheapest.

IN FACT YOU'LL HAVE TO PAY on the average, $400 more, to obtain a ¾-ton, manufactured, truck of any reputation or that presumes to compete with the Reo.

WE ARE ENABLED to produce this quality truck and to sell it lower, because of the fact that it has been standard for longer; because of our superior manufacturing facilities; and finally because of our low selling cost.

THE OVER DEMAND for Reos that always has existed, results in a selling cost so low, it is the marvel and the envy of the industry.

AND THIS TRUCK IS a manufactured product—not assembled from unrelated units.

IT IS REO MADE THROUGHOUT, which is to say, it represents the best in materials and workmanship.

50 PER CENT OVERSIZE in all vital parts—the Reo standard factor of safety—in axles, gears, driving shafts, bearings, frame, etc., is your guarantee of stability and dependability.

AND, FIRST COST ASIDE, we affirm there is no other ¾-ton truck on earth that can show such low upkeep and operation cost year in and year out.

READ THAT AGAIN—it's a broad statement. Yet we believe it to be literally true else we would not sign the Reo name to it.

FACTORY CAPACITY is the only limit to the output of the Reo models—for the demand is, and always has been, vastly greater than the supply.

BUT OUR PLAN has been to make, not the most, but the best, and so we never make any more than we can make and make every Reo good.

SO THE ONLY WAY to be sure of a ¾-ton Reo for reasonably early delivery, of present quality and at present price, is to place your order now. Delay is dangerous.

The Al G. Faulkner Company
Announces the Arrival of the New Series

MARMON 34

THESE new models will constitute the attractions at the principal automobile shows to be held during the coming winter.

In displaying them at this time in our local showrooms, we are presenting the motoring public of Los Angeles and environs with an opportunity of exceptional interest.

The new series Marmon 34 is distinguishable from the old largely on account of the slanting windshield, the deeper sides and the wider seats.

In addition, there are numerous refinements which also enhance the luxury, comfort and convenience.

You are cordially invited to call and inspect these models at your leisure, whether contemplating the purchase of an automobile or not.
